ITALIANS INVADE EGYPT; TAKE 2 TOWNS IN DRIVE

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 14 (AP).—Italy's sand whipped legions swept across the Egyptian frontier tonight, tanks and armored cars rolling into the ruined villages of Sollum and Musaid under heavy attacks by the British air force.

British armored cars also harassed Italian Marshal Rudolfo Graziani's troops in what may be the initial thrust of a fullfledged drive.

Altho the Italians forced a wedge 10 miles deep, a British communique declared the "situation is well in hand."

How many troops the Italians were putting into their advance was not known, but they were believed to be in considerable numbers.

Call It an "Advance."

British headquarters described the Italian move as an "advance" rather than at "attack," emphasizing that the British never had made any pretense of trying to hold Sollum, a port, or Musaid which, they said, were only much bombed villages used chiefly as centers for British patrols harassing the Italians.

The British, on the alert for the start of a real mechanized offensive against Egypt, the Sudan, or both, said the Italians were using airplanes, armored cars and trucks to transport their troops and were continuing their thrust beyond the two occupied villages.

A British statement said "there is no anchorage at Sollum or other facilities, and it has not been visited by any war vessel for many years."

Its occupation was regarded as unlikely to facilitate any Italian advance along the coast, since the route suitable for military transport has been destroyed. Musaid, a customs post a few miles from the sea, was described as of even less importance than Sollum.

Gain Only Wasteland.

Thus, according to the British, the Italian advance so far has netted only these villages and a strip of desert wasteland.

Graziani appeared to be concentrating much of the movement south of Bardia, but its significance still was obscure since, so far, there was no use of heavy artillery nor had the bulk of his forces been thrown into the advance as evidence that he actually had launched an offensive.

The situation in the southeast corner of Libya, where the Italians have concentrated large forces ostensibly for a drive into the Sudan, and also at Kassala, where reënforcements have arrived from Eritrea, were described as quiet.

The possibility was not overlooked, however, that thrusts at these two points might start if Graziani moves with full force into Egypt from the Bardia sector.

Attack Italian Base.

In a communique tonight, the British royal air force reported that in a series of attacks on eastern Libya yesterday, the Bomba seaplane base was attacked. "Bombs fell on the seaplane anchorage and a large fire broke out on the jetty," it said, and added:

"Near Sidi Omar fires were started among motor transport concentrations. Motor transport parks in the same area were bombed on two previous days and fires could be seen 30 miles away. All our aircraft returned safely."

Italians Report Activity.

ROME, Sept. 14 (AP).—Intensified "exploratory" activity by Italian troops massed along the desert frontier between Libya and Egypt, was reported today by the high command.

Details of the Italian operations were withheld, and the communique failed to mention air bombardments of British positions on the Egyptian coast for the first time in a week.

45,200 Aliens in Chicago Fingerprinted in 15 Days

Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen announced yesterday that 45,200 aliens in the Chicago area have registered and been fingerprinted in the 15 days since the alien registration requirement went into effect. Kruetgen said the total was less than a third of the 180,000 aliens estimated to live in the area on the basis of 1930 census figures. The deadline for registration is Dec. 26.

British Planes and Guns Beat Back 4 Attacks

LONDON, Sept. 15, Sunday (AP).—Four German air raids on London by the dark of night were beaten back last night and early today, three of them by British fighter planes alone and the fourth by a thundering antiaircraft barrage.

Scattered bombs fell, but the clear signal came at 3:27 a. m., when the noise of plane motors died away after a 2 hour and 11 minute alarm. It was the seventh raid since yesterday morning.

The guns blazed away for 20 minutes before this seventh alarm was sounded.

Heavy barrages from the Thames estuary direction and from north London indicated the Germans attempted to break into the heart of London from two directions.

Creeps Toward North.

The gunfire along the Thames crept toward the north, apparently tracing the course of the raiders. It grew heavier as the drone of plane engines increased by the minute.

Guns in the southwest burst into action, and shell fragments fell on roofs and streets. When the clouds rolled back the main London network of guns opened up. Buildings shook with the intensity of the barrage as the planes passed over, but it was the lightest attack in more than a week.

The successive night alarms, with their prolonged clear intervals, constituted a departure from the week long German tactics of all night raids.

The British defense by fighter planes alone against the first three German after dark raids was without precedent since the start Sept. 7 of the almost continuous German air offensive.

Clouds Help Raiders.

The air ministry news service said that despite help of the clouds "only a few bombers managed to penetrate to central London" in Saturday's raids.

The authoritative British Press association estimated that 300 bombers had been thrown back by early evening in a "huge battle" over the southeast coast which watchers described as "the biggest ever."

The raiders' first evening appearance here—after three forays made by late afternoon—was at 6:17 p. m., their second at 7:47 p. m., their third at 9:36 p. m. This third alarm was the shortest of all three, lasting only 17 minutes.

By the habit of a week that had seemed endless, London's people had gone to their accustomed air raid shelters, and the unexpected freedom astonished them.

Church Crypt Struck.

All this time, the royal air force had been defending the metropolis alone, and only an occasional searchlight beam crept about in the sky. The antiaircraft gunners, who night after night had been throwing steel all about the horizon, idled thru it all, only to spring into action during the attack early this morning.

In the fourth raid—the first evening alarm—one bomb ploughed into the crypt of a Roman Catholic church in a London district and killed and injured an unannounced number sheltered there. The bomb fell just outside the church and went straight thru the ground into the crypt. The church was not damaged—even the windows were not broken.

German raiders appeared elsewhere over England, attacking Brighton and Eastbourne and killing an undetermined number of persons in each city. High explosive bombs were dropped in a town in northwest England, causing severe damage in and

SENATE TOLD OF DRIVE TO SEND NEW ARMY BOMBERS TO ENGLAND

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—The senate was told today that a campaign was under way to transfer to Great Britain 25 of the army's biggest bombers.

Senator Rush D. Holt [D., W. Va.] joined Senator Bennett C. Clark [D., Mo.] in criticism of President Roosevelt's trade of 50 destroyers for British naval bases in the western hemisphere with an assertion that a committee headed by William Allen White, Emporia, Kas., editor, was seeking to obtain the transfer of bombing planes.

"You mean 'The Committee to Get Us into War,' don't you?" Clark inquired.

"Yes," Holt replied.

Clark went on to charge that advocates of aid to Great Britain also had in mind the eventual transfer of tanks and other war supplies. In the logical course of things, he said, the next move would be to send battleships and then conscripted troops to aid Great Britain.

The horses stayed at home. The plow maids came in dainty gowns as spectators. A carpenter won the championship from all the farmers.

Even so, the 63d annual Wheatland plowing match yesterday was the greatest one in history. A record crowd of 15,000 spectators attended.

If you've never attended a plowing match, you should know that plowing matches are festive reunions for families and communities and homecomings for farm families that have gone away to make their fortune in the cities.

Time Changes Contests.

In some of the contests of the old days, the plowmen drove horses and walked behind their plows in top hats and frock coats. Yesterday they wore overalls and drove great tractors. Not since 1934 has there been a horse drawn plow in the contest. Horses are welcome, but the farmers agree that horses can't plow with the speed and precision of the mechanical monsters.

The contest yesterday was held on the farm of Mrs. Tom King, three miles north of Plainfield, in Will county.

2 Tie for Second Place.

Carl Shoger and George Susemiehl of Plainfield tied for second place. Graeme Stewart of Oswego was third.

Judging was on this basis: a maximum of 25 points for the opening furrow, 25 points more for uniformity of furrows, 25 points for straightness, 15 for evenness, and 10 for neatness.

Keith Patterson, 11 years old, of Plainfield won the trophy for boys under 14. Bruce Fraley of Naperville was crowned champion of the boys of 15 to 18. Clarence Shoger of Plainfield won the championship in the contest for young men of 19 to 21.

Girls usually enter the boys' contests and sometimes carry off prizes, but the girls were content yesterday to look pretty.

STRICKEN WHILE IN BALTIMORE TO GIVE SPEECH

Hemorrhage Fatal to Alabaman.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15 Sunday (AP).—William B. Bankhead, 66 years old, of Alabama, speaker of the house of representatives, died at 1:35 a. m. today [Chicago time] in Naval hospital.

W. B. Bankhead.

Death was due to a ruptured artery in the abdomen. He had been unconscious for four hours before the end came.

The Democratic leader was stricken last Tesday [Sept. 10] in Baltimore where he had gone to deliver a political address. At that time Dr. George Calver, capitol physician, announced that the speaker had fainted as the result of a painful attack of sciatica.

Dr. Calver explained that he had withheld the true nature of the illness because Bankhead was able to converse with others and read newspapers and he did not wish him to learn how seriously ill he was.

Blood Vessel Ruptured.

Dr. Calver issued the following statement on the speaker's death:

"Speaker Bankhead died of a hemmorhage as a result of a ruptured blood vessel in the abdomen at 1:35 a. m."

STORY OF BANKHEAD'S LIFE

Speaker William Brockman Bankhead was born April 12, 1874, on a plantation near Moscow, Ala., the son of a confederate army captain who served in congress after the war. It was the father's advice to his son to "stay on the floor of the house and learn the rules" that led the late speaker to become an expert parliamentarian and eventually rise to the high office he held.

Bankhead was educated in the log school houses of his native state, at the University of Alabama, and at Georgetown university's law school. After earning his degree, however, he almost deserted the law for a theatrical career, but changed his mind and devoted his talents to the development of oratory. In later years his daughter, Tallulah, made the family name famous on the stage.

Law Partner of Brother.

In the late 1890s, Bankhead formed a law partnership with his brother, John H.—who later was elected to the United States senate—and became active in Democratic politics. He represented Madison county in the Alabama legislature and was city attorney of Huntsville for four years.

From 1910 to 1914 Bankhead was circuit solicitor for the 14th Alabama judicial district. He then ran for congress but was defeated. In 1916 he ran again after a new district had been created and was elected.

He gained his greatest congressional power during the first Roosevelt administration, engineering passage of the Bankhead cotton control act, which was an integral part of the New Deal farm program. He was the author of legislation for the rehabilitation of war veterans.

Named Speaker in 1936.

He was elected speaker in 1936 because he was considered by his colleagues as the logical man to replace Joseph W. Byrnes of Tennessee, who died just before the adjournment of the session. The unanimous vote which put Bankhead into the chair made congressional history.

The Alabaman was keynoter of the Democratic national convention in Chicago which nominated President Roosevelt for a third term. He also was the favorite son of his own state and at the start of the session was backed by a solid delegation. During the voting for a Vice Presidential candidate, Bankhead for a time ran a close race with Henry A. Wallace, who eventually received the nomination.

He was chosen to formally notify Wallace of his nomination, but due to the press of other duties, appointed a substitute.

Bankhead was twice married, the first time in 1900 to Ada Eugenia Siege of Memphis, Tenn., who died a few years later, leaving two infant daughters, Tallulah and Eugenia. The second marriage was in 1915 to Florence McGuire of Jasper, Ala.

Roosevelt Gets Draft Bill; May Issue Oct. 8 Call

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—The first peacetime conscription bill in American history was sent to the White House today. It is expected to be signed by President Roosevelt on Monday.

The measure represents a compromise between two versions of methods for drafting the man power of the nation which had been worked out by the house and senate.

In its final form, requiring the registration of all male citizens between the ages of 21 and 35, inclusive, the act was approved in the senate by a vote of 47 to 25.

Shortly thereafter the house completed legislative action on the bill by approving it, 232 to 124, with two members voting "present."

Asks Nearly 2 Billion Dollars.

The President immediately asked congress for 1 billion 940 million dollars in cash and contract authorizations to finance the vast program of military training and to properly house the conscripted men. Congress is expected to approve this latest defense appropriation bill by the end of next week.

The date for registering the 16,500,000 men affected by the law will be fixed after funds for the program have been appropriated by congress. It will be on a Tuesday, approximately 15 days after congressional action, and Oct. 8 was seen as the probable date.

Actual induction into service of the first 400,000 men to be called will not take place until at least 30 days after the registration day. The first draftees, therefore, will not go to camp until after the Presidential election on Nov. 5.

Present plans call for the drafting of the first 400,000 men in groups of 75,000 to 100,000. The entire 400,000, however, will be in military service before Jan. 1, 1941, if the contemplated schedule holds up.

Of the estimated 16,500,000 men who will register at polling places in October, about 5,000,000 will be eligible for service, according to Col. Lewis B. Hershey, executive secretary of the joint army and navy selective service committee, which will supervise the draft.

The registration will be completed in one day. Each man will give his name, address, age, the name of his employer, place and date of birth, nationality, and state whether he is citizen or alien. He will be given a registration certificate to show that he has complied with the law.

In a few days he will receive a lengthy and detailed questionnaire which he will be required to fill in. On the basis of these questionnaires, draft boards will determine which men shall be placed in the first class subject to the draft. Single men between the ages of 21 and 25 without dependents will be the first to go. The order in which they go will be determined by drawings.

1 Chance in 12 of Call.

Col. Hershey said each registrant will have a 1 in 12 chance of being called in the first draft of 400,000 and a one in six chance of being summoned when the second call for 400,000 comes next April 1.

Final legislative action on the bill was completed quickly and with a minimum of debate. Not a word of discussion was raised in the senate, which last night had voted, 37 to 33, in a surprise upset, to send the bill back to the senate-house conference committee to revise again the "industry draft," which some senators assailed as unenforceable.

The conferees decided to accept the house version of the "industry draft" proviso, as instructed by a senate majority. This provides for taking

WILLKIE DRIVE ENDANGERED BY AILING THROAT

Speeches Halted Temporarily.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Aboard Willkie Special Train, Sept. 14.—Wendell Willkie's western campaign tour, which started vigorously in Chicago yesterday, was halted at least temporarily so far as speaking was concerned, at Rock Island, Ill., tonight.

Willkie found himself unable to use his voice, which had been growing progressively worse all day, and was unable to address a crowd of 10,000 gathered at a Rock Island stadium.

"The spirit is completely willing but the voice is weak," he said with difficulty.

Examined by Doctor.

Dr. Francis Lederer of Chicago, who was brought to the Willkie train by airplane when Willkie's voice began to fail this morning, said tonight that Willkie could not use his voice any more until Monday at the earliest. The doctor added that it might not be possible for Willkie to deliver his Coffeyville, Kas., address on Monday, which had been expected to be one of the most important of the campaign. With complete rest between now and Monday afternoon, however, Dr. Lederer said he might be able to speak.

Dr. Lederer, professor of laryngology at the University of Illinois college of medicine, was accompanied by Dr. George Kvidera, flight surgeon of United Air Lines. Both examined Willkie. Dr. Kdivera returned to Chicago, while Dr. Lederer will accompany the nominee to Kansas City, Mo., where a day of rest is scheduled for tomorrow.

"Sit Down, Champ."

The Rock Island and Davenport meetings, both attended by crowds of 10,000 or more, were carried on by Dwight H. Green and Wayland Brooks. Brooks presented Willkie to the audiences and then said:

"Sit down, champ. We will carry on for you."

Brooks asked the people to demonstrate that they would go out and work for Willkie and they responded with a hearty cheer.

The throat ailment, which was diagnosed as a slight laryngitis caused by frequent outdoor speaking, interferred not only with the Rock Island and Davenport appearances but also with scheduled speeches during the evening at Muscatine, Washington, and Fairfield, Ia.

Several Earlier Addresses.

Before his voice left him, however, and in spite of the effort it caused, Willkie made half a dozen speeches of 10 minutes or more in which he flayed President Roosevelt as one who had "appeased the Democratic world to destruction." He charged that Roosevelt had promoted the Munich pact thru Mussolini and Hitler and that this had wrecked Europe.

Willkie spoke today with unusual earnestness and fire, exhorting the people of Illinois to support the American way of life against the threat of the New Deal.

All along northern Illinois the same widespread interest he aroused in Chicago was shown. There were thousands at every station at which the train stopped. Both Green and Brooks said it was one of the greatest political demonstrations in the history of the state.

Willkie assailed President Roosevelt as the man who might lead this country into war and promised the mothers and fathers of Illinois at every stop that he would never send their boys to fight in Europe. He declared that Mr. Roosevelt was the most incompetent man that he knew of in international affairs.

New Debate Challenge.

At Galesburg, Ill., site of one of the Lincoln-Douglas debates, Willkie renewed his challenge to the President to meet him on the platforms of this country and debate the issues of the day. He also drew a comparison between the character of Lincoln and that of Roosevelt.

"Lincoln," Willkie said, "symbolizes integrity; the simple, direct, ordinary, truth-telling man. Where leaders begin to misrepresent, democracies begin to disappear.

"Would Lincoln have said that he was drafted at Chicago? Would he have permitted the sewer commissioner to sit in the cellar and create an artificial noise and pretend he was drafted?

"I have asked the President to debate with me. He said he never commented on pending legislation, when he has done so 17 times this year. Would Lincoln have said such a thing? The President said that he wanted to change the Supreme court because the members were too old. Would Lincoln have said that? Only recently Mr. Roosevelt appointed a secretary of war 72 years old."

He Pledges Truth.

"I pledge in this city of the sacred debate that if I am elected I will always tell the truth."

At Peoria, Ill., the Willkie train was met by a crowd that filled both sides of the tracks for blocks. There was a half hour program scheduled here, and both Green and Brooks spoke in order to relieve the candidate of a long address. Willkie was given a big cheer as he came to the platform. He could hardly bring out his words, but he persisted in the effort.

Willkie said he had hoped to refrain from discussing foreign affairs, but that the Vice Presidential candidate, Henry A. Wallace, had been traveling in Illinois calling the Republican party the party of appeasement, and calling the President the indispensable man.

Willkie was cheered many times as he attacked this claim.

Discusses 1933 Parley.

President Roosevelt, he said, had by his actions in the 1933 economic conferences led to the breakdown of Europe.

"The nations were beginning to recover," Willkie said. "Militarism and dictatorship always follow economic bankruptcy. If the conference had been permitted to continue they would have recovered, and the United States, too. But Roosevelt demanded the economic conference, and since then has contributed to the destruction of the American way. Perhaps industrial stagnation was necessary to his social reforms. In 1936, when Europe was building ships and guns, Roosevelt said 'I'll pack the Supreme court.'

"Here was the world praying for the leadership of America, and Roosevelt began to pack the Supreme court. He tore this great united people to pieces when he might have exercised great leadership. He set the example for Blum, and he took France to its wreckage. If he had given Europe strength, this never would have happened.

"Was he the great appeaser at Munich? Was he standing for democracy in putting that pact thru? It is no good to have noble motives if you don't know what you are talking about. He has appeased the democratic world to destruction. I say to you deliberately that, of all the men I know, he is the least qualified to lead this great democracy in international affairs."

"I can't tell you how much I appreciate the enormous reception given to me by the people of Chicago yesterday. Now watch the New Dealers, watch the Scott Lucases [Scott Lucas is a New Deal senator from Illinois] and men like that try to discount it. They looked at the millions cheering, and now they'll begin to snipe. But they never can discount those cheering throngs that came out to cheer the principles that I represent in this campaign for the restoration of American democratic life and the preservation of liberty thruout the world.

"Now watch them carp; watch their picayunish remarks. They are desperate. They will even try to defend Kelly and Nash, and anybody who will do that is very desperate, very desperate. Watch them speak up and say that the people of Chicago were insulted because I insulted Kelly-Nash.

"Let me tell you I am going to insult Kelly-Nash from now until election day, and after I am elected, I am going to do more to them than merely insult them. When I am elected, I will actually take Kelly-Nash to the nether regions. It won't be merely in words, it will be in action.

Includes Hague and Flynn.

"Kelly-Nash, the Hague machine in New Jersey, Ed Flynn in the Bronx with billions of government money, are seeking to control the American people in this election and misrepresent them, and I say to you people of Chicago—join with me in sending the Kelly-Nash machine where it ought to go, but don't be misled by the Scott Lucases and their paid hirelings.

"And if you elect me, I'll help you get rid of them. I'll not alone help you get rid of them, but we WILL get rid of them. Those boys are beginning to get a little worried now. There will be no income tax compromise then. Fellows who go along year after year dodging their income taxes won't be able to come down to Washington and make deals.

"Let me thank you again. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for this overwhelming, this warm, this spontaneous reception given to me by the people of Chicago. It would warm the cockles of any man's heart. It doubly warms my heart, who came from the midwest. I want to put you back into jobs, stable jobs, good jobs, jobs with rising standards of living.

"Help me in this crusade. Please, you people of Chicago, come let us make it a great national crusade.

"Thank you and God bless you."

INDIANA BOSSES "SAVE" MACHINE FROM HATCH ACT

French Lick, Ind., Sept. 14 [Special].—The Indiana Democratic committee today "rescued" for its party the political support of hundreds of state pay rollers whose jobs had been threatened by the Hatch clean politics act.

Meeting here in executive session, the committee decided that the entire maintenance force of the state highway department—the backbone of the statehouse political machine—could continue political activities without fear from the federal law.

The personnel of the maintenance department numbers as high as 5,000 during the summer months. Included among its employés are hundreds of Democratic precinct committee men, a county chairman, a district chairman, and numerous other minor party leaders.

Many of the active party workers in the department had expected dismissal.

TWO ROB LIQUOR DRIVERS.

Two colored robbers, one of them armed, took $91 yesterday from Charles Herler, 3225 Cermak road, driver for a liquor wholesaler at 2241 South Pulaski road. They entered the truck when Herler stopped at 1018 North Clark street, and made him drive to 939 North La Salle street, where they took the money and fled.

MISSOURI VOTE FOR PRESIDENT LOOKS DOUBTFUL

But G. O. P. Leaders Hope to Capture State.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 14.—Missouri looks like a doubtful state in the Presidential election at this writing, with a slight advantage resting with the Democrats. The battle now getting under way in the state bids fair to be one of the most spectacular in the country.

Missouri is a border state that customarily goes Democratic. It went Republican in the Theodore Roosevelt landslide of 1904, and repeated in 1908, 1920, 1924, and 1928. Mr. Roosevelt carried the state by 460,000 in 1932 and 400,000 in 1936.

No such thumping pluralities are looked for by the Democratic leaders this time. They are reduced to calculations in terms of tens, instead of hundreds, of thousands.

Republicans Are Encouraged.

The Gallup poll for Missouri gives Roosevelt about 51 per cent of the vote, Willkie about 49 per cent. Several other straw votes indicate a popular preference for the President by a similar slender margin.

Republican leaders pronounce the outlook the most encouraging for a decade. They are confident that Mr. Willkie's forthcoming speeches and personal appearances in the west, together with organization work, will overcome the Roosevelt advantage by election day.

The tremendous slump in the popularity of the President since 1936 is variously ascribed to his violation of the antithird term precedent, fears that he is projecting the country into the European war, and apprehensions of the effect of continued deficits, together with confidence inspired by Mr. Willkie that he could revive private enterprise and employment

Labor for Roosevelt.

Labor is preponderantly with Mr. Roosevelt, business with Willkie. The farmers are split. There is a noticeable backsliding from devotion to the New Deal in the rural regions, reflected in the rural press and agricultural publications. Many farmers are alarmed by the fiscal excesses of the Roosevelt régime. Many are returning to the Republican fold

The most important factor in Mr. Roosevelt's advantage in Missouri is the strength and devotion in two of the most corrupt political machines in the country—the Pendergast machine in Kansas City and the Dickmann-Hannagan machine in St. Louis. As vote stealers these two outfits are unexcelled by the other great Democratic machines operated by Kelly and Nash in Chicago and Tammany in New York.

Chief confidence of the Democratic leaders that Roosevelt will carry Missouri is based on the expectation that the Kansas City and St. Louis Democratic machines will turn in pluralities for those cities which combined will overcome the Willkie vote in the remainder of the state.

Both machines have been hard hit by the revelations of their corruption, but both are still going strong. Old Tom Pendergast, Democratic boss of Missouri for many years, recently emerged from federal prison on probation after serving 15 months for income tax evasion aggregating $700,000, including penalties.

As a result of the trials for vote stealing in elections 300 members of the Pendergast machine were sent to prison.

60,000 Votes Cast by Repeaters.

It was shown that of the 90,000 Democratic plurality in Kansas City 60,000 votes were cast by repeaters in the names of fictitious voters registered from fake residence addresses.

Altogether the voting lists in the state have been purged of the names of more than 100,000 fictitious registrants that formerly helped to swell Democratic majorities. There is some hope in that circumstance, say the Republican leaders.

The Pendergast organization was severly jolted by its misfortunes in the courts and is split into 4 or 5 factions, which, however, are all virtually united in support of Mr. Roosevelt under the leadership of Boss Tom's nephew, James Pendergast. Boss Tom is somewhere in the background, forbidden by the court to engage in or even to talk politics.

The Kansas City machine also has a special incentive to carry the state for Roosevelt, for it succeeded in renominating its protégé, United States Senator Harry S. Truman. It was Boss Tom who sent Harry Truman to Washington in 1934.

Truman was opposed for the nomination by Gov. Lloyd Stark and United States Attorney Maurice Milligan, each of whom claimed major credit for the downfall of Boss Tom. Milligan ran third.

The Republican candidate for senator is Manvel H. [Cap] Davis, Kansas City lawyer of ability, who was a world war flyer. In addition to the Republicans he will have the support of many antimachine Democrats.

ANNENBERG AID FILES APPEAL IN TAX CONVICTION

One of five associates of M. L. Annenberg, who were convicted Thursday in Federal district court of conspiracy to evade payment of income taxes by the Consensus Publishing company, filed a $10,000 appeal bond yesterday before Federal Judge William H. Holly. He is William Molasky, president of the company.

The other defendants, James Ragen Sr., head of Annenberg's defunct Nationwide News service, James Ragen Jr., Arnold Kruse Jr., and Arnold Kruse Sr., secretary of the Consensus company, are expected to file their bonds tomorrow. They were sentenced by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

The younger Kruse and the younger Ragen each were fined $10,000. The elder Kruse was sentenced to 18 months and a $10,000 fine. The two other defendants were sentenced to a year and a day and fined $10,000 each. Fines totaling $45,000 were imposed against the company.

WOMAN AND 3 MEN ROB JEWELER.

An attractive young woman spent 15 minutes yesterday looking at wrist watches in the store of Frank Lund, 2314 Devon avenue. Then three men, one with a revolver, joined the woman, beat Lund to the floor, and helped her take $200 and jewelry worth $175.

DEMPSEY LEADS IN NEW MEXICO SENATE PRIMARY

Seeks to Defeat Chavez of WPA Scandal Fame.

Albukuerque, N. M., Sept. 14 [Special].—Scattered returns form primary voting in New Mexico tonight gave Representative J. J. Dempsey a a lead over Senator Dennis Chavez in their contest for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Returns from 98 of 914 precincts gave:

For senator—Democrat: Dempsey, 8,069; Chavez, 5,734.

For governor—Republican: Maurice Miera [31 precincts], 502; Seth Alston, 258.

Jimmy Talks for Dempsey.

Altho asserting he was merely visiting Dempsey on business, young Roosevelt emphasized in his talk that the representative was a "friend of my fathers for 38 years."

Dempsey, the house sponsor of the Hatch clean politics act, charged that "political bosses" were violating the law in New Mexico. As a result of his charges, agents of the federal bureau of investigation were ordered here to conduct an inquiry.

Senator Chavez, the boss of the Democratic party in New Mexico, was the principal in a WPA scandal that rocked his state two years ago. Altho the senator was not among the 72 persons indicted for graft and corruption, four of his relatives were and in testimony at subsequent trials he was accused of being the leading light in using the WPA for political purposes.

Organized for Chavez.

Government witnesses said WPA employés were organized for the purpose of capturing the Albuquerque city hall for Chavez and that the election campaign was financed by "cash on the barrel head" demanded from WPA workers by the Chavez machine.

Chavez, now 51 years old, was a United States senate clerk while he attended Georgetown university in 1918-'19. He later was elected to the New Mexico legislature, sent to the national house in 1930 and reëlected in 1932. In unprecedented scorn, six senators walked off the senate floor in 1935 when Chavez was sworn in as the successor to Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican, who was killed in an airplane crash.

The senator's supporters stressed during the campaign that he was born in New Mexico while Dempsey had come here from New York City only two years before he was elected a representative in 1934.

Representative Dempsey, a member of the house committee investigating un-American activities, was named by the committee chairman, Representa- Martin Dies [D., Tex.] last February as a subcommittee of one to conduct an inquiry of charges and information that communist and Nazi agents from Mexico are active in the United States.

The group met at a tea in the La Salle hotel sponsored by the veterans' division of the Cook county Republican central committee.

"I'm looking for a man to serve in peace, but I have confidence in a man who knows how to fight," Colmery said of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee and a war veteran. "I'm looking for a man who has the courage to fight to save the integrity of his home."

IT'S WILLKIE DAY IN COFFEYVILLE AGAIN TOMORROW

Ex-Teacher Returning After 25 Years.

BY HAROLD MURRAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Coffeyville, Kas., Sept. 14 [Special]. —Wendell L. Willkie, whom this industrial and one time frontier town remembers as the tall, gangling, energetic young Hoosier schoolmaster who taught history in the local high school 25 years ago, will return here Monday to make his first formal campaign address since the start of his western tour.

Reception officials, headed by Dallas W. Knapp, former state senator, said they have made preparations to handle a crowd of 50,000 which is expected to hear the Republican Presidential nominee. Special trains will bring delegations from Kansas City, Topeka, Wichita, Fayetteville and other cities in surrounding states. Willkie's speech will be broadcast.

Town Turns Festive.

This town of 15,259 population, where the notorious Dalton gang of bank robbers was wiped out in a gun battle with the townfolk, has a festive appearance. There are Willkie pictures in store windows and members of the young Republican club have distributed Willkie pictures to houseowners to be put in home windows. "Welcome Willkie" banners are strung across the streets. Flags and red, white and blue bunting decorate the street posts.

The Willkie 12 car special train will be met by a reception committee when it pulls into the Coffeyville station. Women of the town will present Mrs. Willkie with a bouquet. A delegation of Osage Indians from Pawhuska, Okla., will be on hand to give her an Indian blanket. Coffeyville was once Osage Indian territory.

Willkie and his party will leave the train and drive to the 40 acre ball park at the west side of the city. Here he will give his address. The field, formerly without a name, will now be known as Willkie park.

Walter Johnson on Hand.

Walter Johnson, former great baseball pitcher whom Coffeyville regards as her famous son, will introduce Willkie. Miss Louise Florea, radio singer, at whose parents' home Willkie lived while teaching here, will sing.

Coffeyville remembers Willkie as Lewis W. Willkie. [Willkie has since explained his name became transposed thru an error by an army recruiting sergeant when he enlisted in the army in 1917.] His students called him Mr. Willkie and to the townfolk he was Professor Willkie or "L. W."

To Coffeyville in 1913.

Former Senator Knapp recalled Willkie as a tall, thin young man with the same unruly hair when he came to Coffeyville in 1913 after graduating from the University of Indiana. Willkie got the job mainly because Charles T. Carpenter, a member of the school board, also was a graduate of the Indiana school.

"Mr. Willkie was a good looking boy," said Carpenter, now 81 years old and secretary of the Coffeyville Savings and Loan association. "He was only 21 and the youngest member of the faculty. He was a leader from the very beginning. He was quite an orator and when he spoke it always brought the students to their feet cheering."

Willkie's prodigious energy and his activity in all extra school activities is shown in the Coffeyville high school annual for 1914. Willkie's picture, showing a thin, serious faced young man wearing a high collar, appears four times in the annual. There are two cartoons of him in the book.

Coached School Teams.

Willkie organized the Y. M. C. A., the debating team, and coached the basketball and track teams. The high school annual reports that in their first debate Willkie's club members argued the question—"That the President of the United States shall be elected for a term of six years and be ineligible for reëlection." The annual reports that the negative debaters won.

There is a picture of him as coach with the basketball team. "Our 'silver tongued orator,' Mr. Willkie, became the boys' coach," the sports writer in the high school annual writes, "altho our boys didn't take the flag they put up a hard fight to the last." The sports report shows that Coffeyville won six out of ten games.

Indiana His Favorite.

Again Willkie is photographed with the track team—"the best team ever turned out of C. H. S." Willkie apparently spoke much of his native state for a list of expressions tabulated by the students by which members of the faculty could be recognized showed Willkie's favorite as "Indiana."

The 1915 annual also records that the day of Willkie's resignation on Nov. 6 was known as Willkie day. The school calendar read: "A special program was given in chapel for one of the best friends C. H. S. ever had. . . . Mr. Willkie told of his regret at leaving in one of his characteristic speeches. A gloomy student body filed to classrooms."

Mrs. Anna Hancock, retired Latin teacher who was one of Willkie's fellow teachers, said Willkie was extremely witty and keen minded. "When he said something, it was worth listening to," she said.

While in Coffeyville, Willkie lived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pert Florea. He was a model roomer and always courteous, Mrs. Florea said.

CRITICALLY INJURED IN FALL.

George Bundy, 75 years old, 6910 Anthony avenue, was in critical condition last night in St. Bernard's hospital from injuries incurred earlier in the day when he fell while boarding a street car at 63d street and Wentworth avenue, striking his head on a nearby auto.

'PHANTOM' RULE OF STATE RIPPED BY HUGH CROSS

Decries 'Sad Fact' Illinois Lacks Active Governor.

Hugh W. Cross, speaker of the state house of representatives and Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, told a radio audience last night that for nearly two years Illinois has been without the services of a governor.

His talk was based on the fact that since Nov. 8, 1938, Gov. Henry Horner has been an invalid and during almost that entire period has been unable to perform the duties of his office. Visitors are still barred from his summer residence in Winnetka where he has been since early in last June.

A "Sad Fact," He Says.

"The sad fact, now known to all," said Cross, "is that Illinois has not had any active constitutional governor for nearly two years except during the three months when the lieutenant governor [John Stelle] presided while the governor was absent from the state."

Speaker Cross' subject was "Who Is Our Governor?" and in replying to the question he said that the affairs of the executive branch of the state government are entirely in the hands of a phantom cabinet in whose selection the people of the state had no voice.

In reference to Gov. Horner, Cross said he felt only sympathy for the sick man and added that present conditions in the state would not have developed if Horner had been active.

"A shroud of mystery surrounds this government of yours and mine," he said. "However, I am close enough to the panorama of state affairs to be well aware of some of the maneuvering of the mysterious, invisible group of nonelected, self-appointed individuals who have been feebly trying to guide our state, clouding all efforts to let the public know the true state of affairs.

Not Elected by the People.

"Who are these nonelected, self-appointed individuals who have been and are now ruling our state? They have not been chosen or elected by the people to any public office.

"They do not, under any interpretation of constitutional law or stretch of legal imagination, constitute our chosen leaders. In fact, they rule in direct violation of our constitution. The Illinois constitution in simple language provides that in case of the disability of the governor the powers and duties of his office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor.

"The constitution further directs a line of succession so that in the event of a state emergency there may always be a chosen representative of the people ready to take over and assume the duties of the office."

Cross charged the "phantom cabinet" with responsibility for a list of scandals and for lack of action because of the scandals.

He mentioned the escape of 76 potential criminals from the St. Charles School for Boys, the appointment of an ex-convict as a state policeman, the renewed collection of the 2 per cent "shakedown" fund, the typhoid epidemic at the Manteno state hospital, and the nameless graves at the Peoria state hospital as specific instances demanding but failing to receive stern action from the executive department.

He also emphasized the great responsibility of a governor in the carrying out of the new federal conscription act. He predicted that appointments under that law will be seized as political patronage by the phantom cabinet.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Miss Jeanette Scherer of La Porte, Ind., poses with the winning basket of Mrs. R. R. McCormick dahlias at the show of the Central States Dahlia society of Chicago in Garfield park conservatory. The flowers were grown by Theodore Simon of Racine, Wis.

A new, beautiful variety of dahlia, named for the late Mrs. R. R. McCormick, is now on exhibit at the ninth annual dahlia show conducted by the Central States Dahlia society of Chicago in Garfield park conservatory. The show opened yesterday and will close at 10 p. m. tonight.

Exhibitors who won awards for Mrs. R. R. McCormick dahlias were Theodore Simon of Racine, Wis., for the best basket of the variety, and Mrs. August Heller, 7826 Eberhart avenue, for the best specimen. The dahlia was first cultivated on Col. Robert R. McCormick's estate. It is of the large, autumn informal type.

Dr. Stanley D. Tylman of Lombard was presented yesterday with the Robert J. Dunham trophy for the best six blooms exhibited by an amateur. Judging took place on hundreds of other awards. The show occupies two greenhouses at the conservatory.

Marinette, Wis., Sept. 14 [Special]. —Elmer Revore, 33 years old, was drowned this afternoon when he lost his balance while pulling up the anchor of an outboard motorboat. He was fishing with three companions on a large pond on Peshtigo river, at Potato Rapids, six miles west of Marinette. Harold Hansen, a member of the party, dived in and brought him to the surface, but resuscitation efforts were unsuccessful. Others in the boat were Albert Paradise and Jessie Styes.

SEWING STARTS ON 40 MODELS IN FASHION CONTEST

Dressmakers Busy Fitting for Oct. 2 Debut.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Dressmaking studios in New York and Chicago are humming with activity these days as final preparations are being completed for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's $7,500 American Fashions contest shows at the W-G-N audience studio on Oct. 2.

Mrs. Grace Parker-Pickering, styles expert and chairman of the committee managing the event, said today the dress models of the 40 finalists, which were narrowed down from the 12,491 sketches submitted, were all in the process of fitting together.

Twenty-four of the outfits sketched by the contestants are being fashioned at Mrs. Pickering's studio and other ateliers here and in Chicago. These are for the contestants who do not have their own facilities available. The other 16 finalists are doing the work in their own dressmaking shops.

Every Detail Worked Out.

This transformation of the designers' creations on cardboard into the realities of chic ensembles of silks, velvets, woolens, lamés, metal cloth, lace, embroidery and bits of fur is all being carried out under Mrs. Pickering's supervision.

"Great care is being given to ascertaining that every detail of the designer's sketch is worked out to meet his or her idea," declared Mrs. Pickering. "There is a painstaking selection of materials to obtain the exact shading of color and texture which the contestants painted. Every detail of line, form and proportions is watched and faithfully reproduced."

What waking hours are left after supervising the dressmaking itself, Mrs. Pickering is devoting to a search for accessories—proper fur pieces for some of the ensembles, coats that are required by certain sketches, correct shoes for day or evening, matching or accenting gloves, hats, stockings, purses, artificial flowers, jewelry, and whatnots.

$8,000 For the Winner.

Out of the 40 best designs, 25 will be picked for cash awards at the show by a committee of fashion authorities soon to be announced. The winning design will bring a prize of $3,000, the second, $2,000. There will be three $500 awards and 20 of $50 each.

Busy on Tribune Contest Entries

SEIZED IN THEFT OF BONDS FROM JOLIET WOMAN

Oren R. Six, 53 years old, of La Salle, was arrested yesterday in his home and taken to Joliet on a charge of embezzling property valued at $67,000.

The complainant was Mrs. Agnes Davis of 1313 Glenwood avenue, Joliet. She alleged that several years ago Six obtained bonds with a face value of $100,000 from her aunt, Miss Joan Heggie of Joliet, and failed to turn over the proceeds. The present value of the securities, which have depreciated, was set at $67,000. She would not elaborate on the charges and Six would not talk. He was held in the county jail at Joliet.

Police said Six recently had been engaged in oil land deals.

LAKE VICTIM'S BODY RECOVERED.

The body of Miss Jean Fraine, 22 years old, 6717 Bennett avenue, was washed ashore at 59th street yesterday. Miss Fraine, a stenographer, drowned last Sunday when she fell from a sailboat off 39th street.

PHOTO IS PROOF OF WHO ERECTS HERSHEY SIGNS

Road Chief's Denial Is Refuted by Judge.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 14.—Probate Judge Benjamin S. De Boice, a Republican, had photographic proof today that members of a state highway maintenance crew erected a "Hershey for governor" sign on state route 150 near Chester, Ill.

In answer to De Boice's charge that the Democratic administration refused to allow erection of Republican signs and permitted those of Democratic candidates to dot the state highways, Ernst Lieberman, chief highway engineer, wrote a denial to De Boice.

Tells Bureau Policy.

"It has always been the policy of this department not to permit posters of candidates for any political party to be placed within the right-of-way limits of state highways outside of municipal limits," Lieberman said.

Lieberman also said that he would issue instructions to the bureau of maintenance and state police that no posters of any political party are to be permitted within the right-of-way of any state highway.

Patrolman Posts Signs.

At the same time, Judge De Boice says, he received information from A. B. Johnson, Roodhouse, Ill., attorney, that he had observed a state highway patrolman in uniform posting on state bond issue road No. 3 [U. S. 67] a card showing pictures and advertising for the Democratic party.

Shortly thereafter, according to Judge De Boice, S. J. Howell, a Chester, Ill., contractor, obtained a photograph showing members of a state highway maintenance crew erecting a "Hershey for governor" sign on state route 150 near Chester.

Highway Police Seize 19 Gaming Machines in Week

Chief Lester Laird disclosed yesterday that his county highway police seized 19 gambling machines in 14 raids last week. Fourteen were slot machines. The others were pin ball games and machines that pay off in golf balls.

BOWEN ASSAILS STATE ASYLUM BURIAL EXPOSE

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 14 [Special].—A. L. Bowen, director of public welfare, issued a statement today attacking State Representative Arnold Lund's exposure of conditions in the cemetery at the Peoria State hospital.

Bowen admitted that he abandoned the former method of marking patients' graves with numbered concrete headstones in order to have more money to make institutional improvements for the living. He also contended that, altho hundreds of graves carry no distinguishing marks they can be identified by asylum employés thru their location and the chronological list of deaths.

The director also said that if the woman who complained to Lund that her mother's grave could not be found had opened the "casket" offered her she would have seen within it a card bearing her mother's name.

LONDON PLANES AND GUNS BEAT BACK 4 ATTACKS

Buildings Shaken by Great Barrage.

near industrial buildings. In Ipswich a church was reported demolished.

The air ministry announced that 11 German planes were shot down during the day to 4 British craft lost.

Feel Out Defenses.

Saturday's daylight attacks on the southeast area seemed to be intended principally to feel out the state of the English coastal defenses —a significant detail in the light of the declaration of neutral military observers that this week-end would be one of "intense danger of invasion."

Britain was ready and some Englishmen said simply that they hoped the Germans would try invasion "so we can wipe their eye."

The government took steps to free telephonic and telegraphic communications—vital in any military emergency—from as much of the civilian load as was possible. It asked the public to confine their use to urgent messages.

Methodically, the bombers of the royal air force, the country's first line of defense against any German attempt to cross the channel with troops, carried on their mission of destruction against Nazi bases.

Attacks Continue.

The attacks raged on tonight, German invasion ports on the French coast suffering "an even fiercer assault than that which ceased at daybreak," as the press association described it.

"Endless" explosions in France shook the Kentish coast of England, the association said, and German searchlights and British flares lit the waterfront for many miles. This new bombardment came on the heels of one thruout Friday night which the British said had wrecked barge concentrations on the French and Belgian coasts, and left German dock facilities aflame at Boulogne, Calais, Dunkirk, Ostend, and Antwerp.

Face of London Scarred.

After more than a week's bombing, the old face of London is pocked and battered by a score of heavy raids. In the western part of the city, those buildings damaged include Buckingham palace, Mme. Tussaud's waxworks, the house of lords, the quadrant of fine shops on Regent street, exclusive Berkeley square, and even Westminster abbey, where an 18th century window depicting biblical prophets was damaged slightly during a recent raid. At Buckingham palace Saturday a time bomb dropped in Friday's attack on the royal palace exploded in front of the building, demolishing a gatepost and a section of iron fencing.

The east end—as stark a contrast to Berkeley square as could be imagined—has suffered the greatest loss of life and the most homes demolished, because of its proximity to the docks and large industrial plants.

The docks themselves have been repeatedly damaged, as have utilities and communications.

But the city's food situation is described as "good" by the government, which emphasized that there are adequate reserves. The west end business houses, catering to the luxury trade, have suffered heavily. So have the fashionable restaurants and night clubs.

Germans Favor Nights for Raids

These clock faces show the times of German air raids over London from the day after Adolf Hitler's warning of total aerial warfare against England until last Friday. Each circle covers a period of 24 hours, beginning at midnight. Thus many of the night alarm periods start in one circle and are finished in the next. The graphs indicate that the Germans are doing an increasing proportion of their raiding at night.

VICHY, France, Sept. 14.—Reorganization of France's youth along the lines of similar movements in Italy and Germany was extended today to include girls and young women. A feminine organization to be called "Daughters of France" was created. It corresponds to "Companions of France," recently organized for boys and young men. The girls' organization will be headed by Mme. Philippe de Bourbon-Sicilie.

FALLS FROM TREE; DIES.

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 14 [Special].—Max Bemis, 65 years old, retired city policeman, died today of injuries received yesterday when he fell 25 feet while trimming a tree.

Passenger Train Kills 3 at Ohio Grade Crossing

Hamilton, O., Sept. 14 (AP).—A Pennsylvania railroad passenger train, the Southland, struck an automobile at a crossing near Somerville today and killed its three occupants. The dead were Albert Asbury, 67 years old, and his children, Charles, 25, and Mary, 18, of Camden, O.

DICTATOR SETS UP TOTALITARIAN RULE IN RUMANIA

Iron Guard Takes Power in Nazified State.

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 14.—Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's military dictator, today decreed the creation of a totalitarian Iron Guard state with himself as its chief, its premier, and its minister of national defense.

The new state, patterned along Nazi lines, will recognize the Iron Guard as the only Rumanian political party. Horia Sima, "fuehrer" of the Iron Guard, was named vice premier.

Vasile Iasinsci, leader of the Bucharest Iron Guard, became minister of labor, and Michael Antonescu, nephew of the dictator, was made minister of justice. Prince Costin Sturza, Iron Guard lawyer, was named minister of foreign affairs; Gen. George Petrovicescu, minister of interior, and George Cretianu, director general of the Rumanian bank, minister of finance.

Helen Speeds Home.

The change took place as young King Michael was speeding to Bucharest with his mother, Princess Helen, after a reunion on the Jugo-Slav border. The divorced wife of exiled King Carol was back on Rumanian soil for the first time in 10 years. Thousands of Iron Guardists and peasants in costume greeted mother and son as their special train bore them home.

Dictator Antonescu was to have accompanied the 18 year old king to Jimbolia to welcome the princess, but at the last minute abandoned his plans and remained here for a series of secret conferences. These parleys apparently evolved the new state setup altho previously it had been reported that they were connected with new disputes with soviet Russia over frontier disturbances.

Rumanian officials denied "various rumors" that new demands or a note had been received from Russia.

[Tass, official soviet news agency, reported Rumania not only had denied that her airplanes had crossed the Russian border but also had charged Russia with frontier provocation in reply to a soviet note of protest Aug. 29.]

Plan Festival Welcome.

An elaborate festival will be held in Bucharest tomorrow to welcome Princess Helen as queen mother. A delegation of high army officers, the patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox church, and other dignitaries will greet her at the station in the morning.

Antonescu's decree creating totalitarian rule had been preceded during the day by other decrees designed to tighten his hold on the country. One provided for "economic national defense" thru the appointment of state commissars to supervise the activities of commercial and industrial concerns. It stipulated that these commissars must be "ethnically pure" Rumanians.

A BOAST BY SOME NAZIS: IN LONDON BY END OF MONTH

British Capital Threatened with Warsaw's Fate.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—German newspaper men who have close connections with government officials expressed confidence today that German armed forces will be in London by the end of the month. They offered to make big bets on such a proposition.

While the journalists were thus expressing themselves, a propaganda ministry spokesman said that London "must choose between the fate of Paris or that of Warsaw." Paris was declared a free city by the French and left undamaged, but Warsaw was pulverized both by bombs and shells for refusing to surrender.

This dire threat was made as German bombers, continuing their attack upon England, reported successful blows against British railway shops and tracks, including the station and rails at the world time center of Greenwich, on the south bank of the Thames. The West and East India docks also were bombed, authoritative Nazis said.

Report Great Destruction.

German reconnaissance flyers returning from London declared that "at least 24 docks in London are completely gutted."

Other attacks were made in the industrial Midlands and southeast coast, the Germans said. Twenty-one British planes were shot down, it was reported.

More than four million pounds of bombs were dropped on London during the week just ending, the Germans said. Germany itself was declared to have been bombless last night and again tonight, at least up until midnight, when British bombers attempting to penetrate the German defenses were reported driven back.

Concerning London, the propaganda ministry spokesman said:

"We decline to accept the guilt for what is happening to London. England declared war because we brought Danzig back into the reich. The British government has the possibility of saving London, even now, from the fate of Warsaw.

"The German air force will continue its relentless attacks unless the British government acts.

"If there is misery in London today, it is not our fault. It is England's fault for not preparing the city properly against attack. If Prime Minister Churchill finds it possible to sacrifice further thousands in cold blood, that will merely prove unheard of unscrupulousness."

An Estimate on Lives.

The spokesman declared that no large formations of British bombers would reach Germany this winter.

"If the British have not been over here regularly it is not because they did not want to, but because they could not," he asserted.

"The British apparently think now that because they have not bombed Germany regularly that we are therefore quits. But you can not figure human values that way. One German life may be worth 10 British lives and more."

Threat to Palace.

Another German spokesman, Hans Fritsch, official radio commentator, said that "if one woodsman's flat in Germany can be saved by our bombing Buckingham palace, then we will do it."

Another theme of German spokesmen is this:

"The London population is heading for terrible weeks in which it will be exposed to hunger, cold, and rains. England's former allies, the weather, fog, and water, now are turning into her worst enemies. It must not be assumed that after the destructive attacks of German bombers on London, the punishment of England can be considered finished."

Reports current abroad that Germany had been forced to employ Italian pilots because of the heavy losses to her own air force were emphatically denied. It was said that a considerable part of the personnel of the German air force had not yet been used.

Rome Says Axis Won't Use Gas If the British Don't

ROME, Sept. 14 (AP).—A high Fascist authority declared today Italy and Germany would refrain from using gas against the British in the hope that the British would likewise renounce its use.

France Postpones Selling of Red Property Once Again

VICHY, France, Sept. 14.—For the second time the French government has postponed the disposal of property confiscated from the communist party at the time of its dissolution a year ago. A decree today granted three months delay from Sept. 8. Under the law ordering the party disbanded, it was decreed that all property would be seized and after six months sold, the profits going to public charities.

WRITERS SHOWN BOMBS' DAMAGE AT KING'S PALACE

Chapel Is Severely Torn; New Blast Hits Fence.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A delayed action bomb exploded today in front of Buckingham palace but did little damage. Others which exploded when the bombs were dropped on the palace at 10:30 a. m. yesterday were more destructive, it was disclosed when THE TRIBUNE correspondent and other press representatives were shown around the royal residence.

Today's bomb, which had been covered with sandbags, blew out a section 20 feet long of the high steel fence in front of the palace and immediately opposite the Queen Victoria monument. Six bombs were dropped on the palace and its interior court yesterday. They scored direct or almost direct hits, striking the southeast section of the interior court, and 200 windows, about half of those in the surrounding walls. The court's rectangle is 250 by 250 yards. The walls are four stories high. A glass and steel reinforced canopy over the entrance door was broken by falling stones from a bomb crater.

Ambassadors' Corridor Damaged.

Flying stones also went thru the windows along the ambassadors' corridor, defacing a portrait of Augusta Wilhelmina of Hesse-Cassel, duchess of Cambridge, painted in 1835 by C. F. Reichmann.

The ambassadors' corridor is where diplomats and senior guests stand at the head of the guest line on state occasions, and the end of the line, out in the court where debutantes stand, is the location of the crater holes.

In a nearby room, unhurt by the blast, were full length paintings of Kaiser Wilhelm II., who led Germany in the world war; Franz Josef, last of Austria-Hungary's emperors, and Nicholas, last of Russia's czars.

Chapel Severly Damaged.

The bomb that did the most damage came thru the chapel roof near the center and exploded on striking the floor. The little chapel is a room 30 feet square in the southeast wing of the palace. Much damage was inflicted by this bomb, altho the hole in the roof indicated the bomb was of small size. A workman in a plumbing shop immediately below the chapel said he was tossed 15 feet by the explosion but was not hurt. Four other workmen were injured, it was announced.

The chapel altar and its emblems were buried in debris. The famed Gobelin tapestry on the wall behind the altar, depicting the baptism of Christ by John the Baptist, escaped damage. Queen Victoria's Bible and the chapel organ likewise were unscathed.

Argentina and Spain Agree on Maize-Rail Goods Trade

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 14 (AP).—Agreement in principle, informed sources said today, has been reached on a barter agreement whereby Argentina would exchange 150,000 tons of her maize surplus—estimated at 7,000,000 tons — for an unspecified quantity of Spanish railway materials.

NAZI BILL TWICE THEIR '39 BUDGET, FRENCH FIGURE

Wonder Where Country Can Find Money.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, Sept. 14.—Examining further details of the bill which the Germans will present this country for costs of occupation, the French press today found that it will amount to more than twice the entire national budget for the fiscal year 1939, the year before the war started.

Discussing the occupation bill, the newspaper Le Journal, printed in Limoges, in the free zone, said that the official figure of 20,000,000 reichsmarks daily [the mark is nominally quoted around 40 cents], given out yesterday as the occupation cost, means 400,000,000 French francs daily [the franc is nominally quoted around 2 cents], or 146,000,000,000 French francs annually.

War Budget Nearly Doubled.

This figure is more than double the amount of the 1939 budget, which was 66,000,000,000 francs, Le Journal said, and is almost double the French budget for the war year of 1940, which was 79,000,000,000 francs.

The problem was raised by Le Journal of how the country will be able to find such a sum. There is speculation in other quarters as to whether the country will pay the bill by printing new bank notes, and what effect that would have on the quotation for the franc in world markets.

Le Journal's article said that 12,000,000,000 francs, which is the Germans' bill for their army occupation for one month, represents more than was collected by direct taxation for the whole year of 1939. Also, it said, the bill for one month's occupation exceeds by more than 1,000,000,000 francs the combined budgets for 1939 of the French ministries of war, marine, and aviation.

World War Figures Recalled.

It is recalled that constant wrangling took place 21 years ago over the costs of the allied occupation of three Rhineland bridgeheads and that the reparations bill of 130,000,000,000 gold marks was finally whittled to less than 50,000,000,000.

Some towns in France will have additional burdens on their pocketbooks. Nantes, in Brittany, has been fined 2,000,000 francs by German authorities because unidentified persons tampered with telephone cables. It is announced that the same thing happened again and the Germans slapped a fine of 5,000,000 francs more on the town. The mayor issued an appeal in the hope of preventing a repetition of the offense.

AMERICAN FLEET WORLD'S BEST, KNOX DECLARES

HONOLULU, T. H., Sept. 14 (AP).—Intensive study of the United States fleet in action has convinced Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox it is the greatest in the world.

"The United States has the greatest, the most powerful, and the most effective fleet on the high seas," he said after making a five day inspection of the fleet during war exercises.

"The fleet personnel, both enlisted men and officers, is the intense pride of every American citizen who loves his country."

Secretary Knox flew to Honolulu from the U. S. S. Enterprise 40 miles at sea yesterday. He described spectacular maneuvers of the fleet and said he was aboard a destroyer which was "sunk" in a night engagement with a battleship.

Both the navy and the army need more and better bombing planes, Secretary Knox said. More and better antiaircraft defenses also are needed both at Lahaina roads and Pearl harbor, he added, and the navy needs additional recreational facilities for the enlisted personnel.

[Associated Press Wirephoto: Radioed from Berlin yesterday.]

A British bomb struck at the foundation of an apartment building in Hamburg, Germany, and tore down a section of the wall for five floors, according to a caption passed by a German censor. The caption added that only dwellings were damaged in the raid and that five persons were killed.

NAZIS TIGHTEN CONTROL ALONG FRENCH BORDERS

Restrictions Cut Off Free Zone.

VICHY, France, Sept. 14 (AP).—Unoccupied France was practically cut off from the outside world today by closure or extraordinary vigilance, tightening passage along all its borders. Americans were among the hardest hit.

The Germans tightened the restrictions on the border between the occupied and the unoccupied zones, letting thru a trickle of refugees homeward bound, but refusing entry to all others except for the most urgent reasons.

Restrict Departures.

The Germans are also restricting departures from the occupied territory.

Twenty Americans now in Paris are vainly attempting to get permits to leave. Many French who procured permits and entered the occupied zone on business in the last 10 days also are finding many difficulties in returning here.

The few coming thru report the Germans are now searching all, allowing the export of only 200 francs [about $4].

Close Other Borders.

The Spanish-Portuguese borders are closed because of crowded conditions in Lisbon, now about the only continental port of embarkation. The only exceptions made are for persons holding tickets for immediate sailings or flights.

The Swiss also have tightened restrictions. The Italian border, the only other one, is closed, presumably until a peace treaty is signed.

[Travelers returning to Chancy, Switzerland, from the unoccupied zone said today defeated France fears the Germans might take over the entire country within a few weeks.]

GERMANS BUILD BIG BELGRADE CAMP FOR RUMANIA EMIGRANTS

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Sept. 14.—A huge rest camp on the shore of the Sava river, on the outskirts of Belgrade, is being rushed to completion to accommodate more than 120,000 German refugees from Bessarabia Germany. These two districts were recently taken from Rumania by Russia and the Germans are being moved out under an agreement reached between Berlin and Moscow.

Sixty-nine barracks capable of housing 12,000 persons are being constructed by the volunteer labor corps of the German minority. More than 300 men and women are at work.

The first convoy of about 4,000 Germans will leave Galati, Rumania, on Wednesday and arrive Sept. 24. The Germans will be housed, rested, doctored and entertained for 48 hours at the Belgrade camp and at a smaller camp on the Danube frontier of Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria.

DIES OF CRASH INJURIES.

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 14 [Special].—Herman Hoskins, 25, Michigan City, Ind., died early today of injuries received last night when an automobile driven by Ken Koltenbeck, 34, Michigan City, overturned on U. S. 35, north of here. Koltenbeck, held by police on drunken driving charges, received minor injuries.

WALKOUT MAY HALT BUILDING OF SUBMARINES

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 14 (AP).—General Motors corporation spokesmen said today that a walkout at the Diesel engine division plant would stop work on contracts for submarines unless the dispute is settled quickly. The submarines are under construction at the Cleveland plant.

The dispute involves approximately 300 members of the Mechanics Educational Society of America, independent union, who walked out yesterday in protest, union heads said, against failure of the corporation to comply with contract provisions. The plant employs approximately 1,000 men.

Company spokesmen said that no demands were presented by the union members when they staged their walkout.

FLYING STUDENT INSURANCE COST REDUCED AGAIN

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—A third voluntary reduction in life and accident insurance premiums to cover students in the civilian pilot training program is being made by the insurance companies, Col. Donald H. Connolly, administrator of civil aeronautics, said today.

The reduction, he said, is due to "the unparalleled safety record of the program." Only four primary students and one secondary student were killed in 20 months.

For the fall course, the cost of $3,000 insurance for a student pilot is being reduced from $10 to $9. The first rate set for the program was $20.

A Statement

TO MEN OF MILITARY AGE

With the passing of the Conscription Bill, men of ages 21 to 35 inclusive are subject to military service. While the selective method which is to be used will not affect every one of you men between these ages, it undoubtedly has made some of you hesitant about your Fall clothing purchases. In the fifty-three-year history of The Hub, Henry C. Lytton & Sons, we have often risen to meet unusual circumstances. We meet them again with a new policy, designed to eliminate any undue financial burden on those who may be drawn into military service.

A Defense Cooperation Money-Back Certificate will be issued to all men of military age on purchases, for personal use, made up to and including November 15, 1940. Suits, Topcoats, Overcoats, Furnishings, Hats and Shoes may be purchased on this plan. In the event that you are conscripted and actually enter into the service on or before January 31, 1941, this certificate, with your notice of call, will entitle you to the privilege of returning your entire purchase for full credit, regardless of wear.

Our first consideration in this move has been for you young men between 21 and 35 who are subject to conscription. As one of Chicago's oldest and leading retail establishments we are proud to be first with this timely service. You may come to The Hub and buy your Fall requirements with the utmost confidence that you will not incur a needless expenditure.

TO THE PUBLIC: Merchandise returned under this plan will be donated to the Salvation Army.

NEW RAID TACTICS LET LONDON GRAB A WINK OF SLEEP

Nazi Flyers Stay Away for Three Hours.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 15, Sunday.—Just when Londoners were getting accustomed to sleeping underground, Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering seems to have adapted a new technique last night and early today in his air blitzkrieg.

For three hours after the all clear signal sounded at 9:53 o'clock there had been unusual quiet and most of the people had eagerly sought the comfort of their beds. It was the first time in a week that they had not been compelled to remain all night in raid shelters. They were rudely awakened, however, at 12:45 this morning by the sound of heavy gun fire and of planes overhead.

Hotel residents were advised to go to the basements and house warnings were sounded at newspaper and cable offices. It was not until 1:15 o'clock, however, that the public sirens wailed again and the sleepy-eyed Londoners once more went underground wondering how bombers had made a swoop unheralded by the warning of sirens.

Many persons who had gone to shelters armed with blankets, pillows, and thermos bottles for an all night stay had been exasperated when the raiders did not maintain their schedule.

New Invasion Hint Seen.

The question is being asked whether the sudden change in the German tactics have something to do with Adolf Hitler's plans to invade the British Isles.

The theory the invasion will be attempted within a day or two appears to be based on the assumption a full moon and a high tide will offer Hitler the best chances of success, and these conditions will obtain tomorrow.

From a rooftop yesterday afternoon I saw about 100 planes flying in various directions over London. They had not dropped a bomb, and it was hard to tell whether they were putting on a show designed to weaken the public's morale or whether they were en route to an objective.

"What's wrong with our antiaircraft guns? Big Anny ought to get that bunch there," a rooftop spotter asked. "That's what I want to know," another replied.

It was plain, however, the bombers were too high for antiaircraft batteries.

People Brave Week of Terror.

The raid, which lasted only 55 minutes, rounded out a week which, for concentrated mass terror for the area and numbers involved, set a grim record in military history.

During the week Londoners lived their life under fire, and countless persons have suffered tragedy and the aching loss of friends and families. Many others have been deprived of the means of livelihood. All have suffered from sleeplessness, irritation, and disorganization in some form or other of their normal life.

Yet the people are still facing what Prime Minister Winston Churchill has called the supreme ordeal with fortitude and courage and are bravely carrying on, whether they are shopkeepers with their windows smashed by bombs or the thousands made homeless and jobless thru the destruction. I have seen little faltering anywhere, altho every one seems aware the British are facing their greatest test in history.

The London Times takes courage in the knowledge that the Germans are being hit just as badly.

"The losses, dangers, and inconveniences which persisted in the bombings during the past week—ruined buildings, closed streets, interrupted communications—should have served to quicken the imagination of the people of London to give them some idea of what many parts of Germany have had to endure for several months past," it says.

JERSEY SENATOR BLAMES FOREIGN AGENTS IN BLAST

Kenvil, N. J., Sept. 14 (AP).—Activities of "foreign agents" were blamed today by Senator W. Warren Barbour [R., N. J.] for the explosions Thursday at the Hercules Powder company that killed at least 48 and within five frightful minutes blasted more than a score of buildings.

While state police checked membership rolls of the German-American bund against the roster of plant employés, Senator Barbour in a satement in Washington said he believed "when the facts are known, it will be discovered that it [the explosion] was due as in the case of the Black Tom [Jersey City, N. J.] disaster of the preworld war period to the activities of foreign agents."

In addition to the New Jersey state police and state bureau of explosives, other agencies probing the mysterious explosions include the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and army and navy intelligence officers.

REPORT CHINESE SUSPEND AIR LINK WITH INDO-CHINA

HONGKONG, Sept. 14 (AP).—Chinese sources reported today that air transportation between Hanoi, French Indo-China, and Kunming, capital of the neighboring Chinese province of Yunnan, had been suspended since yesterday.

These sources quoted Gen. Lung-Yun, governor of Yunnan, as saying that the French government was "on the point of granting the Japanese the right to use Indo-China as a base of attack against China" and that the Chinese would take all necessary military measures.

Earlier in the week a Chinese army spokesman said in Chungking that Chinese troops had blown up the international bridge on the Hanoi-Kunming railway to prevent Japanese from using it.

JAP TEST BOMB HITS CANADIAN LINER; 4 HURT

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—The Canadian liner Empress of Asia, accidentally bombed by a Japanese naval training plane off Oshima Island in Tokio bay today, sailed from Yokohama for Vancouver, B. C., tonight. Capt. J. G. Gould said the case was amicably settled and declared that in times like the present such an accident might happen anywhere. The Japanese navy had rushed physicians to care for four Chinese members of the crew who were slightly injured

Damage to the vessel was said to be small and was partially repaired by carpenters sent by the navy. A practice bomb hit the starboard boat deck between the third and fourth boats, pierced the promenade deck, and landed in the storeroom, where it exploded and injured the Chinese.

Several planes were engaged in practice at a high altitude when one released several light bombs. One fell wide of its target and struck the liner.

BRITISH CHILDREN REACH PANAMA; SAW U-BOAT RAID

PANAMA CITY, Panama, Sept. 14.—One hundred and thirteen British children, ranging in age from 5 to 15 years, today passed thru the Panama canal aboard the British vessel Rangitata.

Those aboard saw the torpedoing of the steamer Volendam Aug. 28, and three other ships in the convoy in which they were traveling to Canada. The 320 children aboard the Volendam were rescued. The torpedo which struck the Volendam passed so close to the Rangitata, passengers said, that the missle's noise and swish thru the water was audible.

LEADERS TELL THEIR STORY OF WHY FRANCE FELL

Accuse British of Sending Too Few Soldiers.

(This is the first of a series of articles giving the semi-official French viewpoint on how France lost the war.)

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, Sept. 14.—France's disastrous war, which lasted 297 days, soon will be reviewed before the high court at Riom, which is now conducting an inquest into those responsible for the war.

Marshal Henri Petain.

No official account has been compiled by the French government of just what happened, and why, in the now famous battle of France, preceded by the battles of the Meuse and Flanders. The official history probably will remain a task for historians some years hence.

From documents and articles by military writers and critics, however, and from ministerial declarations during the dispute with the British about the correctness of concluding a separate peace, it is possible to obtain a fairly complete idea of this government's version of the struggle which led to such a speedy German victory.

Trials May Reveal Data.

In the trials of "war responsibles" before the Riom court, much of the inside history concerning France's defeat probably will be disclosed and probably will furnish valuable historical data.

But without consideration of the court's findings, French military critics and leaders of the present Marshal Henri Petain government believe the battle of France was lost before it began.

They hold that by May 20, when the Germans drove to the edge of Paris, the war was lost and that in the battle of France proper, in the period from June 5 to the armistice, June 25, it was never a question of fighting for victory but of safeguarding French honor.

Leading factors in this debacle, according to French writings and public discourses, are as follows:

FIRST—Complete insufficiency of the general French plan of defense and an equal deficiency of modern equipment, organization, and training.

SECOND—Lack of conviction in the soundness of the war aims, French soldiers not having as clear a picture of things as they did in 1914.

THIRD—Failure of the English allies to coöperate on a serious scale. For instance, among other things, it is now officially stated that the British commanders solicited by Gen. Maxime Wegand, then French commander in chief, on May 21 to participate in a counteroffensive with the Belgians and French toward the southwest to break the German pressure, refused and insisted on retreating to embark at Dunkirk.

Pleas for More Help Told.

Documents now available disclose that Weygand, as soon as he took command from Gamelin on May 21, repeatedly urged that the British send more divisions to France.

At the end of May, it is now revealed, Weygand considered an armistice inevitable and on May 29 reported to the Reynaud cabinet that the military situation was critical. That date was the day after the announcement that the Belgian army had capitulated.

Talking to the press on July 4, Foreign Minister Baudouin of the Petain cabinet, said: "The British supplied only 10 divisions, made up of about 200,000 men, which they sent last autumn and did not increase in eight months. After the battle of the Meuse and as soon as he took command on May 21 Wegand asked the English army to participate in common with our armies of the north and with the Belgians in an offensive in the direction of the southwest to break the German pressure toward the coast and effect a junction with our armies of the south.

Tells of British Retreat.

"The English army, after having accepted in principle, hesitated and then retreated to the ports of the north to embark. We then had to order the retreat of our armies of the north and they fought until the last day to permit four-fifths of the English army to be saved, while only half of the French army was saved."

As Marshal Petain described the events in a broadcast on June 25, "The battle of Flanders ended with the capitulation of the Belgium army in the open field. The second battle was then engaged on the Aisne and on the Somme. Sixty French divisions without fortifications were pitted against 150 German infantry divisions and "armored divisions. The war was virtually won by the Germans when Italy entered the war on June 10, creating a new front on the Alps, and 2,000,000 French refugees joined 1,500,000 Belgian refugees in flight to the south."

On June 6 Gen. Weygand in another report to the cabinet, wrote: "Developments of operations are such that we must envisage the moment when they cannot be continued. It would be well to advise the British government in order that all dispositions may be taken in consequence."

This report accordingly was submitted the day after the Germans launched the battle of France across the Somme.

Decide to Continue to End.

A dispute here arises over the fact that the Reynaud government, after consulting Prime Minister Winston Churchill and the British, nevertheless decided, against the advise of military leaders, to continue the struggle to the end. Some sources believe that had the armistice been sought sooner and had Weygand been heeded, the German armies would not have dashed to the Loire, less of the country would have been occupied, and Italy might not have entered the war.

Be this as it may, during the days that followed the rush of the German armored divisions thru from the Meuse, cutting a corridor to the sea thru Peronne and Abbeville, Weygand feverishly organized a defense line on the Somme. On May 25, he said, "I need a month," and a few days later issued his famous communique, "Hold on. The last quarter of an hour is nearing."

It is now admitted that the public was not informed of the seriousness of the situation, as it might have been, and Marshal Petain in his first broadcast inveighed against those who had so grievously deceived the French people.

Background Picture Given.

Before dealing with the three phases of the battle between May 10 and June 25 in subsequent articles, it is of interest to study the semiofficial picture of the background conditions of the armistice and of what the French considered they were up against. This was presented in a document issued Aug. 1 by "Comite France Amerique," with the approval of the French government. This document was issued as a rejoinder to Churchill's violent criticism of the French acceptance of the armistice terms, which he said could not have been accepted by any government in possession of its liberty.

"France mobilized in September, 1939, all men between 20 and 47 years old, namely, about 3,000,000 men, altho this hit her economic and financial life seriously. Britain did not mobilize any one over 28. On the eve of the war Britain was supposed to send an expeditionary corps of 26 divisions to the continent but the British only sent 10 divisions, or about 200,000 men. At the time of the battle of Belgium, Gen. Weygand urged the British to increase their forces on the continent in order to enable him to counterattack, but the British did not increase their forces and retreated north so as to embark and defend their isle.

Claim British Gave Little Aid.

"In the course of the battle of France only three English divisions fought with French troops, according to a statement made on June 19 by Prime Minister Churchill. As a result, the battle of France presented itself under the following conditions: A nation of 40,000,000 was confronted with an empire numbering, since its conquests of 1939, 110,000,000 inhabitants. A considerable part of the French army was kept in the Alps and in Tunis against an Italian attack. The best material was lost in Belgium after the retreat toward Dunkirk. Thus, one one side, were 150 German divisions and 11 armored divisions with 3,000 trucks and 5,000 planes, against 60 French divisions, 500 trucks, and 3 English divisions.

"Despite this enormous proportion, resistance was most obstinate during one week of the battle of France and during the first 48 hours French soldiers held firmly. In the course of the war the approximate French losses of killed, wounded, and those taken prisoner were estimated at 1,500,000 men. In order to remain loyal toward England and, despite the facts enumerated above, France accepted the hard armistice clauses in order to obtain from Germany article 8 of the armistice terms.

"According to article 8, the French navy is to be demobilized and disarmed, and the reich government assures the French government it has no intention of using the French navy for its own purposes during wartime. The reich government assures the French government it has no intention to raise at the peace conference the slightest claim to the French navy.

"Churchill gave the assurance at a supreme war council meeting on June 15 that if France did not deliver her navy to the Germans and excluded this in the armistice, Britain would not hold it against the French if they concluded a separate peace under an unavoidable necessity."

SEARCH PRESSED FOR LUMBERMAN, MISSING 3 DAYS

Disappears After Leaving South Side Office.

Detectives of the missing persons bureau were striving last night to learn the whereabouts of Elwood J. Carr, 28 years old, a prosperous southside lumber dealer who has been missing since Thursday morning.

Carr left the office of his firm, the Carr-Moody Lumber company at 3039 South Halsted street, with $900 in currency and several hundred dollars more in checks. He told office employés he was going to deposit the money in the First National bank.

Fails to Arrive at Bank.

Investigation disclosed he did not arrive at the bank and did not keep two appointments, made for Thursday, to discuss business with customers. Police have found no one who saw him after he left the office.

Elbert Moody, his partner, told Detective John Barry the company was in good financial condition and there was no apparent reason for Carr's voluntary disappearance.

"Carr was quiet," said Moody. "He did not drink or smoke. We are making an audit, just as a matter of routine, but I believe everything is all right."

Wife Is Mystified.

Carr's wife, Mary Elizabeth, said in their home at 12423 South 71st street, Palos Heights, that their home life was happy and Carr had not mentioned any intention of going away. She said he was devoted to their children—John, 3 years old, and Judith Anne, 1 year old.

"I am mystified," said Mrs. Carr. "I'm sure he would not leave of his own free will. It is barely possible he is a victim of amnesia. He suffered a brain concussion in an automobile accident when he was a boy but never had shown any effects of it."

Two bandits who curbed the automobile of George W. LeVett, a building contractor, at 51st street and Drexel avenue last night took jewels valued at $7,700 from LeVett's wife, Helen, and $80 in cash from the contractor.

The LeVetts live at 5496 Hyde Park boulevard. They were returning home after attending a show in the loop. LeVett told Detectives Louis Schillig and Joseph Lynch that he saved $100 by fast talking. When the robbers came to his wallet, containing that sum, LeVett said he had to take an important business trip today and had no way of getting funds for it with the banks closed.

"Okay, keep the chicken feed," said one of the bandits. "We got the rocks. They're what we were after." Mrs. LeVett surrendered a platinum diamond ring worth $7,000 and a $700 diamond wrist watch.

SIDE OF THEIR HOUSE IS NIBBLED AWAY BY WOODPECKER HORDE

Cortland, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP).—A new siding was placed on the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sampson today after the Sampsons threw up their hands in despair at a blitzkrieg staged by woodpeckers.

"Why, it has been terrible," Mrs. Sampson complained. "They start at daylight, six or eight of them at a time, and bang away until dusk. The folks who lived here before us shot 25 or 30, but just as many more came back. They have been busy since last March."

Sampson admitted he tried a gun, and also hung poison meat on the walls.

"You can shoot away all you want at them," he said, "but before you are inside the house they are hammering away again. As far as poisoned salt pork is concerned, they are too smart to touch it."

U. S. LINER SAVES 64 FROM BRITISH SHIP IN ATLANTIC

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—The American export liner Exochorda radioed today that she had rescued "all 64 members" of the crew of the 5,199 ton British freighter Saint Agnes, sunk 700 miles west of Lisbon.

Capt. Wenzel Habel's terse message said:

"Rescued all 64 members of crew from S. S. Saint Agnes. Now proceeding direct to Lisbon."

A. A. SPRAGUE'S DAUGHTER HURT IN 4 CAR CRASH

Miss Laura Sprague, 30 years old, daughter of Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the Chicago Plan commission and receiver for the "L" lines, was injured slightly yesterday in an automobile accident involving four cars at Simpson street and Cicero avenue in Niles Center.

Roy Hinze, 930 Chicago avenue, Evanston, east bound in Simpson street, stopped his auto for the traffic light. A car hit it from behind, however, and forced it into the path of Cicero avenue traffic. Miss Sprague, northbound in Cicero, stopped suddenly to avoid hitting Hinze's machine. Her car then was struck from behind by that of John H. Peck, 3045 West 53d place. Miss Sprague suffered a scalp laceration and bruises, and was taken to St. Francis hospital, Evanston.

State police arrested the driver whose car hit Hinze's. He is Paul Hildebrandt, a bartender of Palatine.

SPOTS BOMBER IN SEARCHLIGHT'S GLARE; DOWNS IT

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP).—Caught in the glare of British searchlights, a German Heinkel 111 bomber was shot down in flames by a British fighter in last night's air raid on London.

The fighter was cruising about London in the moonlight when its pilot saw the Heinkel in the concentrated beams of searchlights several miles to the north. The Briton pursued for 20 minutes. When the fighter opened fire the bomber dropped its bombs to lighten its load.

A burst from the Heinkel's rear gun caught the British ship's windscreen and wing, but the fighter's bullets had gone home and the bomber dropped flaming from the sky.

Two Weeks of Unmatchable Furniture Values

Offering Savings of 25% to 60%

Charles Tobey, Sept. 10, 1831
Frank B. Tobey, Sept. 15, 1833

CHARLES TOBEY came from Cape Cod, Massachusetts to found this business in 1856. His was the only furniture establishment to survive the panic of 1857 and it has been Chicago's oldest furniture store ever since.

Frank Tobey, who was born 107 years ago today, joined his brother in 1858 and the business has been owned and managed by the founding family without interruption for more than 84 years.

The Tobey brothers came of Pilgrim stock and were thoroughly imbued with Puritan ideas of honest value. Their trade was built on the belief that business would go to those who gave the most quality for the money.

This guiding principle has been carried down through the years and America's quality factories recognize that Tobey's sells good furniture at the lowest prices obtainable anywhere.

In order to make these facts still more widely appreciated by the consuming public we mark the two weeks following the birthdays of the founding brothers by the unmatchable values of the Founder's Sale.

Our purchase of the Scholle store a year ago has given us a more central location and other advantages but has left unchanged the Tobey ownership and management.

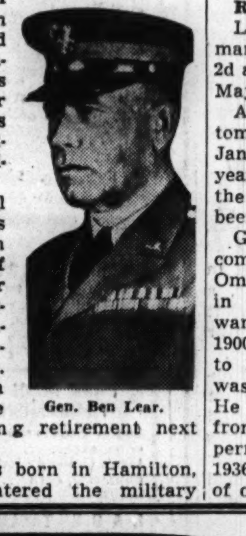
GEN. BEN LEAR IS ASSIGNED TO 6TH CORPS AREA

Ford Is to Go on Leave; Retires in January.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—The war department today announced the assignment of Maj. Gen. Ben Lear to succeed Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford as commander of the 6th corps area with headquarters at Chicago.



Gen. Ben Lear.

Gen. Lear will take over his new duties upon the expiration of his present tour of foreign service in the Panama canal department. Gen. Ford will go on leave of absence Oct. 1, pending retirement next January.

Gen. Lear was born in Hamilton, Canada, and entered the military service of the United States as an enlisted man of the 1st Colorado volunteer infantry during the war with Spain, serving as a first sergeant from May, 1898, to March 31, 1899. He was commissioned a second lieutenant of volunteers on April 1, 1899, and was appointed a commissioned officer in the regular army on June 12, 1901.

Fought in Manila.

During his service as an enlisted man and an officer of volunteers, Gen. Lear participated in the capture of Manila and in numerous engagements against Philippine insurgents.

During the world war Gen. Lear was a member of the war department general staff in Washington, D. C.

Gen. Lear is a graduate of the mounted service school, the school of the line, the general staff school, and the army war college. He has been awarded the silver star.

RETIREMENT IS AUTOMATIC.

Lieut. Gen. Stanley Ford took command of the 6th corps area and the 2d army here Nov. 7, 1938, succeeding Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum.

Altho Gen. Ford will reach the automatic retirement age of 64 years on Jan. 30, 1941, he appears to be many years younger. His hair is silver and the only wrinkles in his face have been caused by smiles.

Gen. Ford came to Chicago from command of the 7th corps area in Omaha, Neb. He served in the army in Cuba in the Spanish-American war, in the Philippine Islands from 1900 to 1902, and in China from 1914 to 1917. During the world war he was chief of staff of the 27th division. He was military attaché to Paris from 1930 to 1932. He received the permanent rank of major general in 1936. He is married and the father of one daughter.

CHOCTAW CHIEF AVOIDS SUICIDE IN TRIBAL TRIAL

Freed in Death of Rival Under Ancient Law.

Macon, Miss., Sept. 14 [Special].—In a colorful setting teeming with historic background and modern drama, an Indian chieftain was tried for murder today before a Choctaw tribal court. His acquittal relieved him of carrying out an ancient Choctaw law that he must kill himself or die at the hand of his son.

A large audience of whites and Indians was attracted to the spectacular ceremony, the first such trial in the 110 year history of paleface residence in Noxubee county. More than 500 Mississippians drove over 20 miles of dusty, back country roads to attend the hearing.

The site of the trial was the grave of a rival tribal chief, at the forks of Dancing Rabbit creek.

Land Deeded Away.

This is the historic treaty ground where in 1830 the Choctaws deeded to the United States government the lands that now form 25 of Mississippi's 82 counties. It is the most sacred spot in the Choctaw country.

The defendant is Chief Cameron Wesley, 56 years old, a grandfather and head of a tribe of 50 members. Last June 16 he fatally shot Chief Evein Tubbee, leader of a smaller tribe of the dwindling race. It was the first Indian killing in Norubee county history.

A jury of white farmers found Chief Wesley not guilty in the Circuit court at Macon two weeks ago. During the trial before Judge John C. Stennis, the courthouse was crowded with Indian men, women and children, in costumes colorful as a tropic sunset, who rallied to the support of their chief.

Two Defenses Only.

But after the paleface jury acquitted him of the murder charge, it was learned the chief still had to face trial for his life before his tribe. It was feared that trial might be even more difficult, for Choctaw law recognizes only accident and war as defenses for killing. Chief Wesley was freed by the white men on his plea of self defense.

Standing today beside the grave of the man he had killed, the chief testified long and solemnly in his native tongue. The court was comprised of Eunice Wallace, 70 years old, queen of the tribe, and Johnnie Cotton, tribal overseer.

Stands Forth Acquitted.

After nearly half an hour of steady talking, Chief Wesley concluded with the words: "I have spoken." He folded his arms and stared into space during a strict silence that marked the formal wait for a possible accuser to come forth.

When no one spoke against him, indicating his acquittal, members of the tribe rushed forward and gripped his hand. In their enthusiasm they elected him chief of the tribe for life, and placed him name in nomination for chief of all the Choctaws in Mississippi, to be chosen at the tribal election in October. Then they held an afternoon sunlight dance, and in in the evening a formal war dance.

MYSTERIOUS SHELL FIRED OVER BOAT IN LONG ISLAND SOUND

New York, Sept. 14 [Special].—As the 22 foot cutter type sailboat, Rockit II. was crossing Long Island sound near Bridgeport, Conn., today, a shell screeched across her bow and exploded about 100 yards away.

On the boat were the owner, George Seward, an official of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, his wife and their 3 year old daughter, and Edward C. Hayward. Those aboard were completely mystified, and considerably shocked. They have no idea where the shell came from. Nor could officials of the coast guard, national guard, officials of arms plants in the area, or Bridgeport police help clear up the bombardment.

"We were listening to the radio about what was going on in London," Hayward said. "The screech came first, then, a split second later, the explosion about two points off the starboard bow. It blew a tower of water 20 or 30 feet in the air. There wasn't a boat or an airplane in sight.

As to the possibility that the object was a meteorite, it was said at the Hayden planetarium that a meteorite, on striking water, would not explode.

DISCOVER BRITISH LEAD IN RACE TO SWAY ARGENTINA

Reason: English Money and London Market.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIR5S, Argentina, Sept. 6 [By Air Mail].—There are 2,000,000 Italians, 300,000 Germans, and another 300,000 Spaniards, Poles, and Japanese living in Argentina today, according to governmental census reports. There also are 50,000 British citizens and 4,000 Americans who make their homes and commercial headquarters in the country.

Of these groups—if Argentine investigators and personal observations are to be trusted—the English are by far the most successful and active in establishing the sort of influence, sympathy, and power that in other circumstances has been termed "fifth column" work. If there is a fifth column in Argentina it is an English column, and not a Nazi, Fascist or communist unit.

Alert for "Isms."

These conclusions were reached by Argentine federal agents, who recently reported to a congressional committee after a study of foreign influences in this republic. The findings agree with independent investigations made by American consular and diplomatic agents who have been watching alertly for signs of penetration by the "ims" here.

The sinister plotting, the seizure of individuals by police, and other indications of beneath-the-surface activities that cropped up in other countries has been entirely absent here, the report showed. The axis group here has been working to direct sympathy toward Germany and Italy, but these efforts as well as those of the English have been open and unconcealed.

Much of the British strength is traceable to investments in Argentina, and the fact that England is Argentina's best customer. There are 2 billion dollars of English funds invested in Argentine government bonds, in the railroads here and in public utilities such as power and light companies, traction lines and bus companies—most of which are in the state of Buenos Aires.

British Propaganda Obvious.

The British propaganda is of the most obvious sort. The two English language newspapers of Buenos Aires—the Herald and the Standard—are frankly engaged in winning the utmost in Argentine support. These papers print only Reuters news dispatches and British official communiques, and thus give only the English side of the war news.

Both papers are filled with advertisments from British importers and exporters, and English business men in Argentina urging Argentinians to "buy British" for quality. Both newspapers are conducting public contribution chests for the purchases of fighting airplanes for the British air force.

Since the beginning of the war the British embassy staff has been greatly enlarged and patriotic work of all sorts is cleared thru this agency. This includes arrangements for Red Cross, fund earning dances, teas and entertainments, the enlistment of volunteers for British forces, the procurement of Argentine beef for military commissaries, etc.

Ambassador in Charge.

Also from the embassy comes material for radio addresses broadcast thruout Argentina under British sponsorship, for news dispatches to the Spanish language newspapers of the republic, and English articles for the Argentine weekly and monthly magazines. Sir Esmond Ovey, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Argentina, in fact, heads up an efficient propaganda bureau.

The British never fail to make the most of their opportunities to use their sailors and warships that are patroling the South Atlantic for propaganda purposes. When the light cruiser Hawkins arrived at the Buenos Aires docks in the river Plate recently the English turned out with bands, an array of diplomatic and military officials from the Argentine government, and the ambassador to greet the officers and men.

To be certain that the sailors caused no disorders in the city they were ordered ashore in pairs and each pair was placed under the wing of an English family. Buenos Aires for the next three days was full of loyal English wives and daughters carefully guiding the sailors away from the pitfalls of the metropolis.

Answer Own Questions.

While the Hawkins was in port the two English newspapers in editorials commented on the fact that Argentina is closer in spirit and in distance to London than to Washington, D. C., which is some 8,000 miles away. They asked the question:

"How is the United States to defend Argentina when she has her own Atlantic and Pacific coast lines to watch?"

The reply—also in the editorials—was that the United States has her hands full of her own defense and Argentina already is being guarded by the British fleet.

German efforts in Argentina are much more modest. Virtually denied the newspapers because of Argentine sympathy for the British cause, the Germans depend upon their short wave broadcasts from Berlin and upon German propaganda films cleverly disguised as newsreels to put their side across.

Offers Nazi Newsreels.

Thru the German embassy in Buenos Aires every motion picture theater in the Argentine is offered weekly fresh UFA [official German cinema company] reels. The cost of projection merely covers the mail or messenger service required to deliver the films. These reels are popular with theater owners because fully 50 per cent of all Argentine theaters are devoted entirely to newsreel programs and the showing of Walt Disney cartoons.

Show U-Boats in Action.

All these films deal with German military might. I saw several that showed submarines in action against merchant ships. They were filmed from the bridges of submarines and showed scenes of the German gunners shelling and sinking several British merchant boats. Other scenes showed a crew at their posts, and again gathered around mess tables singing to accordion music and drinking beer.

Another film was a record of a raid over the North sea by a squadron of Heinkel 111 bombers. This showed the bombers on patrol and the crews at work inside the planes. An English freighter was sighted and the camera man caught the dropping of bombs on the boat. Then the camera showed how the bombers dived on the boat and machine gunned it as it burned.

Get Berlin News Dispatches.

By wireless the Germans receive daily a 2,000 word dispatch from the DNB, official German news agency in Berlin. This is distributed free from the embassy, as in other countries where the Germans are active. The communiques, in Spanish, are mailed thruout Argentina, to private citizens, to news services, to business houses, and to government officials. I began receiving the dispatches at my hotel the day after I arrived in Buenos Aires and was assured that most incoming passengers from boats and airplanes received these reports.

In recent months—since the suspension of the United States trade agreement with Japan—the Japanese in Argentina have intensified efforts to gain good will and to find new markets for Japanese goods. At this time there are between 12,000 and 20,000 Japanese in the country, most of them engaged in agricultural pursuits.

One of the first moves in this campaign came in May, 1940, when the Japanese legation was raised to the rank of an embassy and its staff more than doubled. About the same time the Japanese invited a picked group of Argentine business men to visit Tokio to study Japan's economic and commercial activities and try to discover markets for Argentine products there. This "mission" still is in Japan.

The Japanese have not attempted to conceal the fact that they are trying to find markets for their own goods and sources of supply to offset those lost in the United States.

One of Japan's strongest shipping companies provides freight and passenger routes from Japan thru the Panama canal, and down the east coast of South America and thence across to Africa.

REPUBLICAN

High Spot of F.D.R.'s Career!

BY CARLISLE BARGERSON.

(Assigned by Republican National Committee).

1882—Mr. Roosevelt was born, Jan. 30, of a long line of aristocratic and landed gentry. As pointed out by the liberal economist, John T. Flynn, in his recently published "Country Squire in the White House," he is not of predominantly Dutch blood as is so generally believed.

President Roosevelt.

By the time he came along the family had been so diluted that he has more than 90 per cent English blood. He was not permitted to play with the youngsters of the countryside and up until the time he was 14 years old he had tutors every year. In addition he was taken to Europe annually.

At the age of 14 he entered the highly exclusive Groton school, which Flynn describes as more English than Eaton or Harrow. From Groton he entered Harvard. Flynn describes him as not a studious young man, but one whose main interest in life seemed to be boats. He was generally looked upon as a good fellow and joined several artistocratic clubs. His pampering mother lived at Cambridge to watch over him.

In 1904 he entered Columbia law school. He did not graduate but subsequently passed the bar examination and was admitted to the bar.

Elected to State Senate.

1910—He had been living the life of a young country squire, hobnobbing with his fashionable friends, and spending considerable time "with boats" at the family summer home, Campobello, Maine. In an outbreak against Republican rule, he was swept into the state senate at Albany.

1913—Woodrow Wilson had been elected President because Mr. Roosevelt's cousin, Theodore, had split the Republican party. Franklin had met Wilson and his secretary, Joe Tumulty, and the Democratic leaders wanted to make use of the Roosevelt name. He was appointed assistant secretary of the navy.

He very soon joined up with the English and French set in Washington, the set that talked this country's "duty" to enter the war from morning until late in the night. He kept Josephus Daniels, the navy secretary, in a constant stew because of his youthful impetuousness.

His Fantastic Business Career.

1920—The Democrats, knowing they were washed up, wanted to use the name "Roosevelt" again. They nominated him for Vice President.

1921-1929—THESE ARE THE YEARS OF HIS BUSINESS CAREER. As fantastic as anything in that period; as fantastic as his two terms in the Presidency.

First, a yachting friend gave him a job as vice president of the Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland, at $25,000 a year. He did very little, if any, work. The name "Roosevelt" was again paying dividends. Along with this he lent his name to a law firm.

But, notwithstanding the wealth of his family, he found it pretty hard going in the wealthier set in which he moved. He wanted to make money—and fast. He joined in a scheme to take advantage of the skyrocket inflation in Germany. The firm, United European Investors, Ltd., was formed in Canada because of the blue sky laws in this country. Its purpose was to deal in German marks—to buy and sell them and invest in German industries.

According to the New York Times, there were 2 billion dollars' worth of German marks in this country in 1922, or a trillion marks. Alva Johnston, writing in the Saturday Evening Post in October, 1936, says this firm was liquidated in 1924 with a profit of more than 200 per cent to investors. The total value of marks invested, according to Johnston, had been only about $100,000. There are other authorities who say that thousands of Americans of German ancestry in the middle west, who were not on the inside, took an awful shellacking.

Joins Slot Machine Business.

Mr. Roosevelt's most interesting venture, however, was to "lend his name" to and become a director of Camco, the Consolidated Automatic Merchandising corporation. He was a director only during the promotional stages before becoming governor of New York. This enterprise undertook to introduce 1,500,000 slot machines in American stores to do away with the "drudgery and necessity" of salesmen.

On its prospectus bearing Mr. Roosevelt's name it promised investors that the stock would jump 3,000 per cent in five years, that the earnings in the fifth year would be $18,719,303. The public invested $11,000,000. Camco folded up in 1933, having lost more than $4,000,000.

In 1927, the firm of Photomaton, Inc., with the names of Mr. Roosevelt and Henry Morgenthau listed as directors, circularized investors with a plan for robot photographers. The circular promised 250 photomatons the following year earning $4,000 apiece and said the total earnings would be $1,000,000 in that year. Photomation, Inc., went into receivership in 1930.

Mr. Roosevelt and Henry were also in on a deal to erect dirigibles for commercial service between New York and Chicago. But it never got started.

DEMOCRATIC

Third Term in Reverse.

(Authorized by Democratic National Committee.)

When a Republican denounces a third term as a violation of tradition and a step towards dictatorship, he usually means a third term for the present occupant of the White House. The argument has become a handy form of the "get-rid-of-Roosevelt" outcry with a charming historical setting to give it validity.

Senator William E. Borah.

The Republicans have no monopoly in manning the breastworks for the deathless traditions of the founding fathers. Only 12 years ago a movement was well underway to persuade Calvin Coolidge to try his luck on another White House term and the Democrats were after him in full voice—splitting the heavens with their mournful protests.

Four more years of Mr. Coolidge? Precedent would be shattered, democracy undone, and the American way of life torn and twisted beyond repair. A call went out for all good patriots to come to the aid of their country [or party, depending upon the viewpoint].

A sturdy band of G. O. P. statesmen quickly put an end to that hysterical nonsense. The late Chief Justice William Howard Taft said "it would be very satisfactory" if Coolidge would run again. Herbert Hoover said "I still believe, as I stated in Chicago two weeks ago, that President Coolidge should be renominated and reelected."

When the silent Mr. Coolidge decided otherwise [he never discussed the third term issue], Mr. Hoover graciously consented to make the supreme sacrifice and run himself. A few unworthy souls said that he was already in the race while outwardly asking the "chief" to run again.

The late Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin was against three terms and he introduced a resolution in the senate to put that body on record. A majority of the Democrats, perhaps with a healthy respect for the Coolidge vote-getting ability, supported the La Follette resolution—and a vast majority of Republicans voted in the negative. Among the latter group was Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, the present Vice Presidential nominee of the G. O. P. He had the company of 21 other Republicans including such stalwart old guardsmen as Fess, Moses. Watson, Bingham, and Willis.

Perhaps It Was the Stock Market.

Very little should be made of the fact that McNary disagrees with his running mate, Wendell Willkie, on the third term business. They have a quaint habit of disagreeing on major issues.

A few captious persons have suggested that Coolidge served only one term and part of another so that his renomination would not have conflicted with the third term tradition. That argument has about as much validity as the one to the effect that President Roosevelt had one term cut short by the constitutional amendment changing the date of inauguration. Theodore Roosevelt served less than two full terms but the "tradition" bogeyman was used against him for all it was worth.

A newspaper poll of 200 Republican papers in 1928 showed the vast majority of them favoring another term for Coolidge. One newspaper polled the Republican national committee and more than two-thirds of the members wanted four more years of Cal.

The foregoing suggests the very obvious comment that the third term question depends not so much on how you view as when you view it.

Wishful thinking is very often found lurking in the deepest convictions. When the stock ticker was humming a merry tune in 1928, with stocks going up, up, and still higher up, it was easy for the armchair patriots to decide that what the country neded was not a good five cent cigar but four more blissful years of Coolidge prosperity. Tradition be hanged—fellows like Washington and Jefferson just didn't know what was needed to keep conditions stable in a big business country.

What Senator Borah Said.

The late Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, during debate on the La Follette resolution, sensibly suggested that the issue was one for the people to decide.

"I have always felt," he said, "that it is perfectly safe to leave this to the judgment of the people. There are exigencies which might justify a third term. I am not so sure but that I would have voted for a third term for Abraham Lincoln if his second election had been for a third term instead of a second."

Despite their will to believe so, no Republican actually thinks that a third term would mean the end of democratic government and the beginning of dictatorship. The man in the White House is checked constantly by the courts, by a congress much out of sympathy with his policies, by the newspapers and by the all-powerful weapon of public opinion. The first act of a dictator is to ABOLISH ELECTIONS—not to seek the suffrage of the people.

The question boils down to the same old argument. Which precedent shall we break—the third term tradition or the precedent against putting an inexperienced man in the White House? Again we remind you that every President in history has been tested in some post of public responsibility prior to entering the White House. Wendell Willkie has had no public experience whatever.

'Airplane in Sea' Southeast of Iceland, Radio Reports

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Mackay radio said today it had picked up a message from a British radio station reporting "one aircraft in sea" about 200 miles southeast of Reykjavik, Iceland. The message gave no details. The position given is along the route taken by some of the American bombing planes being flown from Canada to England.

CARDENAS RULES GEN. CAMACHO IS MEXICAN WINNER

Gives Him Certificate as President Elect.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 14 (AP).—Election of Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho as president of Mexico, already confirmed by congress, was certified last night in a decree signed by President Lazaro Cardenas.

Avila Camacho, administration candidate in the turbulent July elections, is scheduled to take the oath of office on Nov. 30. His election has been challenged by followers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, the independent candidate, who have established their own congress and announced their intention to install Almazan as president.

President Cardenas was scheduled to leave tonight for Dolores Hidalgo, in Guanajuato state, to participate tomorrow in ceremonies celebrating Mexico's 130th anniversary of independence.

Oil Workers Vote to Strike.

The petroleum workers' union's executive committee announced that employés in the industry's central zone, embracing administrative and refinery workers in the Mexico City area, had voted to strike in protest against economy moves in the government controled industry.

A committee member said the date of the strike would be fixed after the committee consulted workers in other zones in an attempt to obtain their support.

The vote, taken at a meeting of 3,000 workers, will affect 5,000 employés in the central zone, and union sources predicted the rest of the industry's 18,000 members would join the strike.

New Federation Planned.

The central meeting also voted to withdraw from the confederation of Mexican labor [CTM] and organize a separate federation.

The union charged that the oil administration had decided to use a federal labor board authorization to break a contract with the workers as a lever to enforce President Cardenas' economy program. Cardenas insisted upon immediate moves to put the expropriated industry on a paying basis.

SCALISE PRISON TERM WILL BE HEARD SEPT. 27

Convicted of Theft and Forgery by Jury.

New York, Sept. 14 [Special].—George Scalise, former ganster president of the A. F. of L. building Service Employés union, paced a cell in the Tombs prison tonight while his attorney made plans for an appeal and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey hailed Scalise's conviction as a public service.

George Scalise leaving court. [A.P. Wirephoto.]

Early this morning a jury in General Session court returned a verdict finding Scalise guilty of theft from the union treasury and forgery for submitting criminally erroneous expense accounts to the international offices in Chicago. The jury disagreed on five grand larceny counts. For conviction on five counts Scalise faces a possible prison term of 30 years.

"The jury in the Scalise case," said Dewey's statement, "has performed a distinct public service in ridding the community of a scoundrel who shamed the good name of organized labor. By their verdict another criminal has been driven out of the labor movement and union members have been freed from the control of a gang leader who regarded the union treasury as his personal property."

Assails Gang Connection.

Scalise's attorney, Martin W. Littleton, announced that he planned an appeal. He contended that connecting Scalise with Chicago and New York gangsters had been prejudicial.

Judge Jacob Gould Schurman Jr., who presided at the trial, thanked the jurors for their verdict. He set Sept. 27 as the date for the sentencing of Scalise who some years ago served a four and a half year term in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta on a white slavery charge.

Dewey's office said today it had not decided whether it would press for the sentencing of Scalise as a second offender. Doubt exists as to whether the pandering offense on which Scalise was convicted can be considered a felony under New York state laws, thus giving today's conviction the status of a second offense case and double sentence.

60 Year Term Possible.

If Scalise is sentenced as a second offender he faces the possibility of a maximum of 60 years in prison—20 years for theft and 40 years for forgery. If Judge Schurman sentences him as a first offender, he will be liable to half of these penalties. The minimum sentences the court could fix would be 10 years, if judged a second offender, or five years as a first offender.

The defense contended that Scalise was entitled to the money he was accused of stealing from scrubwomen, porters, elevator operators, and window washers. Counsel argued that Scalise received the money as a result of an oral agreement made with the late Jerry Horan of Chicago. Under this agreement Scalise claimed he was to receive half of all dues.

The prosecution produced witnesses, however, who testified that Capone gangsters and an eastern mob forced the union to accept Scalise as boss so they could loot its treasury.

SCALISE VERDICT HAILED IN FIGHT ON LABOR GANGS

Conviction Is Termed Victory Over Racket.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

The conviction of George Scalise yesterday in New York City was hailed by Chicago officials, civic leaders, and labor spokesmen as a victory over gangster elements which have invaded labor unions.

Scalise, a hoodlum and pander who formerly was president of the Building Service Employés' International union, was found guilty of stealing the union's funds. He faces a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison.

Those engaged in Chicago's campaign against union racketeers said an important victory had been won in New York and would be duplicated in Chicago.

Suit for Funds Planned.

One of the first steps to be taken now, it was said, will be a civil suit to see whether any of the money stolen by Scalise can be recovered. Scalise's reign as czar of building service employés thruout the country was ascribed to the muscle and guns of the Chicago gang of Frank [The Enforcer] Nitti.

State's Attorney Courtney, who worked hand in hand with District Attorney Dewey of New York, was jubilant over the conviction of Scalise. Bertram J. Cahn, president of the Chicago Crime commission and spokesman for several commercial groups, said one of the objectives of the racket fighters had been reached in the conviction.

The attitude of local labor spokesmen was best expressed, according to Victor Olander, secretary treasurer of the Illinois Federation of Labor, in the language of the federation's executive board.

Gangster Menace Cited.

The board, in its report to the 58th annual convention which begins tomorrow in Rockford, under the heading, "The Gangster Menace," said:

"The organized labor movement was established for the purpose of obtaining improvements in the lives of the working people—the men, women, and children of labor. It has no other objective and no other reason for its existence.

"The intrusion of persons of known ill repute into positions of leadership in any division of the movement, no matter how few, is a matter of concern to all organizations, for it serves to cast a shadow that obscures the public view of the movement as a whole. There is no such being as a 'racketeer' or 'gangster' operating solely within a labor organization. Wherever he appears he is a partner of some sort with unscrupulous political or business interests—usually with both.

One Racketeer, One Too Many.

"That in itself is sufficient reason for keeping such persons out of the ranks of organized labor. The evils which exist in the fields of politics and business, whether as men or methods, have no place in trade unions. Even a single 'racketeer" or 'gangster' is one too many.

"The Illinois State Federation of Labor has been outspoken on this subject on several occasions. The executive board again recommends reaffirmation of its report on this question as adopted at the Decatur convention in 1932 and as approved by succeeding conventions."

After Dewey had obtained Scalise's indictment, the executive board of the international union met here and voted to oust Scalise from the presidency. Scalise thereupon resigned. At a subsequent meeting William L. McFetridge of Chicago was chosen international president.

Treasury Looting Revealed.

McFetridge was in the Mayo Brothers' clinic in Rochester, Minn., yesterday for an operation. He sent a telegram Friday to the executive board of the Elevator Operators and Starters' union here directing the board to take no action to elect a successor to Mathew Taylor, elevator union president who died Sept. 6. The elevator local is affiliated with the building employés' international.

Before his death Taylor revealed that his union treasury had been looted. He accused Thomas J. Burke, president of the Chicago Theatrical Janitors' union and first vice president of building service union, of having extorted money from him, supposedly for the gang syndicate headed by Nitti.

It was reported that Burke, who is said to have been Scalise's right hand man in Chicago and to be a pal of Danny Stanton, a labor racketeer linked with Nitti, was seeking to put one of his henchmen in Taylor's place. McFetridge's telegram blocked any such move, it was said.

Cahn Describes Successes.

"Two months ago Oscar G. Mayer, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, headed a delegation that called on Mayor Kelly," President Cahn of the crime commission said yesterday. "State's Attorney Courtney and I were present.

"We planned a course of action intended to drive gangsters out of labor unions. Considerable has been accomplished since that meeting. I believe we have headed off gang seizure of twenty-five unions formerly headed by the late Mike Carrozzo. The cost of paving to the city has been reduced by 15 to 25 per cent because of the action taken.

"We plan a new meeting within a few days. We will have something to report. We recommended constant action against the gambling resorts of the Nitti and Stanton groups and we wish to renew that recommendation at this time. Those criminal gangsters should not be permitted to finance their attacks on labor unions from the enormous profits of their horse race betting establishments."

Baby Dies Despite Mother's Frantic Race to Hospital

John Koeller, 18 months old, died yesterday despite a frantic race to Swedish Covenant hospital from his home at 4838 Winnemac avenue. His mother, Mrs. Edith Koeller, discovered the baby in convulsions, and after an aunt living nearby aided in reviving him the two women drove to Lawrence and Elston avenues. Unable to find physicians in offices there they appealed to Traffic Policeman Peter Florkowski, who rode on the car's running board to the hospital, clearing traffic for them. The infant was dead when they arrived.

WHITING MAYOR BLAMES POLITICS FOR SEWAGE LAG

Officials of Whiting, Ind., which has been singled out as the only one of four Indiana cities on Lake Michigan failing to coöperate in a campaign against pollution of the lake and Chicago's water supply, blamed Democratic favoritism yesterday for their inability to obtain a sewage disposal plant.

Mayor James McNamara of Whiting said application for a million dollar WPA project for a plant there had been filed several months before the application of East Chicago. That city, however, was awarded a $2,344,614 project Friday. Mayor McNamara said the Whiting application had been denied on the ground officials had failed to agree on a site for the plant. East Chicago, however, still lacks a site, he said.

"My administration is Republican," McNamara said. "That of Mayor Frank Migas of East Chicago is Democratic."

A new four million dollar sewage treatment plant recently was put in operation in Gary. Hammond will start operating a new three million dollar system in six months.

Rainbow Garden of Giant TULIPS $2

Prepaid 600 miles

Thirty bulbs, six each of five named varieties separately bagged and labeled, embracing these colors:

RED, PINK, ORANGE, YELLOW, LAVENDER

With war shutting out bulbs from Holland, tulips are a rarity this fall. These bulbs were grown in our own fields in Oregon, where we have the largest American planting. In several years of tests they proved equal or superior to imported Dutch bulbs. They are tall, giant, Darwin, Cottage and Breeder varieties, without rivals in the spring garden. With tulip bulbs so scarce few gardens will enjoy their beauty next spring. Make yours one of these few!

15 Daffodils, prepaid, $1

Daffodils are the first major flowers to bloom in spring. They last for years and usually multiply. A purchase of bulbs should pay in bloom for a lifetime.

LOCOED HENRY WALLACE.

Mr. Wallace's friends and apologists, noting that he's talking queerly, say that he isn't nutty; he only seems to be. He hasn't been at ease since the Democratic convention nominated him at the dictate of the White House and then booed him off the scene. He doesn't want to talk about the farms, and so he talks about Hitler and about the good metropolitan political corruptionists who are for the third term and for him.

The explanation that Mr. Wallace is merely troubled by the perplexities of his campaign does not get very far. Mr. Wallace is the best judge of whether he can defend himself before farm audiences if he talks about their business and what he's done to it, but his talk about Hitler and his whitewashing of the dirty city machines of the New Deal would suggest that he's not only emotionally unbalanced, but a bit woozy mentally.

His statement that a vote for Willkie is a vote for Hitler couldn't come from a man who had much of a mind or was making any use of what he had. No sane man would even intimate that any considerable number of Americans favored the Nazi dictator. No reasonable man would import the word "appeasement" and use it in an effort to smear people who do not agree with him. Americans have nothing to appease. We apprehend danger from Nazi success and realize that it has been greatly increased by the New Deal's provocations and by its failure to put the country in a state of defense.

Mr. Wallace said that some of the bitter attacks on Mr. Roosevelt's program "were directly inspired by the agents of Hitler in this country." The strongest opposition to Mr. Roosevelt and to his vest pocket candidate for Vice President comes from people who know that the greatest danger to the country in foreign affairs and domestic affairs alike is offered by the present administration and the threat of a third term. They know that the American system is more immediately threatened by the conspiracy to plant a dictatorship here, with a war, if necessary, than it is by any developments abroad. There may be dangers there, but the first one the country will meet is the one here.

People oppose Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Wallace because they don't want to take chances with an American dictatorship. They don't want to set a man up above the law and submit to his mandates. They don't like Hitler and they don't want anything of his type, with anything like his ambitions, acquiring the authority inseparable from the third term. Mr. Roosevelt is a domineering man, Mr. Wallace is an unbalanced one, and sane people do not want the one again as President or the other as Vice President.

EXCESS POLITICS TAX.

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi has again given a demonstration of his statesmanship. The house of representatives under heavy New Deal pressure approved an excess profits tax which was a monstrosity. An exceedingly complicated measure, it was driven thru the house with only an hour's consideration. Congressmen voted for it who had no opportunity to find out what was in it.

Blind partisanship called for quick adoption of the house bill by the senate. There was a patriotic duty to overhaul the bill completely. Under the leadership of Senator Harrison the senate committee went to work on the bill and has reported to the senate an entirely new version. It may not be the best possible bill, but it is a vast improvement.

The house bill set up two radically opposed theories. One of the theories was that earnings realized as a result of the war, directly or indirectly, should be heavily taxed. The other was that, paying no attention to the war, if a business should earn more than a small percentage of its capital, much of the excess should be seized by the government. The house bill provided that a corporation could pick its theory. But the corporation which elected to pay on increased earnings was to have its normal tax raised from 20.9 per cent to 25 per cent. A corporation which chose the other theory paid a normal tax at only the old rate. The house bill would operate so that many companies would have to pay excess profits taxes even tho the war may have caused their profits to decline. And it would have excused other corporations from paying excess profits taxes even tho they had profited tremendously from the war.

In the senate version the choose-your-theory basis has been eliminated. The normal corporation tax for all is raised from 20.9 per cent to 24 per cent. The excess profits tax, ranging from 25 to 50 per cent, would apply to income above the average for the years 1936-1939. But there is an exemption for companies earning no more than 10 thousand dollars in a year plus 8 per cent of their invested capital.

The senate bill was worked out against heavy administration pressure, and it is almost a certainty that the New Deal will attempt to get the house bill substituted in conference committee. That is said advisedly because of what happened in the last Presidential election year.

Four years ago the President put on the heat and drove thru what he called a surplus earnings tax. That was the tax which penalized corporations which retained any considerable portion of a year's earnings for expansion. It was in effect for two years and produced a disaster. Even members of the President's party who yielded to pressure and voted for it subsequently described it as "the worst tax ever conceived." It was widely credited with responsibility for bringing about the collapse of 1937 and the ensuing depression.

The 1936 bill was bad, but it was useful in the Presidential campaign of that year. The 1940 house bill was conceived for the same purpose for the present campaign. Despite Senator Harrison's good intentions, the house measure may become the law. It would be better to put off action until December. The time is not propitious for sound fiscal legislation. Any tax measure enacted two months before a Presidential election is apt to be an excess politics bill, by whatever name it may be called.

THIS AND THE OTHER WAR.

In the discussion of the Overton-Russell property seizure provision in the conscription bill reference has been made to the war industries board of the other world war. It is recalled that the board threatened to get tough to bring some industrialists into line and that the President was given summary powers. They still exist in time of war or imminence of war.

The sneak amendment to the navy speed-up bill is still law, altho repealed by the house of representatives. It confers power to take over plants which do not do what the navy department wants them to do. The collectivists aren't satisfied with their present gains. They wanted the even more peremptory rights contained in the Overton-Russell amendment.

There are some distinctions to be made between the present day and the days of the old war industries board. The board grew out of the voluntary activities of American business men giving everything they had to the national effort. Mr. Knudsen, who now has resigned from General Motors to serve his country without any corporation affiliations, is a modern instance of the sort. Mr. Stettinius is another.

The efforts of the American industrialists, business men, and transportation chiefs in the other war went thru several changes of form before they were consolidated in the war industries board, and at all times the coöperation was everything a government at war could ask of its most expert citizens. In fact, the most summary demand upon a plant management was made across a business desk when Frank A. Scott told a producer who wasn't behaving well that an army outfit would take his factory if he didn't, and it was his—Scott's—opinion that by the time the courts restored it the war would be over. Mr. Scott may have been talking out of turn but it was one business man talking to another.

Altho the war effort at the time proceeded almost wholly from the voluntary and patriotic activities of all the citizens, the people did begin to learn some lessons in autocracy. Some of them had this experience and liked it. They liked the controls which had been placed in the hands of the government. They got a taste of nationalization of the railroads. They saw the productive plants of the country obeying what central authority told them to do. They have cast their eye back at this time of spontaneous coöperation and have wished to make a place for it in our permanent institutions.

They are the collectivists of the New Deal and they think fondly back upon the war effort. The war industries board, as they now see it, was an admirable institution because what it said was done.

Other people admit that they had an experience and, consenting to it because of the great emergency, they learned to shy away from such invasions of the American system in time of peace. And moreover, since that other day, new types of government have arisen and about overwhelmed the world. We are supposed to be arming against them now, with our collectivists urging that their methods be adopted. We are asked to embrace the danger in order to avoid it.

Since 1917 and '18 not only have we seen Europe succumb to the unrestrained dictatorship imposed upon every activity of every man thru the suppression of all his liberties and all his freedom in thought and act, but we have seen here in peacetime the counterpart of that system collecting its strength for the imposition of ways of living the American people do not want.

Therefore we should be on guard, more on guard now than we had to be back in the other wartime when we didn't know the extremes to which ambition and love of authority can carry men.

ILLINOIS NEW DEALERS.

O. John Rogge, head of the criminal division of the department of justice, is in Illinois. O. John is the assistant attorney general who discovered, in Louisiana, the way of putting a postage stamp on a politician and mailing him direct to the penitentiary. The mistake of a pay off thru the mails was all Mr. Rogge needed. No lady of fading charms and a package of letters ever found the postoffice more useful in bringing a derelict to judgment.

After the New Deal had been put in good order in Louisiana Mr. Rogge announced that there were other states needing attention. No doubt there are. All of them were well represented in the Democratic national convention working for humanity. But why should Illinois merit special attention at this time? Is there any doubt of the excessive zeal of the New Deal politicos here? To doubt their zeal is to doubt their common sense. Doubt their common honesty and they wouldn't protest—but their common sense. That at least is working strong. They are for humanity.

Editorial of the Day

IT'S WONDERFUL FOR THE REGION THUS FAVORED.

[Arkansas Gazette.]

The Tennessee valley and its inhabitants are fortunate indeed in the possessions and benefits which President Roosevelt eloquently summed up in his dedication address at the Chickamauga dam. For them the TVA program brings improved river navigation and surer flood protection. It gives them a chain of artificial lakes—"manmade inland seas," in Mr. Roosevelt's words—for power and recreation. It provides them with cheap electricity. It improves and protects their soil by combating erosion, reforesting millions of acres of land and promoting the production and use of fertilizers. In addition to all their other gains, the people of this favored region have had, and will continue to have, the benefit of millions on millions of dollars spent locally for current TVA operations and improvements.

But it is the nation that is carrying thru this great program in one chosen region and not the people of the Tennessee valley. Suppose the federal government, at national expense, should set out to make some relatively restricted area a model in such matters as roads, schoolhouses, length of school terms, amount of teachers' salaries, parks, and playgrounds, public health services, hospital facilities, and public libraries. Fine as all this would be for the people who received these benefits, a vastly greater number of people elsewhere in the United States might ask when, if ever, Santa Claus was going to get around to them.

The TVA region has been set off as an elect place. The program there, as Mr. Roosevelt sketched it at Chickamauga, makes it the function of the government not only to build dams and generate power and replant forests and manufacture fertilizer and build back soil fertility, but also:

> to improve the social and economic life of these citizens with their coöperation—to plan with them for a greater diversification of human effort, to make a richer farm life, to add new industries, to give employment, and to bring a larger return in cash each year to the average of our families.

Arkansas has had invaluable government aid in such matters as building highways, controling floods, dealing with erosion and conserving and increasing forest wealth. So have many other states, and for this assistance none of them is ungrateful. But the fact remains that out of the whole country the TVA region alone is being developed as a region, physically, economically, and socially, at the expense of all the people of all the states.

THOMAS JEFFERSON'S "PRECEDENT" OF 1803

BY FRANCIS N. STACY.
[Formerly of United States census.]

"I submit for your advice and consent"—declared Thomas Jefferson to the 7th congress of the United States, Jan. 11, 1803—three months and 19 days before the agreement with Napoleon for the Louisiana purchase. Such is the record of the Senate Journal filed in the Library of Congress.

Franklin D. Roosevelt and his attorney general, in citing Jefferson's Louisiana purchase as a "precedent" for the Roosevelt-British secret "swap" of 1940, seem to have overlooked, strangely enough, the official proceedings of the 7th and 8th congresses—revealing that, from first to last, the purchase of Louisiana Territory was consummated by Thomas Jefferson "by and with advice and consent of congress"—both house and senate participating, and both before and after the agreement of Paris, April 30, 1803.

Attorney General Jackson's left eye noted the "later appropriation" and the senate's "later ratification." But Jackson seems to have an astigmatism, or even a complete blindness, in the right eye. For he entirely overlooked what happened on Capitol hill before and leading up to the mission of James Monroe and Robert Livingston to the First Consul of France. But all that Jackson's right eye missed the Senate Journal of 1803 happily has preserved and here reveals:

On Jan. 11, 1803—several weeks before James Monroe was sent to Paris, equipped by congress with full powers and a "provisional appropriation" to acquire territory in Louisiana—Jefferson laid before the 7th congress the following announcement of the threat to the United States at the mouth of the Mississippi:

"The cession of the Spanish province of Louisiana to France, and perhaps of the Floridas, and the late suspension of deposit [right to land cargoes] at New Orleans, are events of prime interest to the United States."

Jefferson, therefore, laid before congress measures he deemed necessary to meet the imminent threat to our commerce and Mississippi river navigation, and even to our national security against French and British aggression on our western border. These measures, or "objects," as Jefferson termed them, on which he desired the "advice and consent of congress" included:

1. To obtain territory in Louisiana, and eastwardly, if practicable. [Editor's note: Entrance to New Orleans from the ocean via Lake Pontchartrain is from the east.]

2. To send ministers plenipotentiary to France, also to Spain, to negotiate for the necessary territory.

3. To make a provisional appropriation, "intended as part of the price" to enable the American plenipotentiaries to acquire territory.

4. Jefferson nominates James Monroe to be minister extraordinary and plenipotentiary, and Robert Livingston minister plenipotentiary, subject to confirmation by the senate, and thereupon concludes: "I submit for your advice and consent."

This advice and consent was freely given by both houses—confirmed by a "provisional appropriation" of 2 million dollars "intended as part of the price"—all before James Monroe, equipped with authority of congress, sailed for Paris to negotiate with Napoleon.

[Note: In strange contrast with this Jefferson "precedent" of 1803, Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940 makes a secret treaty with Great Britain, which he calls a fait accompli, and gives 100 million dollars' worth of government property, armed naval destroyers, repaired and rebuilt at government expense, for a large group of British naval bases which the British government fears it may not be able to defend. This appears to be the diametric opposite of Jefferson's "precedent" in asking for the "advise and consent of congress" before the agreement of Paris.]

On Oct. 17, 1803, after Monroe returns [sailing ships were slow 137 years ago], Jefferson calls congress into early session [horseback travel on mud roads was also slow], and lays before congress—this time the first session of the 8th congress—the terms of the Paris agreement, and asks for a further confirmation and ratification.

Thomas Jefferson did not look upon the Paris agreement as a fait accompli, for he told the two houses of the 8th congress:

"Should the acquisition of Louisiana be constitutionally confirmed and carried into effect"—says Jefferson, fully recognizing the Federalist opposition known as the "Essex Junta"—"a sum of nearly 13 million dollars will be added to our public debt, most of which will be payable after 15 years."

Jefferson now, therefore, called upon the new congress freshly elected by the people for "advice and consent" on two propositions before the Louisiana purchase can be become a "fait accompli":

1. An additional appropriation, including a bond issue of 13 million dollars.

2. Ratification by the required constitutional two-thirds of the senate.

The house of representatives deliberated from Oct. 17 to Dec. 18, and then voted an act of approval and appropriation of the necessary funds.

On Dec. 19, 1803, the Senate Journal carried this announcement: "Message from the House," that it has passed the bill entitled: "An act giving effect to the laws of the United States within territories ceded to the United States by treaty of April 30, 1803, between the United States and the French republic, and other purposes."

Thereupon the senate advanced the house bill to second reading, including committee reference and report, and after two weeks' debate—the Republicans and western senators favoring the purchase, and some of the eastern Federalists opposing—the senate passed the bill and ratified the treaty by the required two-thirds majority of 18 to 8.

Now and at last—after nearly a year of congressional "advice and consent," including two appropriation acts, together with an act to authorize and an act to ratify—the Jefferson Louisiana purchase, on Jan. 5, 1804, became a fait accompli, constitutionally consummated and forever afterward approved by the American people, and the territory of the United States is approximately doubled in the American way—"by and with the advice and consent of congress" elected by the people in full knowledge of the transaction from beginning to end.

WHEN THE STOMACH NEEDS REST.

It would be wonderful if we could protect every organ with equal care. With the "One-Hoss-Shay"—when the time for decay arrived—every part crumbled at exactly the same moment. In the words of Oliver Wendell Holmes—

"How it went to pieces all at once,
All at once, and nothing first,
Just as bubbles do when they burst."

With most of us, some one vital region will show signs of wear and tear earlier than others. Then it is that the physician assists nature in an attempt to bring about repair. Fortunately, we all possess a goodly quantity of mending tissue and even tho we have mistreated one or two essential structures extensively, the chances are that the rebuilding process will enable us to carry on for many years.

The stomach probably receives more vicious assaults than the heart, the kidneys, or even the lungs. It is called upon to withstand all sorts of abuses, as any single morsel that is swallowed may prove irritating. One reason why we are provided with the senses of taste and smell is to aid us in guarding the portal of entry—the gateway to the alimentary tract. Sometimes we take things when we know better. Bitter experience has taught us that we should avoid certain dishes. No sooner is an article eaten than we exclaim, "O, I wish I had left it alone."

The fault lies with those who prepare our edibles. They make them look so attractive and they may be so tasty that judgment and discretion are thrown to the winds. Then follows a bout with indigestion which may be anything but pleasant.

Few of us would consume indigestible or undesirable foods if we knew a little more about their effects upon the delicate lining cells which welcome them into the gastric pouch. The distinguished army surgeon, Beaumont, made direct observation on his patient, Alexis St. Martin. He reported that "Under undue excitement by stimulating liquors, overloading the stomach, fear, anger, the villous coat [consisting of tiny blood vessels—absorbing channels] of the stomach becomes red and dry and there are deep red pimples visible." Now, these reddish patches are nothing more or less than spots of hemorrhage. Thus it is that a clear cut beginning is established for the formation of an ulcer. Assume that these episodes are repeated frequently and we can understand how a mucous membrane may be dotted with minute inflamed areas.

The "bread basket," as a rule, is made to stand a fair amount of punishment. If it is allowed a reasonable period of rest, irritation will subside and discomfort will vanish. While few of us will need to pay more than casual attention to this part of one's anatomy, nevertheless the appearance of pain, slight waves of nausea, lack of appetite, belching, or waterbrash may demand the employment of a bland diet for a few days. The total number of calories may be reduced at least 50 per cent, and more rest obtained. In this manner we can save ourselves what otherwise might become a well established gastritis.

Altho the digestive tract cannot talk, it may grumble and rumble its objections. Furthermore, it is letter perfect in the sign language. About all that is required to preserve good digestion is to heed its gesticulations. Repose for the sorely imposed upon tube is the best medicine.

[Bland diet list will be sent on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.]

"CATCHING" PYORRHEA.

A. B. writes: Can pyorrhea be transmitted by using the drinking glass of a victim of this disease?

REPLY.

It may, altho the chance is remote. However, such articles should not be used in common. This is a primary requirement of good hygiene.

FORM OF VITAMIN B.

L. C. writes: Are vitamin B tablets or the liquid form more effective?

REPLY.

It all depends on their composition. The vitamin is made up of many fractions. Absorption will take place from either preparation.

REASONS AGAINST THIRD TERM.

Clarendon Hills, Ill., Sept. 10.—Many people consider the third term harmless to our country; just a foolish tradition. But after all, a custom does not develop without a reason behind it.

It is obvious even to a Democrat that Roosevelt has had greater opportunity than any previous President, thru the spending of huge sums of government money, to build up a patronage machine. Witness: The Democratic postmasters, the WPA and other relief spending, the PWA, and the almost double number of federal employés. You can talk of the humanitarian aspect of certain actions but you cannot get away from the fact that when you owe your job or your living to a political faction your vote is expected to be cast for that faction.

Human nature with power calls for more power. Actions like the attempt to pack the Supreme court and the "must" legislation exposes Roosevelt's lust for power. The real opposition to the third term is based upon the acquisition of too much power by one man to control votes and governmental action, which surely leads to dictatorship.

Do not put party above the general welfare of the country. If the candidate for a third term were of the opposing party and a so-called "indispensable man," would you vote for him?

ANTI-THIRD TERM.

FOR SCRAP BOOK USE.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—May I congratulate THE TRIBUNE for printing last Sunday the historical article on "The Sinking of the Lady Elgin," by John Kelly, in a form practical for inclusion in a scrap book. Too often articles of a permanent value are printed in many columns of varying depth, making it next to impossible for the collector to attractively mount or otherwise preserve them.

Why not make a practice of printing articles of a historic nature in such a way that they may be clipped square or oblong with no impractical appendages? I am sure other collectors will appreciate the effort. Other progressive newspapers please copy. THEODORE S. CHARRNEY.

WANTS MORE "VOICE" LETTERS.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—We looked with much interest for the appearance of "Both Sides of the Question," and find it is flat.

What nine-tenths of your readers prefer is the editorial page, the Voice of the People being the most sought after and the most quoted. The letters are like one person giving his views to another.

OUR STERN NOTES TO JAPAN.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—The President seems to be spending sleepless nights in worry over the prospect of the possible collapse of the great pillars of Christian civilization. That is doubtless why he is now sending stern notes to Japan to keep her pagan hands off the Dutch East Indies and French Indo-China. Evidently Mr. Roosevelt thinks the old line European imperialism in the orient is Christian civilization. The pillars he wants so much to uphold in the East Indies and Indo-China are certainly not the pillars of Christian civilization. Not one American soldier should be sent across the Pacific to uphold those Godless pillars of European imperialism in the orient. President Roosevelt ought to be interested in establishing Christian civilization in the United States. ERNEST BRADSHAW.

A GOOD WORD FOR SOLDIERS.

Glencoe, Ill., Sept. 11.—If some one wants a good man to work for him take J. K. [Jobless Soldier].

I have gone to Fort Sheridan for nearly two years to their dances, movies, and roller skating entertainment. It's lots of fun, and I have become acquainted with many soldier boys who as a general rule are better than civilians; very well mannered toward girls and strangers. One can ask to be directed any time and get his information in a most congenial manner.

As for J. K., some one had better hire him before a good man slips thru his fingers. After all, every one has to start from the bottom. So give him a job, and may the best man win.

I do not know J. K., but I am 100 per cent for a soldier.

SOLDIER'S GAL FRIEND.

PREFERS GLASS BOTTLES.

Cicero, Ill., Sept. 12.—As to the controversy between the waxpaper milk container and the old reliable glass bottle: As a consumer, and not connected with the dairy industry, I fail to see how the paper container can be an improvement over the glass container. Can anything be more sanitary than glass, transparent and thoroly sterilized, as the law compels? The paper, despite its coating of wax, is certainly more absorbent to impurities than the nonporous glass.

As to the waste of material involved: Have we considered the enormous waste of pulpwood used in these containers, serving but once, then destroyed? America is at last awakening to the importance of conservation of her natural resources.

STATES MINUS MILITIA.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Just imagine that the governor of any one of the 48 states should learn just after the November election that all of the National Guard units in his state had been called into federal service, the last regiment having just left on its way to training camp; that the "Great Humanitarian" had succeeded in being elected for his third term and that John L. Lewis had called some more sitdown strikes in the state. What would that governor use to keep the factory owner from throwing out the sitdown strikers and would our conscript army be available to make farmers in the Hershey plant vicinity leave sitdown strikers alone should another strike be attempted in that region? WILLIAM T. PRIDMORE.

CALLS IT "PACIFIST ROT."

Oak Park, Ill., Sept. 11.—On the eve of conscription and a call for volunteers to prepare our country against attack, what does THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE mean by publishing such pacifist rot as the article called "Have You a Son?"

I would suggest that instead you publish the picture in this week's Life, entitled "Injured by German Bomb, Margaret Curtis, Aged 2, Is About to Die!"

CHILDREN NOT WELCOME NOW.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—When my parents married, many years ago, they inherited a five flat building on the west side. Most people said, and still say, that it was not in a desirable neighborhood [I could never understand why not, unless it was because there were no trees and hedges in the block], the "plumbing" was in the back yard, and it was peopled by the poor working class. Into these flats moved young couples anxious to establish families of their own, and so, with the passing of years, children came, and at one time there were 17 in the building ranging from 3 to 12 years, all healthy and full of vim, vigor, and vitality. The property was in no way damaged by these 17 healthy youngsters, 10 of whom were boys, and no one had "nerves" because of the noise.

You probably wonder why all this talk? Well, I'm sore, and here is the reason. Last week my eldest brother, who has two sons [ages 6 and 8] and who cannot afford a home of his own, decided to look around for a larger flat. Wherever he applied for a flat, the landlord wailed, "My goodness, two children—no, no, not in my building." When this same stunt was pulled on him four times he got sore, and when I heard it so did I.

What's the big idea? Shall my brother buy a tent and camp in Lincoln park? Do you think the squirrels would mind?

FOR NEGROES TO PONDER.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The approach of Emancipation day should be an occasion for all colored voters to take serious thought on how they are going to cast their ballots in November.

It should remind the Negroes that they owe much—one might say everything—to the Republican party.

After the civil war it was a Republican administration that put thru the constitutional amendments that gave the Negroes American citizenship and the right to vote, a right which unfortunately is disregarded in southern states, where the Democratic party is supreme, and where the Negro has no rights that the white man is bound to respect.

Had it not been for the Republican party the Negroes of the United States might be slaves today, laboring without pay under the whips of Democratic masters.

Too many Negroes were misled four years ago. How will they vote this year?

TITLE PAPERS.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a farm in Missouri which came to me thru my father and grandfather, having been in our family 70 years without abstract title.

1. How do I go about getting abstract and how much would it cost? The farm contains several pieces of land acquired at different times from different persons.

2. Will each piece need a separate abstract? I am negotiating purchase of a small plot of less than one acre from a neighbor. He has no abstract title.

3. Would it be advisable to get abstract for this piece also, or would cost be more than the value?

4. If I buy without such title, is the transfer legally correct?

5. Does an abstract deed require recording?

6. If I sell property can same abstract be turned over to new owner or [7] will a new abstract have to be made?

8. How far back does an abstract trace ownership? H. L.

REPLY.

1. To obtain an abstract, you should employ an abstract maker at the county seat. You can ask him for an estimate in advance.

2. It will be necessary to cover completely the title to each parcel. It might all be done in one bound abstract, or they might be handled separately.

3. Depends on the value of the strip in question and on other facts that are not before us.

4. If your grantor has a good title, and you obtain a deed from him, then you will have a good title, regardless of whether you have an abstract. The importance of the abstract would be the same as the deed con- prove that your title is good when you wish to sell.

5. We do not understand what you mean by "an abstract deed." The deed conveying property upon which the owner has an abstract, would be the same as the deed conveying property on which he does not have an abstract, if that is what you mean to ask.

6. Yes.

7. No, but a continuation of the abstract would be desirable at each transfer.

8. Ordinarily it starts with title in the United States government.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DIVORCE.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How long must a man have to be separated from his wife in Illinois to obtain a divorce?

2. How long can a man be absent from Chicago without losing his residence?

N. O.

REPLY.

1. Mere separation, no matter how long continued, does not give a ground for divorce. But the party who is not to blame for the separation, in other words, the party who is deserted, will be entitled to a divorce after one year.

2. There is no maximum limit. The question is whether he retains a home here intending to return to it.

COURTNEY CITES $876,000 SLASH IN OFFICE COSTS

Outlay Below Total Spent by Predecessors.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

State's Attorney Courtney issued a financial statement yesterday showing that it cost him $876,825.88 less to run the prosecutor's office in the last seven years than it cost his Republican predecessors in a corresponding period.

He said the saving was made thru installation of business methods. He said he had not used the office to parcel out "political plums to favorite political lawyers" thru employment as special prosecutors at the rate of $100 a day.

All Business Done by Staff.

The business in the state's attorney's office is handled exclusively by regular staff members on a yearly salary.

One source of saving—amounting to $118,735.27—came in the item for fees paid to court reporters for stenographic work. From 1926 to 1932 fees of $292,603.85 were paid for such fees. Under Courtney the cost of similar work was $173,868.58.

Courtney said that previously court reporting was awarded to favored political firms and paid by the page. The work now is done by shorthand reporters exclusively in the employ of the county and paid a yearly salary.

Table Shows Comparision.

The state's attorney made public the following table of money appropriated and spent during previous administrations and during his administration:

Year.	Appropriation.	Expenditure.	Difference.
	ROBERT E. CROWE.
1927	635,382.88	635,210.87	172.01
1928	639,204.79	725,173.16	*85,968.37
	JOHN A. SWANSON.
1930	752,593.38	745,942.95	6,650.43
1932	657,793.74	759,965.14	*102,171.40
	THOMAS J. COURTNEY.
1933	$654,148.13	$627,006.07	$ 27,142.06
1934	668,977.00	666,309.38	2,667.62
1935	671,585.18	670,419.47	1,165.71
1936	698,163.68	621,789.15	76,374.53
1937	698,276.28	589,233.49	109,042.79
1938	734,602.64	605,008.31	129,594.33

*Excess of expenditure over appropriation.

The figures showed that Courtney spent $4,379,743.66 to operate the office in the last seven years, out of appropriations totaling $4,861,991.26. The appropriations of his predecessors in the previous seven years were $5,142,096.34, and they spent $5,256,569.54, or $876,825.88 more than Courtney. Courtney spent $482,247.60 less than the appropriations for the office during that period, and his predecessors in the previous seven years spent $114,472.90 more than their appropriations.

CONVICTED ELECTION JUDGE'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL IS DENIED

Judge James Fardy in Criminal court overruled yesterday a motion for a new trial for Joseph Schneiderman, Democratic precinct captain of the 3d precinct in the 24th ward. A sentence of one year in the county jail and a $1 fine, imposed June 28, was allowed to stand. Schneiderman was found guilty of conspiracy to violate the election laws during the 1938 primary. Judge Fardy set Sept. 17 for hearing of two other conspiracy charges against Schneiderman, who lives at 3925 Grenshaw street.

JURORS PONDER KIDNAP SLAYER'S FATE IN 2D TRIAL

The federal court jury pondering the fate of Jack Russell, kidnap slayer of William Scott Hamilton, Kansas flour salesman, had reached no decision at a late hour last night after more than six hours' deliberation. The jury retired at 4:40 p. m. yesterday and at 8:10 p. m. asked Judge Charles E. Woodward for further instructions.

Once convicted and sentenced to death, Russell was granted a new trial by the Appellate court.

Russell, an Oklahoma desperado, escaped from the Oklahoma state penitentiary while serving a robbery term. He made his way to Chicago by kidnaping motorists, and shot Hamilton to death near Ringwood, in McHenry county, after forcing the Kansan to drive him from Pittsburg, Kas. He confessed the crime July 18, 1939, when he was captured, four over plants which refuse to grant defense contracts priority, and payment of a "fair and just" rental. The act applies to any plant manufacturing military supplies or capable of doing so.

CONGRESS VOTES DRAFT; BILL GOES TO WHITE HOUSE

Oct. 8 Is Set as Probable Registration Date.

Both Illinois senators, Scott W. Lucas and James M. Slattery, Democrats, were absent but were announced as in favor of the bill.

Forty Democratic senators and 7 Republicans voted for the conference report. Pitted against the report were 13 Democrats, 10 Republicans, 1 Progressive, and 1 independent.

In the house the lineup was as follows: Democrats for, 188; Republicans for, 44. Republicans against, 93; Democrats against, 27. One Farmer-Labor, two Progressive, and one American Labor party member voted against the report.

Because the senate already had adopted the report, the house was prevented by parliamentary rules from voting separately on a motion to insist upon retention of the Fish amendment, which the conferees had stricken out. The amendment, sponsored by Representative Hamilton Fish [R., N. Y.], called for a 60 day trial of the volunteer system of raising 400,000 men before the draft went into effect. It was approved by the house a week ago by a vote of 207 to 200.

Fish Assails Warmongering.

Fish took the floor to assail the campaign of "slimy and contemptible perversion of the truth," which, he said, had been waged against his amendment by the "eastern interventionist press and warmongering radio commentators."

"My amendment does not, as stated in many newspapers, delay operation of the draft by an hour," he declared. "It actually would speed up the induction of soldiers into the federal service, while the draft bill will not induct any draftees until Nov. 15, and then only 75,000. Under my amendment there probably would have been more than 75,000 volunteers within a few weeks' time, with the provision for one year enlistment and $30 a month pay.

"I am positive that the 207 members of the house who voted for my amendment will be in a position to prove to their constituents by election day that not a single draftee has been inducted into the service by then and that rejection of the volunteer amendment actually has delayed the training of men for our armed forces and national defense."

Opponent Urges Fair Trial.

Only a few other members rose to express their opposition to the measure. The attitude of these opponents was summed up by Representative John M. Vorys [R., O.] who said:

"I opposed passage of this peacetime conscription law as unnecessary, and a threat to peace and freedom, but now it will be the law of the land, a method duly enacted for manning the defenses of the republic.

"I reserve my right to criticize this law, to urge its amenment or repeal, but so long as it is the law I pledge myself to aid wholeheartedly in its efficient administration and fair enforcement. We must have no scofflaws on conscription."

Funds To Train Conscripts.

President Roosevelt's request for $1,733,886,976 in cash and $207,000,000 in contract authorizations brought the total of defense appropriations at this session to a total of more than 12 billion 200 million dollars.

He requested $1,602,881,976 in cash for the war department, in addition to $150,000,000 in contract authorizations. This included $24,285,108 for administering the conscription bill. A large portion of the remaining amount asked for the army would be used for equipment and facilities necessary for training the conscripts.

Other requests included:

Navy, $57,344,000 in cash and $7,000,000 in authorizations.

Federal security agency, $40,000,000 cash.

Commerce department, $33,091,000 cash and $50,000,000 authorizations.

JESUITS OBSERVE 400TH YEAR OF ORDER SEPT. 27

The Catholic order that sent forth Fathers Marquette, De Smet, Jogues, Charlevoix, and many other priests to convert the American Indian and to chart the western wilderness becomes 400 years old this month. Historians ascribe to this order, the Jesuits, a leading rôle in the winning of the west.

Tomorrow the 6,000 students who will begin their year's studies at Loyola university, named for St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuits, will be reminded of the quadricentennial. While the university announces no public demonstration in its observance of Sept. 27, the anniversary date, the Very Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, Loyola president, said the intramural observance will link faculty and students with those of the 435 other Jesuit institutions of learning thruout the world.

The 26,309 members of the order, who are attached to 1,531 houses thruout the world, in addition to teaching 3 million students, conduct spiritual retreats for 750,000 priests and members of religious orders annually, according to Loyola university figures.

The Jesuit apostolate of prayer counts 125,787 centers with more than 35 million members and 72 periodicals printed in 44 languages. ARMY DRAFT BILL PROVISIONS FALL INTO 18 SECTIONS

Part by Part Analysis of Conscription Act.

SECTION 1—Declares it is imperative to increase and train the armed forces of the United States and that compulsory military training and service should be shared generally.

SECTION 2—Requires the registration of all male citizens of the United States and all male aliens residing in the United States who are between the ages of 21 and 36 [21 to 35, inclusive] on the registration date to be proclaimed by the President.

SECTION 3—Makes registrants liable to military service, but limits the number that may be in training or service to 900,000, except in war time. Authorizes the President, within those limits, to draft "such number of men as in his judgment is required." Permits persons between ages 18 and 36 to volunteer for military service.

Fixes the training period at 12 months, except that it may be lengthened when congress has declared the national interest imperiled. Places draftees in the reserve for 10 years or until they reach 45 years of age, after they have completed their training period. Provides that draftees shall have death and disability benefits accorded men of the regular army and navy. Limits use of draftees to western hemisphere and United States possessions.

SECTION 4—Permits the President to prescribe the rules and regulations governing the draft and provides that state draft quotas shall be fixed on the basis of population, with credits allowed for those men already in the military or naval service.

SECTION 5—Exempts from registration and from service as draftees all those who now make up the armed forces of the United States, including advanced course R. O. T. C. cadets of the senior division; also coast guardsmen and diplomatic and consular officers of foreign governments.

Exempts from service, but not from registration, men who have served three years in the regular army; National Guardsmen who have had one year's federal duty and two additional years either in the regular army or National Guard on active duty; National Guardsmen on active duty on registration day who have six years National Guard service; reserve officers on the eligible list for six years or more.

Provides deferred status for high federal and state officials, including the Vice President, senators, congressmen, members of the judiciary, etc.

Exempts ministers and divinity students.

Permits the President to defer training for persons employed in essential industries or agriculture, and also to issue regulations giving deferred status to men with dependents or who are suffering mental or physical disabilities.

Defers the draft of college students until the end of the 1940-'41 college year, provided the students have matriculated by Dec. 31, 1940.

Provides for the use on other duties of persons with an established record of conscientious objection to military service.

SECTION 6—Limits the calling of draftees to the number of men for whom congress has made "specific appropriations."

SECTION 7—Prohibits the paying of bounties for enlistments and forbids draftees having others serve for them.

SECTION 8—Provides for reëmployment of draftees when they have completed their year's service satisfactorily.

Private employers must restore jobs unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable. Employés of the federal, territorial and District of Columbia governments will be restorerd to their jobs and state governments are requested to restore jobs.

In any case, the draftee must still be qualified to fill the job, and must apply for it within 40 days after his discharge from the army or navy. Federal district attorneys are required to represent draftees in reëmployment cases without fee and no court costs are permitted to be assessed against the draftee.

Expresses the policy of congress that a vacancy occurring in a business or industry as a result of the draft shall not be filled by a member of the communist party or the German-American bund.

SECTION 9—Empowers the President to take over and operate plants, on a rental basis, if owners refuse to accept or give priority to defense contracts. Fixes maximum penalties of three years' imprisonment and $50,000 fines for plant managers so refusing.

SECTION 10—Permits the President to set up local boards to classify registrants and provides for a director of selective service with a salary of $10,000 annually.

SECTION 11—Provides penalties up to five years in prison and fines up to $10,000 for officials who falsify medical certificates or who participate in false registration, deferment or induction, etc., and same penalties for draft evaders or those who abet them.

SECTION 12—Increases the pay of army privates from $21 to $30 monthly and of privates, first class, from $30 to $36.

SECTION 13—Provides certain debt relief benefits of the 1918 soldiers and sailors relief act for draftees and reservists on active duty.

SECTION 14—Provides that Presidential proclamations of registration days shall serve as notice to eligibles that they must register.

SECTION 15—Relates to definitions.

SECTION 17—Provides that the act shall take effect immediately after the President signs it.

SECTION 18—Gives the short title of the measure, "Selective Training and Service Act of 1940."

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—Eleven of Illinois' 27 representatives were absent today when the house voted on the conscription bill. However, the votes of six of these absentees were announced [but not included in the final result] via the "pair" method. If You Get Up Nights How Are Your Kidneys?

Most people never think of their Kidneys although these vital organs contain about 9 million tiny tubes and work night and day cleaning and filtering excess acids, poisons and wastes from your blood. Because they never get a real rest it's easy to see that as you grow older the Kidneys may get tired and slow down. These excess acids and wastes may accumulate and poison your system because of functional rather than organic or systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. So if you have to get up nights, or suffer from burning, scanty or frequent passages, backaches and groin pains, due to non-organic and non-systemic Kidney or Bladder weakness, you'll make no mistake in trying the prescription called Cystex. Over ten million packages of Cystex have been sold in 73 countries and have given such joyous, happy relief to so many thousands of people that it is now sold under a positive guarantee of money back on return of empty package unless completely satisfactory to you. Cystex now costs only 35c at druggists and the guarantee protects you.

100 QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED BY MEN IN DRAFT

Cover Wife's Health and Whether Living in Jail.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—The prospective draftee's first weapon will be a well sharpened pencil or a well filled pen. And his first order under the compulsory military service program, due to become law on Monday, will be to attack a questionnaire more lengthy than an income tax blank and as searching as a census taker's list of inquiries.

By this means the government expects hundreds of local draft boards to find out how many of the 16,500,000 male citizens in the 21 to 35 age group will be eligible and qualified for military service.

The questions number more than a hundred. They ask everything from the state of health of a man's wife to whether he himself is in jail. Not all will have to be answered by any one registrant—only those which apply in his case.

Five Days to Answer.

The questionnaire will be distributed soon after registration and will have to be returned in five days. On the basis of the replies the local selective service boards will arrange the classifications of potential conscripts.

For example, if a man's wife is an invalid and he is her sole support, he obviously would be qualified for deferment.

The eight pages of questions are divided into 13 series, covering these general subjects:

1. Physical condition. [Men with certain physical handicaps will be deferred.]
2. Dependency. [Those with dependents who rely solely on them for support will be deferred.]
3. Information for military and naval authorities. [To become a part of each drafted soldier's army record.]
4. Religious conviction against war, if any. [Those with a well founded record as conscientious objectors will be exempted from combatant service.]

Many Officials Excluded.

5. Legislative, executive, and judicial officials. [Various high government officials will be automatically deferred.]
6. Federal, state, territorial, county, and municipal employés. [Those with important jobs vital to defense will be excluded.]
7. Marine pilots. [Persons so employed may be deferred.]
8. Minister of religion. [May be deferred.]
9. Agricultural occupation. [Farmers may be deferred as important to national defense.]
10. Other occupation. [Those with important defense jobs will be deferred.]
11. Citizenship. [Aliens will not be taken except when they are in process of becoming citizens.]
12. Court record. [Convicts will be excluded from service.]
13. Claim or waiver of claim for deferred classification. [Each man will be entitled to state his claim for deferment, if any, to be passed on by the local board. He can appeal the local board's decision to an appeal board and from there to the President.]

Must Submit Affidavits.

No man's answers will be taken for granted. Supporting affidavits will be required of those claimed as dependents and of the man's employer or business associates.

The questions were prepared by the joint army and navy selective service committee.

The registrant's vital statistics—birth date, race, and the like—and his description will be entered upon a card when he registers, and he will be given a smaller similar registration certificate which says, "Carry this card with you at all times."

The questionnaire will come next; then, classification, and finally the draft itself.

BROKER'S WIFE AND DAUGHTER MISSING IN CAR

Highway police in Illinois and Indiana were searching last night for Mrs. Derwood S. Chase of 165 Fuller lane, Winnetka, who left her home at 6 a. m. yesterday in an automobile and failed to meet her husband, according to arrangement, in LaFayette, Ind. With her is her daughter, Dereth, 13 years old.

Chase is a broker with offices at 123 South La Salle street. He left his home 45 minutes after his wife did, in a second car accompanied by two of their children. The family was on the way to Charlottesville, Va.

When Mrs. Chase failed to keep the appointment her husband returned to Hammond and enlisted aid of police. He then went bac kto Lafayette. Late last night he said he would return to the Winnetka home and wait for news of Mrs. Chase and the daughter. The car in which they rode bore the Illinois license number 165,000.

ALLMAN REVERSES RULING BARRING ANTI-NAZI MOVIE

Police Commissioner Allman announced yesterday he would reverse the police censorship board's ruling forbidding the showing here of the anti-Nazi film, "Pastor Hall.". The picture is based on the Nazi persecution of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller.

Allman's action followed protests by civic and church groups and the Chicago Civil Liberties committee. He appointed a special censor to view the film, and the latter found nothing "particularly objectionable" in it, Allman said.

"The censor board was perfectly right in censoring the picture," Allman said. "But I have a right to overrule the board if I think the picture can be shown."

A resolution that movie censorship be taken away from the police board is expected to be introduced at the city council meeting Wednesday by Ald. Earl. B. Dickerson [2d].

KILLED BY PASSENGER TRAIN.

Lexington, Ill., Sept. 14 [Special.]—William Jerry Nicholson, 64 years old, was killed at the Alton railroad crossing here about dusk last evening when he stepped in front of a northbound passenger train. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

EXPECT ILLINOIS TO REGISTER FOR DRAFT OCT. 17

775,000 to Sign in State; 24,000 to Go First.

Adj. Gen. L. V. Regan of the Illinois National Guard said yesterday that the registration of approximately 775,000 Illinois men, 21 to 35 years old, inclusive, probably would be held Oct. 17. [Washington advices give Oct. 8 as the probable date.]

Gen. Regan estimated that about 24,000 Illinois men would be called for a year's training in the first draft. The work of registering and drafting those eligible will be under the supervision of the state director of selective service, still to be chosen by Gov. Horner.

The director will have two assistants, one of whom will be in charge of the Chicago office, which will direct draft operations thruout Cook county. There also will be 284 boards set up thruout the state on each of which three local citizens will serve, plus a physician and an appeals official.

Each registrant will fill out a questionnaire which will be turned over to the local boards for classification. The first class will consist of men immediately available for service, as indicated by a medical examination and the questionnaire.

The second class will include those who will not be called immediately because they are valuable workers in the defense industries, agriculture, or some other special field.

The third class will include those with dependents, and the fourth class those physically, mentally, or morally unfit.

Polling Places to Be Used.

In Chicago election board officials said arrangements had been made to open polling places in each precinct to permit swift registration of Chicago's draft eligibles. Present plans call for two attendants at each registration place.

Thruout the country there will be more volunteers operating the draft machinery than there will be men drafted in the first call. Nearly 1,000,000 persons are expected to aid in handling the draft, with the number dropping to about 200,000 after registration.

President Roosevelt will appoint a director of selective service, to be confirmed by the senate, whose headquarters will be in Washington. Thruout the country there will be one local draft board for about each 30,000 of population.

PRESIDENT ASKS INSURANCE AID FOR CONSCRIPTS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—President Roosevelt asked congress today to give early consideration to legislation preserving for men called to military service their insurance protection under the social security, railroad retirement, and railroad unemployment insurance acts.

"The social gains of recent years, including insurance and other benefit rights, must be preserved unimpaired, the message said.

"The agencies administering the federal acts have been considering these problems and are now ready to furnish recommendations to the congress in this connection."

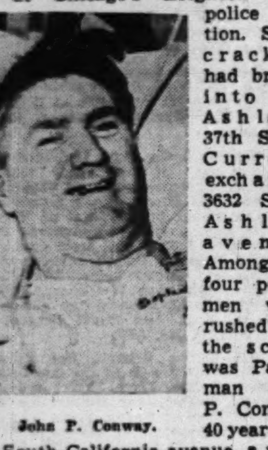
A 3-TIME POLICE HERO RECEIVES TRIBUNE AWARD

Shot Twice in Battling 5 Safe Crackers.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

An alarm at dawn broke the monotony at Chicago's Brighton Park police station. Safe crackers had broken into the Ashland-37th Street Currency exchange, 3632 South Ashland avenue. Among the four policemen who rushed to the scene was Patrolman John P. Conway, 40 years old, 3508 South California avenue, a member of the Chicago police force since 1922.



John P. Conway.

Conway and his squad partner, John Jemilo, approached the currency exchange from the north in a squad car while two other patrolmen approached from the south.

At 36th street and Ashland avenue, Conway jumped out of the squad car and ducked into the alley directly behind the exchange to head off any break from the rear door by the burglars.

Capture One Gunman.

Just as he was sprinting down the alley, one of the five robbers raced out the rear door. The robber was George Montville, 22 years old, of 10812 South State street. Conway, aided by Patrolman Albert Ledding, seized him after a chase.

Meanwhile a pistol battle had taken place in front of the exchange. Ledding's partner, Daniel Keating, had been shot thru the thigh by gunmen who blazed their way out.

Conway and his partner, Jemilo, pursued the fleeing gunmen in their car and saw them duck into a vacant lot on 38th between Marshfield and Paulina streets. Conway leaped out while Jemilo drove around the corner to head off the two robbers if they should try to escape thru the alley at the rear of the lot.

Conway rushed thru the lot into the alley. As he reached the alley one of the fleeing gunmen, Edward Melish, fired a .38 caliber revolver at Conway, but missed. Conway, undaunted, kept up the chase firing two shots with his shotgun, which, it developed later, wounded both gunmen.

Shot Twice from Ambush.

One of the robbers ducked into a yard adjoining the alley. Shielding himself behind a corner of a house, he fired three shots from a rifle at Conway. Two of the shots found their mark, wounding the patrolman in the right side and right forearm. He will be incapacitated for several months.

Information supplied by Montville, whom Conway and Ledding had captured, led to the arrest on the same day of two of the other gunmen, Frank Michuda, 27 years old, 1334 West 18th place, and George Budka, 27, of 2913 South Central Park avenue.

Two days later, on July 23, the other two bandits appeared at the Bridewell hospital and asked to be treated for bullet wounds. They were Melish, 19, of 220 West 107th street, and Kenneth Tuftedal, 19, of 327 West 112th street.

Receives $100 Award.

For his heroism under fire Patrolman Conway received THE TRIBUNE's $100 hero award for July. Each month THE TRIBUNE makes the award to the city's most courageous policeman or fireman.

Conway was awarded the Carter Harrison gold medal in 1932 for slaying one bandit and capturing another in a grocery robbery. He was wounded in 1929 when he broke up an attempted holdup of a south side soft drink parlor by two bandits.

NAME 4 DU PAGE UNION MEMBERS IN INDICTMENTS

Warrants were issued yesterday for four Du Page county union members indicted Friday night by the grand jury in Wheaton. Earl Rieck of Lombard, executive secretary of the county building trades council, and Howard Smith of West Chicago, business agent for the council, were charged with extortion by threats.

The charge against Rieck grew out of differences in April, 1939, between him and E. J. Biggs of a Chicago contracting firm which was employed on the new Downers Grove postoffice. It is charged that Rieck threatened to call workmen off the job unless the Biggs company paid a disputed debt of $23 to Charles Crider of Downers Grove, a laborer. Biggs said the $23 was paid.

Crider and Bernard Johnson of Libertyville were indicted on charges of assault and battery. They were accused of having started a fight during a trades council election last October, and to have led a nonunion worker off the Naperville postoffice job last April 9.

Smith was accused of halting work on a home building project near Downers Grove because nonunion labor was employed. It is charged the work was resumed only after the contractors had paid the union $75 [the amount it had been alleged that the nonunion workmen had received]. The payment, which was said to have been in cash, was denied by union officials.

SCHOOLS GIVEN TRIBUNE PICTURES OF NATHAN HALE

Teachers Laud Patriotic Effect on Pupils.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

One thousand and six framed pictures in color of the famous statue of Nathan Hale recently erected in the plaza between Tribune Tower and W-G-N studios are being distributed to all Chicago and Cook county public schools and to all Catholic and Lutheran parochial schools by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The patriotic value to growing Americans of the revolutionary war martyr is being commented on in school rooms and offices of principals. Teachers, in calling attention to the picture, are pointing out that the future greatness of the United States will depend on the sacrifices of men and women like Nathan Hale. That martyr, standing on the gallows, voiced only one regret—that he had but one life to give for his country.

Replica of Yale Statue.

The statue from which the pictures were made by The Tribune color photo studio is a replica of the bronze statue of the hero by Dela Lyon Pratt which occupies a place of honor on the Yale university campus. An alumnus of Yale, Nathan Hale had become a school teacher before volunteering for his country's service.

Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of Chicago public schools, said patriotic gifts to schools, such as the Hale pictures, could not be praised too highly.

"The Nathan Hale pictures give a splendid opportunity for our pupils to become conscious of the heroes that made our nation possible," said Dr. Johnson. "We must use all available means to teach patriotic ideals in these disturbed days. My gratitude for the pictures cannot be overstated."

Hang in Prominent Places.

John E. Meegan, principal of the Willard public school, 1915 St. Lawrence avenue, stated in a letter that the picture now hangs in the school library. Louis F. Brook, principal of the East Prussing school, 4650 North Menard avenue, writes as follows:

"We feel that this picture, in the light of current events, is most timely, and we assure you that it shall be placed where all our children will see it daily."

The pictures were delivered last week to the 331 Cook county schools.

The Rev. Dr. J. W. Behnken, 533 South Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, president of the Evangelical Lutheran Missouri synod, together with the army and navy board of that church, viewed the picture with approval Tuesday in the Lutheran publicity bureau, 82 West Washington street.

The Rev. Louis J. Schwartzkopf, director of the Lutheran bureau, told of appeals for additional copies from larger schools. He cited the request of John Hergenrader, fifth grade teacher of Holy Cross school, who declared the picture should be in each school room.

Some schools, to which deliveries have not yet been made, also have appealed directly to THE TRIBUNE for pictures for each room. THE TRIBUNE's offer was but one for each school.

From Holy Name cathedral came praise for Nathan Hale's patriotism as an example of supreme sacrifice for love of country. The Rt. Rev. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of the Catholic board of education, stated that each parochial school would give the picture a prominent place as a patriotic influence.

Deliveries of the pictures to the 456 Catholic schools probably will be completed this week. At about the same time the 150 Lutheran parochial schools of the metropolitan area will be able to install the pictures.

4 CHILDREN DIE WHEN GRAVEL PIT CAVE COLLAPSES

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 14 (AP).—Tons of falling earth trapped and suffocated four children in an abandoned gravel pit 10 miles west of here today. A fifth escaped.

The dead were Joe Winford Armstrong, 11; Dorothy May Armstrong, 9; Lurline Armstrong, 8, children of Mr. and Mrs. George Armstrong, and Joe Hubert Rowell, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Isaac Rowell.

William Thomas Morrison, 10, a playmate aiding in the digging of a cave into the gravel pit's high bank, escaped by running when he "heard the ground crack."

It was more than five hours before the body of Joe Winford Armstrong was recovered. Three bodies were recovered within two hours after the terror stricken Morrison boy spread an alarm, running first to the home of the Armstrongs.

Dr. M. B. Kirkpatrick, Montgomery county coroner, said the four undoubtedly died of suffocation, altho they were cut and bruised by rocks and dirt.

'RUSTY' BRYAN'S WEDDING HALTED, MAYBE FOR GOOD

Invitations Are Recalled; 1,500 Guests Puzzled.

A brief announcement that the wedding of Miss Helen Mary Bryan and John I. Marshall Jr. has been postponed caused a ripple of surprise last night in Chicago and Lake Forest circles. The surprise grew when friends of the couple asserted the marriage has been called off, rather than merely delayed.

Marshall was reached at the summer home of his half brother, Maj. William A. Rafferty, at Morocco, Ind.

"Does the announcement mean the wedding is permanently postponed?" he was asked.

"No, I wouldn't say that," he replied.

Engagement Still On, He Says.

"Is the engagement broken?"

"No." He refused to give any reason for the mysterious upsetting of the wedding plans.

"Mrs. Bryan sent you a statement, didn't she?" was all Marshall would say. This statement, released thru a social secretary in Lake Forest, said the wedding had been postponed "because of grief in the bride's family." Marshall said he did not know what "grief" referred to.

Miss Bryan is the daughter of Benjamine B. Bryan of Lake Forest, a broker. She is known to friends as "Rusty." Marshall is connected with the Middleby-Marshall Oven company of which his late father was the head.

Invitations Are Recalled.

Invitations to the wedding ceremony, which had been scheduled for the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest next Saturday afternoon, have been recalled, adding 1,500 invited guests to the puzzled group of friends who have had to cancel parties planned for Miss Bryan and Marshall.

Yesterday's canceled events included a picnic at the Rafferty farm [Mrs. Rafferty is the former Virginia Insull], and a dinner party in the home of Peter G. Moon in Lake Forest. Among numerous parties which had been planned for this week was a cocktail party to have been given by the wedding ushers at the Racquet club, and the bridal dinner at the Exmoor Country club.

A Few Possible Explanations.

Friends said they had heard several explanations for the wedding rift: [1] the bride-to-be's father had suddenly decided he didn't approve; [2] a relative of the bride had not arrived home from an auto trip, and it was feared he had been hurt, and [3] the prospective groom was going to California.

Miss Bryan was reported to be visiting "in the east" last night. At the Bryan home it was said her mother had accompanied her on the journey.

$1,200 IN FURS STOLEN FROM CAR.

Furs valued at $1,200 were stolen from the automobile of Mrs. Anna Lowy of Milwaukee yesterday as it stood in front of 1827 Michigan avenue. They were the property of a shopping companion, Mrs. Lois A. Sukoff, 819 Chestnut avenue, Wilmette.

Burial will be in Irving Park Boulevard cemetery. Mrs. Meyer died Friday while visiting a daughter, Mrs. Beatrice Woznick, 3642 Roosevelt road. She was 78 years old. The widow of Peter S. Meyer, a north side druggist, Mrs. Meyer had lived in recent years with another daughter, Mrs. Louise Wolf, 5448 Byron street. Two other daughters, Mrs. Lulu Kroske and Mrs. Ruth Smeal, and a son, Axel Meyer, also survive.

George Wilson Ford.

Relatives received news yesterday of the death of George Wilson Ford, former Chicago stationer, in his home in Long Beach, Cal. Mr. Ford was 89 years old. He came to Chicago before the fire of 1871, and was for many years a member of the stationery concern of Dunwell & Ford. The family had lived in Long Beach since his retirement. UNLUCKY AUTOIST FINDS FACE VALUE A POOR STANDARD

Ivan Moore, 2950 Adams street, was charged with reckless driving yesterday after his automobile injured Miss Lucille Nelson, 25 years old, 4811 Cermak road, in front of 1653 Madison street.

But his troubles didn't end there. Moore saw a familiar face in the crowd at the accident scene, which he vaguely remembered as that of a neighbor. He asked this person to take his car home, while he went to the police station. Four hours after Moore got home he found no car and notified police.

He was told that his car had been wrecked in an accident near Earl Park, Ind. The driver, Richard Crowley, 23, of Greenfield, Tenn., was on his way home. Moore thinks Crowley probably is the "neighbor."

A VARIED FIELD OF OPPORTUNITY AWAITS SOLDIER

His Climb Can Be as Fast as He Makes It.

BY HAROLD HUTCHINGS.

The opportunity for advancement is here, Brig. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, commandant at Fort Sheridan, said yesterday in discussing trades, skills, or abilities enlisted men in the army of 1940 may hope to be taught.

Fort Sheridan embraces not only units of the arms and services, but also one of the 33 schools which are open to enlisted men of the American army. The Fort Sheridan institution is the 6th corps area school to train bakers and cooks. There are eleven other army schools for bakers and cooks—one for each of the other eight corps areas and one each in the Canal Zone, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands.

Among the remaining special service schools are the quartermaster school in Philadelphia; the motor transport school at Holabird Depot, Md.; the medical, dental and veterinary schools in Washington, D. C.; the engineer school at Fort Belvoir, Va.; the ordnance school at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.; the infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., and the air corps technical school at Chanute Field, Ill.

Visit School For Cooks.

A visit to the bakers and cooks' school gives some indication of the army's method of giving special training to those men who seek to learn more about some specialty than they can learn in their unit and in the process to earn a raise in their pay. Last year 150 men were trained in the Fort Sheridan school, and 200 are expected to study this year.

In the past the course has been four months long, with an additional month for those whose scholastic rating was 850 or more points out of a possible 1,000. In this extra month these high ranking cookery students had the privilege of studying to be mess sergeants and bakery students to become pastry bakers. This year the course has been shortened to two months in line with a policy of training more men in all the army schools.

Enlisted Men Instructors.

Enlisted men are the instructors and assistants of the school, which is commanded by Maj. W. R. Mackinnon and in which theory and practice are combined. The baking equipment is new, and much like that of commercial bakeries.

"In our school," said Sergt. J. L. Neubauer, bakery instructor, "a student becomes familiar with both the old and new methods. Some army establishments don't have the latest equipment."

The student also learns to bake with hardly any equipment—as he would do in the field.

Two Branches Differ.

The cooking branch of the school differs from the baking branch in that only the classroom work is done inside the school building. The student cooks get their practical experience under supervision in the kitchens of the various units quartered at Fort Sheridan. Here also, Instructor Sergt. C. M. Carr explained, students get experience with the old type wood burning army field cook stove and the new style gasoline field stove, as well as with barracks cook stoves.

A student who completes the course with a mark of 850 out of a possible 1,000 points becomes a 1st cook, with a rating as a 4th class specialist, which adds $15 per month to his pay. A student with 700 to 849 points becomes a 2d cook with a rating as 5th class specialist, with a $6 per month boost in pay. A student with under 700 points doesn't graduate. Similar rules control the ratings of bakery graduates.

What Others are Doing.

Now let us look at some of the trades which soldiers are following at Fort Sheridan. The quartermaster corps embraces the largest list of these civilian trades.

"Members of this supply service might properly be termed the business men of the army," said Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, 2d army commander, "because they are charged with the shelter, food, clothing, certain equipment, transportation, and utilities of the army."

Here is a partial list of the specialists required in this service: Warehousemen, plumbers, carpenters, cashiers, engineers, fire chiefs, tinsmiths, countermen, sign painters, horseshoers, bookkeepers, store keepers, welders, and clerks.

The story of two enlisted men sheds some light on life in the Q. M. corps. There is Private First Class H. E. Fishburn of Peoria, in the army nine months.

Because of previous clerical experience he is now a private first class and is scheduled to attend the quartermaster school in Philadelphia, Pa., for three months, after which, if he passes the examination, he will be eligible for the grade of staff sergeant.

Another Typical Case.

Then there is Private [first class] Harold Kronke, in the army 14 years, who is in charge of electrical work at Fort Sheridan. He came to the army as a lineman, but now makes electrical estimates, draws plans, and then, if these are approved, does the work or directs his assistants in doing it. He is married and lives at the post with his family.

The laboratories of the Fort Sheridan hospital, as well as the hospital itself, are manned with soldier trained technicians. The medical corps trains dental and medical laboratory technicians, X-ray technicians, and trains men for food testing, hospital management, first aid, and pharmacy.

Ordnance is a field of army technical work which is not as yet well represented at Fort Sheridan. The 23d ordnance company, which will be what is called a medium maintenance unit, is in process of formation.

The unit as yet has no equipment, but will get 21 trucks which constitute a mobile ordnance repair outfit, equipped to go with troops into the field. There will be a machine shop truck, welding truck, small arms repair truck, instrument repair truck, tool and bench truck, artillery repair truck, auto repair truck.

Here is the training in store for the artillery section of the company:

Subject—	Hours.
75 mm. gun [1897] material	57
75 mm. gun [1917] material	22½
75 mm. pack howitzer material	35
105 mm. howitzer material	13
155 mm. howitzer material	48
155 mm. gun material	25½
3 inch antiaircraft gun material	13

This section will have about 13 weeks of schooling.

40,000 FLOCKING TO COLLEGES IN CHICAGO AREA

National Defense Courses Strike Martial Note.

Mid-September. Cooler weather puts a tang in the air. And from all parts of the country more than 40,000 young men and women are beginning to pour thru the gates of colleges and universities in the Chicago area.

In most of the schools classes will not begin until the latter part of this week or early next week, but preschool activities are already getting under way. Returning upper classmen in many colleges will find new courses on the schedules and expanded faculty personnel to teach them.

Noteworthy among new courses and activities are those related to the national defense program.

N. U. to Open Scott Hall.

Northwestern university officials expect about 6,500 full time students to enroll, plus 8,500 or 9,000 who will attend evening classes at the downtown campus. Students on the Evanston campus will be the first to use Scott hall, the new $750,000 student center and auditorium which is to be dedicated soon.

The new Patten gymnasium also is nearing completion, while work on Abbott hall, the $1,750,000 men's dormitory on the downtown campus, is expected to be finished this school year.

On the downtown campus 400 "extra" students will begin training tomorrow for commissions as ensigns in the United States naval reserve under Northwestern's program of coöperation with the navy department.

Three groups of 400 each will be trained during the three quarters of the school year, and another 800 will receive naval training next summer.

Naval R. O. T. C. Expanded.

In addition, 40 students will be added to Northwestern's naval R. O. T. C. course, bringing enrollment in the unit to 280. The R. O. T. C. unit's facilities were doubled this summer by construction of a $30,000 addition to the Navy building on the Evanston campus. The course is an elective one.

Announcement also was made that $75,000 in aviation scholarships awarded by the Civil Aeronautics board of the department of commerce would be available at Northwestern university. During the academic year 100 scholarships of $350 each and 40 of $1,000 each, providing ground school and flight training instruction, will be awarded.

The University of Chicago's student pilot training program will be expanded this year to accommodate 65 or 70 students. The course is part of the Civil Aeronautics board training program. Last year 30 students participated. Both preliminary and advanced instruction is given. The university has leased the Lansing [Ill.] airport for the exclusive use of the student flyers.

Some of the finer points of artillery science will be expounded by Dr. Gilbert A. Bliss in a new course on exterior ballistics, the science of the trajectory of projectiles after they leave the gun muzzle or bomb rack. Dr. Bliss recently visited the army proving ground at Aberdeen, Md., to acquaint himself with recent developments in ballistics.

The University of Chicago also has doubled the size of its indoor rifle range at Stagg field, and this year it will offer an informal course in rifle shooting to all students.

Of particular interest to the 1,000 or more students at University college, the downtown school of the University of Chicago, was the announcement that President Robert M. Hutchins and Mortimer Adler, associate professor of the philosophy of law, would extend to it the famous course on "Great Books of Antiquity." One of the most popular courses at the university, it has attracted the interest of dozens of visiting celebrities.

Total enrollment at the University of Chicago, including the University college, is expected to top 7,000, showing an increase over last year.

Illinois Tech to Make Bow.

More than 7,300 students are expected to register for day and evening classes in the new Illinois Institute of Technology, created by the merger of Armour Institute of Technology and Lewis institute. All engineering courses, expected to attract 4,300 students, will be held in the Armour division, while another 3,000 students will study arts and sciences in the Lewis division.

About 250 of the students will be receiving preliminary and advanced training in trades closely related to national industrial defense, such as machine shop work, tool and die making, drafting, and welding.

Loyola Offers New Courses.

New courses in 10 departments will be offered by Loyola university this fall, including studies in labor relations and American foreign policy. The university hopes to establish an institute of public administration and labor economics out of the two courses. Wage problems, public welfare administration, criminology, and social insurance are other new courses. Enrollment at Loyola will total about 6,000 on the basis of advance registrations.

What is believed to be a new departure in housing has been undertaken by North Park college with the purchase of a 25 apartment building at Foster and Spaulding avenues. The building will be used to house men students, five in each of the five room apartments. Cost of the building, together with installation of a cafeteria and book store, was about $40,000. The college, which expects this year's enrollment to reach 1,050 junior college students, also spent $35,000 on remodeling the science building.

De Paul Expects 6,000.

De Paul university expects enrollment to top 6,000 this year. Of this total, 3,500 will be evening school students. The freshman class will number more than 1,000.

Expansion of the C. A. B. pilot training program at North Central college, Naperville, will provide instruction this semester for 30 students, according to Edward E. Rall, president of the college. Preliminary training will be given 20 students, and secondary training to 10 students. Flight instruction will be given at the Holy Name School of Aeronautics at Lockport, and at the West Chicago airport. Enrollment at North Central college will be about 600 this year.

Lake Forest college officials expect enrollment to be about 360 or 370. Heating and electrical equipment has been modernized.

Enrollment at Wheaton college was estimated at 1,050. Dr. Paul G. Culley, new dean of men who has just returned from 12 years of missionery work in New Guinea, will take up his duties this year.

The number of students on the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois is expected to increase slightly this year, officials said, estimating the total at 1,000.

Notre Dame university officials said enrollment this year would reach approximately 3,200, a slight decrease over last year. Many applications were refused, it was stated, because of lack of dormitory facilities.

Additions to the faculty include the Rev. Francis J. Boland, new dean of the college of arts and letters, and Prof. Henry B. Froning, new dean of the college of science.

CHAPMAN WINS NATIONAL AMATEUR, 11 AND 9

M'CULLOUGH IS NO MATCH FOR HOME CLUB ACE

Dick Is 3 Up After First 18 Holes.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Richard Chapman, 29 year old Connecticut golfer who began training for the event when it was held in Chicago last year, today won the 47th amateur golf tournament of the United States Golf association by defeating 32 year old W. B. [Duff] McCullough of Philadelphia, 11 and 9, in the 36 hole final over the west course of the Winged Foot club.

To call it a defeat is to be charitable, for Chapman's margin was the second largest in the history of the event. The biggest winning advantage was that of Charley McDonald of Chicago, who won the 1895 inaugural, 12 and 11, from C. E. Sands at Newport, R. I. Since then the only final edge to approach Chapman's was the 10 and 9 rout Bob Jones hung on Phil Perkins at Brae Burn in 1928.

He's the Medalist, Too.

Chapman also became the fifth man in national amateur annals to win both the qualifying medal and the championship. His 140 for the stroke rounds of Monday and Tuesday, were not only a stroke away from the all-time qualifying record, but also equaled the medal and title performances of such able gents as Walter Travis, Chan Egan, Harold Hilton, and Jones. For the 157 holes he played since the week began, the handsome Richard was eight under par, quite a trick over such a layout as Winged Foot, one of the numerous clubs to which he belongs.

Son of the late John D. Chapman, millionaire Connecticut insurance man, Chapman first appeared in this tournament at Ridgewood, N. J., in 1934. He failed to make the grade there, but came back thereafter annually, his best prior performance being in 1938 when he went to the semi-finals at Oakmont. Last year, after losing to Sandy Somerville in the third round, he made a public avowal of his intention of going into training for this event.

Mac Is Away Off Form.

McCullough, the Philadelphia auto parts salesman, who like Chapman, learned his first golf at Pinehurst, N. C., was not up to such a round of golf as those with which he disposed of Willie Turnesa, Johnny Fischer, Gus Moreland, and Ray Billows, the conqueror of Defending Champion Bud Ward. His only evidence of real golf came when he took two of the first three holes with birdies. After that, Chapman whipped out a hot putter and put on a performance almost equal to that of his semi-final match with Wilford Wehrle of Chicago, who was five up on Dick thru nine holes and one down to him at the 18th.

Chapman is the first product of Manhattan's famed 52d street to make good in golf. Dick is a familiar in such spots as the Stork club, Jack White's and Leon and Eddie's, not only as a customer, but also as a gifted entertainer who boasts a fine voice.

Starts Strong.

McCullough started out with a par and two birdies that gave him a 2 up margin on the fourth tee, and led the gallery to suspect that the Philadelphia business man, whose play has been almost completely overlooked thru this week, was going to do in Chapman as he had Turnesa, Moreland, Fischer, and Billows.

Chapman then took the fourth hole with a birdie and the fifth with a

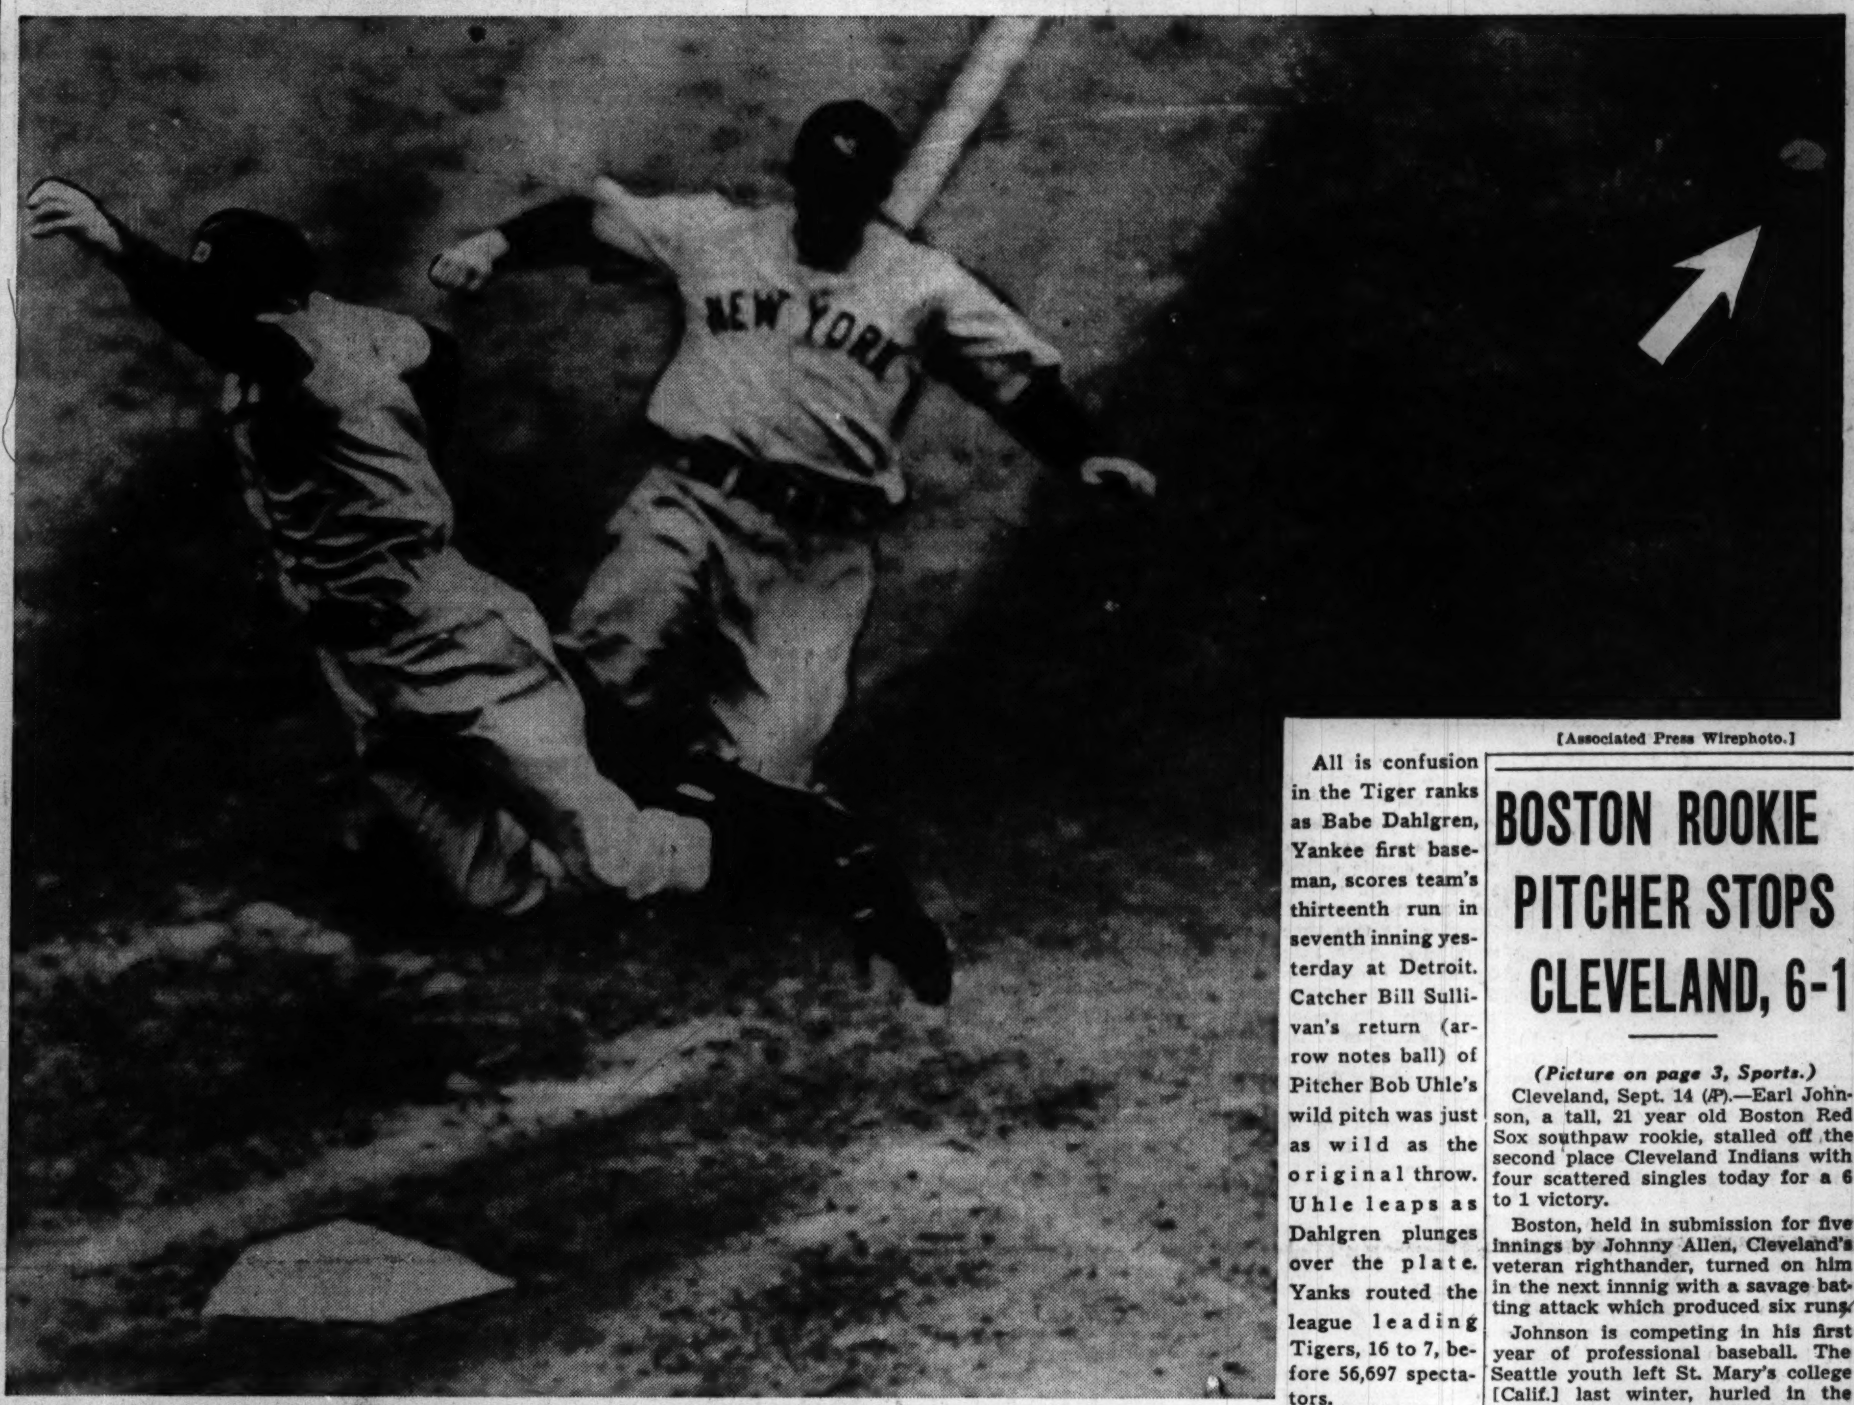
RUN NO. 13 FOR YANKS—BEFORE A'S TIED INTO KNOTT



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

All is confusion in the Tiger ranks as Babe Dahlgren, Yankee first baseman, scores team's thirteenth run in seventh inning yesterday at Detroit. Catcher Bill Sullivan's return (arrow notes ball) of Pitcher Bob Uhle's wild pitch was just as wild as the original throw. Uhle leaps as Dahlgren plunges over the plate. Yanks routed the league leading Tigers, 16 to 7, before 56,697 spectators.

VALDINA MYTH WINS JUVENILE AT HAWTHORNE

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Valdina Myth, a filly owned by Emerson F. Woodward of Texas, won the $5,000 Juvenile handicap yesterday at Hawthorne. Racing side by side with her stablemate, Valdina Groom, she moved up swiftly in the stretch to catch the leader, John Marsch's To A Tee. Then she drew clear swiftly in the last 50 yards to win by two and a half lengths, while To A Tee and Valdina Groom were running nose and nose to the finish line. The camera separated them in that order.

The crowd of 20,000, which had installed J. D. Weil's Flying Streak as the public choice at 2 to 1, saw this filly weaken under her impost of 124 pounds and fail after the manner of nearly all previous favorites in Chicago area stakes this season. She finished ninth. The Valdina entry was second choice in the betting, a little more than 7 to 2.

Woodward's First Stake Victory.

The Valdina representatives had been prominent factors in several important juvenile events during the summer, but this was the first time the colors of this well known racing establishment had been carried to victory in a stake on a Chicago track this year. Trainer J. J. Flanagin had Valdina Myth sharpened up particularly well for this effort. It was her first victory since winning the Santa Catalina Nursery stakes, a baby race at three furlongs last winter at Santa Anita.

A field of 11 went to the post in this six furlong dash. Flying Streak broke alertly and joined with Drumont and DeKalb in a dash toward the far turn. Air Brigade was close up together with To A Tee.

As they began the swing around the turn, Flying Streak, running near to the rail, got in rather close quarters. She dropped back and never again became an important factor. Meanwhile, Drumont and DeKalb were continuing to set the pace, while To A Tee was coming up swiftly to join them.

Valdina Horses Run at Pair.

As the field careened into the stretch, the Valdina pair, moving as a team, charged up on the outside and challenged boldly. Drumont and DeKalb, used up in the early pace, now began to tire, but To A Tee continued resolutely. At the 16th pole Jockey Jack Richard drove Valdina Myth alongside the leader. After a brief duel, To A Tee gave way and Valdina Myth drew out rapidly, but Jockey Al Bodiou kept the Marsch

The Athletics later knocked out Knott, but the Sox won their sixth straight, 6 to 3, advancing within four and a half games of first place.

BOSTON ROOKIE PITCHER STOPS CLEVELAND, 6-1

Cleveland, Sept. 14 (AP).—Earl Johnson, a tall, 21 year old Boston Red Sox southpaw rookie, stalled off the second place Cleveland Indians with four scattered singles today for a 6 to 1 victory.

Boston, held in submission for five innings by Johnny Allen, Cleveland's veteran righthander, turned on him in the next innnig with a savage batting attack which produced six runs.

Johnson is competing in his first year of professional baseball. The Seattle youth left St. Mary's college [Calif.] last winter, hurled in the Piedmont league for a while and was called in by the Red Sox two months ago. He justified Joe Cronin's confidence by coming thru for his sixth American league victory. Johnson has lost only two games.

Today's defeat left the Indians still a half game behind the Detroit Tigers, who lost to the Yankees.

Cramer Starts Big Rally.

The Indians were leading, 1 to 0, when Boston unloaded its barrage in the sixth. Dominic DiMaggio flied out, but Roger Cramer doubled and Manager Joe Cronin walked. Allen got Jimmy Foxx in a deep hole with two strikes and no balls, but Foxx took aim and, almost bunting, dumped a slow double between short and third, scoring Cramer.

Ted Williams was purposely passed to fill the bases and set up a possible double play, but Manager Oscar Vitt's strategy didn't pay off. Bobby Doerr doubled, scoring Cronin and Foxx. The Indians tried chicanery again—with the same result. Charley Gelbert took two balls and was intentionally passed, but the normally weak hitting Gene Desautels singled, scoring Williams and Doerr. Joe Dobson then succeeded Allen, and Johnson struck out, but DiMaggio singled, scoring Gelbert. Cramer grounded out to end the inning.

Indians Score in First.

The Indians manufactured their only run in the first inning as Ben Chapman and Roy Weatherly led off with walks, Chapman scoring on two infield outs.

Hal Trosky, who suffered a leg injury ten days ago, was expected to return to the Cleveland lineup tomorrow to give the club more punch for a double header with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Indians' probable pitchers are Bob Feller, trying for his 25th victory, and Alt [Left] Smith, seeking his 15th, against George Caster and Porter Vaughan.

MONTGOMERY, JENKINS LOOK FOR SHORT BOUT

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 14 (AP).—There were plenty of boys around Broad and Locust streets today who would give even money that the non-title bout between Lew Jenkins, lightweight champion, and Bob Montgomery Monday night won't go beyond six of the scheduled ten rounds.

Foremost among those who subscribed to this belief was Jenkins himself. He not only predicted he would win in six rounds, but that he would do it with a knockout punch.

The Montgomery camp agreed the scrap probably would end in six rounds, but they said Jenkins—not the young Philadelphia Negro—would be on the receiving end of the knockout blow. All you have to do, they contended, is to look at Montgomery's record—16 knockouts in 19 bouts and two decisions.

Montgomery has scored 14 of his knockouts before the sixth round. The other two came in the sixth. Jenkins knocked out 11 of his 14 victims before the sixth round.

YANKEES CRUSH DETROIT, 16-7; CHICAGO WHIPS A'S, 6-3; 6 IN ROW

Gordon's 2 Homers Lead Attack on 6 Pitchers.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 14.—The Yankees, after three straight beatings which indicated they had abandoned their quest for a fifth straight pennant, rose up this afternoon and chased the undertaker from their doorstep just as their 1940 obituary was being written. Four Tiger runs in the first inning put them down, but they revived, gave the air to Buck Newsom, and then went on to make a shambles of the first place Tigers before 56,697 cash admirers. The score was 16 to 7.

The New Yorkers, having a four run first inning thrown at them, looked like a whipped outfit, but only for a time. The Great Newsom, with his healthy lead, held them to one high bounding hit for three innings. Then he encountered his opponents' power. The Yankees blew him out of the premises with five runs in the fourth and two more in the fifth. From there on Tiger pitchers and Yankee hits went along like a circus parade. Altogether there were 16 Yank hits and six Tiger pitchers.

Gordon Gets Two Homers.

Joe Gordon was a particular pain for the one and only Newsom. The Yank second baseman opened the decisive fourth with his 26th homer, and before the inning was finished Bill Dickey had hit his 8th homer. In the next inning Gordon let go with another homer. In the sixth Gordon walked as part of a four run assault on McKain, who had to retire to let Seats finish the inning. In the seventh the Tigers produced the recently purchased Lefty Uhle, but before he retired anybody six Yanks had batted, five of them scoring. Among the six was Gordon, with a single.

If the Yanks, now two games from the Tigers, who are a half game ahead of the Indians, hadn't been so tough about accepting the down and out punch, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York would have lingered in the rôle of local heroes. Lanky Hank notched a single and York his 27th homer in the first inning to round out the four run lead that drove away Spud Chandler and brought forth Marvin Breuer. The latter proved perfect except in two spots, one of them the fifth, in which Greenberg walked to assist in scoring a run, and the other in the eighth, when Hank hit his 34th homer to add two runs to the Tiger count.

Tigers Start Fast.

The great Newsom's strutting was turned into a normal country boy walk when at the opening of the fourth he tried to sneak a 2 and 1 cripple past Gordon. The Yank second baseman rifled it into the lower

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The White Sox continued as frisky dark horses in the American league pennant race when they made it five straight in three days over the Philadelphia Athletics in the final of the set and season between the two teams, 6 to 3, yesterday in Comiskey park. With the Yankees beating the leading Tigers and the Red Sox whipping the Indians, the White Sox advanced to within four and a half games of first place.

Jack Knott registered his 11th victory and was a grand pitcher as long as his troublesome arm held out. Only 17 batsmen, exactly par, faced him in the first 5⅔ innings. Nelson Potter, losing pitcher, made the first hit off Jack with two out in the sixth and in the seventh the big Texan was nicked for three hits and the A's first run. A homer by Benny McCoy and a pass to Al Brancato at the start of the eighth was tip-off enough for Manager Jimmie Dykes and Pete Appleton was sent in. This, by the way, was the first pitching substitution by either team in the five game series.

Appleton got out of the eighth, but when he was jolted in the ninth by Dick Siebert's homer and whistling singles by Frank Hayes and McCoy, Clint Brown went in and ended the game, thanks to a miracle play by Joe Kuhel.

Solters Leads Attack.

In negotiating their sixth straight victory and their 13th in their last 16 played, the Sox banged out 10 hits, including a homer and two singles by Julius Solters and a triple and a single by Luke Appling.

The Sox put over three runs in the fourth, before the A's made their first hit, and Solters' homer in the sixth, his 12th of the year, made it 4 to 0 before the A's made their second hit. Then came the aforesaid bogging down by Knott and Appleton, and the Chicagoans were very pleased to have two runs made in the eighth on one of Solters' singles, Appling's triple and a long fly by Larry Rosenthal.

Only a dozen batsmen faced Knott in the first four innings and in the first three the Sox were only slightly more effective. Skeeter Webb and Rosenthal knocked singles, but they did not bloom into threats.

Tresh Opens 3 Run Rally.

In the fourth the Sox went to town. Mike Tresh opened with a single and took second on a wild pitch. Kuhel walked and Solters singled to center, Tresh scoring and Kuhel reaching third. Kuhel scored on Appling's fly to Sam Chapman, after which Rosenthal's second single put Solters on third. Julius scored on Mike Kreevich's fly to Chapman. Bob Kennedy singled, Rosenthal dashing to third, but the surge ended on Knott's pop to Brancato.

Knott was still in a no hit enterprise in the fifth, and emphatically so. Bob Johnson was called out on strikes, Siebert flied to Solters and Hayes was called out on strikes.

In the sixth, McCoy and Brancato supplied easy outs, then Potter wrecked the no hit prospects with a line single to center. Joe Gantenbein bounced to Kuhel. So, in six innings, only 19 batsmen, one over the minimum, faced Knott.

Knott's Shutout Fades.

Solters led off the home sixth with his homer into the left field lower deck. Appling followed with a single, but nothing else happened in the frame.

Knott got a mild thumping in the seventh, but was able to emerge with only one run scored. Wally Moses opened with the second Philadelphia

SEVERE PENALTY IS ALTERED FOR 1940 FOOTBALL

Colleges Adopt Rule Used by Professionals.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 14.—While the National Collegiate Athletic association, which annually approves the football code under which universities play the game, has been hesitant for some years to make major changes in the rules, a badly needed regulation on forward passing will go into effect this fall. This marks the second time in as many years that the colleges have adopted a rule originally made by the professional league.

The college men sometimes have been accused of following the professionals in rule making. That this is not true may be proved by the collegiate retention of the rule which prohibits forward passing except from a point at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage. The professionals may pass from any point behind the scrimmage line.

The college rules' body rather should be commended for making changes which obviously have been needed and if the pros beat the N. C. A. A. to the changes it is because a league of ten owners is far more able to direct its rules' policy than the unwieldy group of college men acting for several hundred teams.

Involves Ineligible Receiver.

Last year the colleges agreed to bring the ball in 15 yards from the sideline whenever it was dead in this sideline strip, or had gone out of bounds over the sideline. Previously the distance had been 10 yards and the pros upped that to 15. There was no great change in this, for the increased distance merely insured that the offense at all times would be free of the restriction automatically imposed by the sideline.

Now the N. C. A. A. code changes one of the penalties on forward passes which until this year was the most severe in the code. Until 1940, when a forward pass struck an ineligible receiver the penalty was loss of the ball to the defense at the point of the foul. In nearly every case when the pass struck an ineligible player it was accidental. [Those ineligible are the five center men in the line, a backfield man who is more than one foot but less than one yard back of the line of scrimmage, and a guard or tackle of the center group who has dropped back but is not five yards behind the line of scrimmage].

It's a Fair Rule, Now.

The passer, hurried by opponents, sometimes cut loose with a wild pitch and hit one of his blocking linemen in the back. Under the old rule, the opponents took possession of the ball at that point.

The 1940 change provides for [1] loss of 15 yards and a down, or [2] loss of a down. The rule reads:

Forward pass which touches or is touched in the field of play, or end zones, by a player originally ineligible, or one who has become ineligible thru going out of bounds—Loss of 15 yards from the spot of the preceding down, the play to count as a down if the offense occurs beyond the line of scrimmage. Loss of a down if the offense occurs on or behind the line of scrimmage, the ball to be put in play at the spot of the preceding down.

The end men on the line of scrimmage and the backfield men [if one yard or more behind the line of scrimmage] are eligible to receive forward passes. There are two restrictions, however, which produce those occasions when the spectators are at a loss to understand official procedure.

First Pass Restrictions.

First, after an eligible receiver has touched a forward pass he is the only player of his team who can recover the ball unless it is touched in the meantime by a defender. Thus, when the ball is deflected from the offensive end to an offensive back the pass is incomplete. The other restriction provides that an eligible receiver becomes ineligible if he runs out of bounds, altho he may return immediately into the field of play and catch a pass. Only when the defense touches the pass does he regain his eligibility to take the ball while it is in the air.

The penalty for these fouls is loss of a down, the ball to be put in play at the point of the previous down.

While on this subject, it should be added that when a forward pass is incomplete in the passer's end zone, it is a safety and scores two points for the opponents. Actually, the position of the ball is determined by where it strikes the ground. If the defense bats down a pass so that it strikes the goal line or behind it, it is a safety. The pass may have been thrown from any point in the field.

Other Changes Are Minor.

Correspondingly, the position of the ball when caught is determined by where the receiver lands. If he jumps in the air in the field of play near the sideline, catches the ball, but lands on the sideline or outside of it, the pass is incomplete.

Other changes in the 1940 rules refer to cleats on shoes, protection of the kicker when it is not obvious he intends to kick, and returns full responsibility to the officials in judging whether a free ball is kicked intentionally or accidentally.

The next move of the rules' body may bring another professional rule into the N. C. A. A. code. Currently, coaches are advocating a change in the rule governing a second forward pass on the same down. This second forward pass [only one forward pass is permitted on each down by the offense and none by the defense] always is accidental. An intended lateral pass may be thrown at a slight angle forward, for instance.

Under the N. C. A. A. rule the ball is brought back to the point of the previous down and the penalty is loss of a down, altho the first forward pass and subsequent run may have legitimately gained 30 or 40 yards. The pros penalize five yards from the spot of the second and illegal forward pass, thus encouraging the use of lateral passes down field.

NOTRE DAME NO. 1 TEAM WINS, 13-0, FROM NO. 2 SQUAD

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 14 [Special].—Notre Dame's varsity, employing an open attack, scored a 13 to 0 victory over the No. 2 team in a 30 minute scrimmage today. Quarter Back Bob Hargrave directed the varsity in two five play sixty-two yard marches in rapid succession for the scores.

Bob Saggau passed forty-two yards to Johnny O'Brien, right end, on the first play, and Steve Bagarus, right half, ended the march with an eight yard pass to Saggau. Capt. Milt Piepul, full back, missed the placement. Bagarus intercepted a shock troop pass on his 38 yard line to open the second march. Piepul broke thru guard for thirty-one yards, Bagarus ran six yards and passed to Hargrave for fifteen more for a first down on the 10 yard line. Saggau picked up eight and Piepul plunged over, adding the placement.

Third Team Beaten.

The fourth team, featuring the passing of Don Hogan, Chicago left half, upset the third club, 12 to 7, in a second skirmish. Hogan passed twenty-one yards to Tom Miller, left end, to set up the first touchdown. Full Back Bob Leonard scoring on a seven yard drive.

Bill McGannon, left half, scored on a seven yard run for the third team, and Right Half Joe Prokop added the extra point. A fifty-two yard pass, Thad Cassidy to Miller, set up the fourth team's second score, Hogan passing thirteen yards to Cassidy for the touchdown.

Score on Pass.

A twenty-five yard pass from Prokop to Miller, who entered the sixth team as replacements, gave that club a 6 to 0 victory over the fifth team.

George Rassas and John Kovatch, ends; Bob Osterman, center, and Bernie Crimmins, full back, were held out because of injuries. Jim Ford, center, and John Warner, left half, were hurt in the scrimmage but will be in uniform next week.

PASKVAN STARTS GOING.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 14 [Special].—George Paskvan, veteran full back, and Don Miller, junior right half back, led the tentative first team to five touchdowns in Wisconsin's first scrimmage today. Paskvan scored three, one on a pass from Left Half Back Bob Willding, and the other two on line plunges. Miller scored a touchdown on a seven yard smash thru the line, and Mark Hoskins, a sophomore, added the fifth when he slipped around his own right end for twenty-three yards.

HARMON GETS GOING.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 14 (AP).—Tom Harmon dashed across with two touchdowns today to lead Michigan's early season first stringers to a 47 to 7 decision over the reserves. Harmon also kicked four placements for points after touchdowns. The squad was back at full strength, Center Bob Ingalls, who was injured Wednesday, again being in uniform.

IOWA GETS REST.

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 14 [Special].—Dr. Eddie Anderson gave the Iowa squad a recess this morning, then sent it thru one of the hardest afternoon drills of the season.

Anderson indicated today Iowa will participate in very few scrimmages again this season. Continued work on fundamentals, signal drills, and pass defense is forecast for next week.

OHIO TAPERS OFF.

Columbus, O., Sept. 14 [Special].—Ohio State today engaged various drills to bolster up weak spots revealed in yesterday's scrimmage. Tom Kinkade was given the call over Sophomore John Newlin at right half back. Kinkade's experience gives him an advantage over Newlin.

Most of the morning practice was devoted to running plays and drilling on kickoffs. No drill was held in the afternoon.

PURDUE PLAYS GAME.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 14 [Special].—Virtually every member of the Purdue squad was given a chance in a practice game today as Coach Mal Elward continued rebuilding for the opener with Butler two weeks from today.

Line smashes by John Petty, the running and passing of Mike Byelene, and the general all around play of Capt. Dave Rankin at end were among the highlights of the workout.

GOPHERS PLAY A GAME.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 14 [Special].—Aroused because he didn't think Minnesota had made the proper progress during the first week of practice, Bernie Bierman ordered a game today. The first two varsity teams piled up a 69 to 12 victory over the reserves.

The outstanding feat was a 105 yard run touchdown run with a kick-off by Bob Brady, sophomore back. Joe Mernik and Bruce Smith figured in a good share of the touchdowns.

Indiana Hopes This Year for 1st Western Conference Title

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 14.—Indiana never has won a Western conference football championship. It is the only university in the conference that has been denied the honor. But this may be the year.

Eddie Herbert.

Bo McMillin.

On Oct. 5 Indiana opens its 1940 campaign, the seventh that Alvin Nugent [Bo] McMillin has been in charge, against the University of Texas. Then comes Nebraska, and on Oct. 19 Iowa arrives in Bloomington for the opening Big 9 game. Last year the Hawkeyes whipped Indiana in the high scoring duel of the season, 32 to 29, a victory which started the Iowa "iron men" on their drive to second place. This also was a game that might have started Indiana toward the same position, for the Hoosiers finally finished with two victories, three defeats, and were whipped only by Ohio State.

Indiana has been named, at least in national publications, as the dark horse in the Western conference race. Some midwestern writers also have linked Indiana with Michigan and Ohio State as potential victor in the race.

It Looks Like Tough Job.

The fact remains, however, despite the large number of senior athletes, that there is no reason to believe these veterans will accomplish this fall that which they failed to win in 1938 and 1939. In these two years Indiana won three conference games and lost seven.

"On one day Indiana might beat any team in the country," McMillin said today in brief survey of Indiana's material. "We have two of the finest ends in the country. I wouldn't trade Archie Harris and Eddie Rucinski for any two ends you can name, yet I think we are weak at end because we do not have sufficient experienced replacements.

Might Spring Surprise.

"Indiana has good men in the line and a fine array of backs but again, there is no one back who can break up a game at any time. One or two of the newer players may," Bo continued, "but it will take time for them to learn what conference football is all about.

"We've got a fine start on conditioning the team. We have had five days of double drills. If we have a share of luck, and key players are not lost by injury, Indiana might surprise. At this time we are about equal in strength, I figure, with three opponents. Ohio State, of course, has a decided edge. The Buckeyes have practically the same team that defeated us, 24 to 9, last year."

"Will Indiana try to run the ball more this year than last?" we asked McMillin.

"You'll find by looking at the records that Indiana didn't throw any more passes last year than Ohio State," he parried. "Every coach prefers to run rather than pass and Indiana will run as often and as far as possible. But do not forget that in Harold Hursh, Indiana has a great forward passer."

Hursh Needs Running Threat.

Last year's records show that Hursh threw 56 passes, of which 27 were completed for a total gain of 592 yards in five conference games. The same record also shows that he lost three yards by rushing, whereas Tom Harmon of Michigan gained 444 yards by rushing to go along with 394 yards gained by passing. Nile Kinnick of Iowa, who completed 27 passes in 82 attempts, gained 544 yards by this means and added 223 yards by rushing. It is apparent, then, that if Hursh had tried to run more often, or if he had been able to gain by virtue of his teammates' blocking, he would have been the outstanding player of the year.

The complement of the above statistics is that if Hursh could round out his own attack Indiana would have its greatest season in history.

At the start of spring practice Indiana anticipated having two lines of approximately even strength. That hasn't come true at tackle and end. Russell Higgenbotham, who had been slated for end, is ineligible. He is not in school. Frank Smith, now listed as the No. 2 left tackle, pulled a tendon in scrimmage. He will be out at least a week.

Strong Back Field Array.

Indiana has a lot of fine looking backs in addition to Hursh. Tuffy Brooks, at quarter back, should have a good year if he escapes injury. Eddie Herbert, Joe Tofil, and Cobb Lewis are other veterans. Two years ago at Ohio State, when Indiana was beaten 6 to 0 altho decidedly outgaining the Buckeyes, this trio performed brilliantly. But Tofil and Lewis were lost for the season. In fact, Lewis hasn't played since that game. He missed last year because of appendicitis and he dropped out of the university.

Sophomore backs with promise are Dale Swihart, Patsy Ronzone, Al Rucinski, Earl Doloway, and Bob White. Doloway is a fine short passer, but he probably will lack pose in execution of pass plays. Finally, there are Ken Smith and Red Zimmer, either of whom might get away for a long run.

Need Offensive Leader.

The galaxy of backs probably needs an outstanding player to hold the offense together. Croby Davis did it in 1937 when Indiana defeated Ohio State, 10 to 0. Herbert might qualify for this all important task.

At the conclusion of the first week's drills McMillin tentatively listed four teams from the squad of 56. In several cases, particularly in the back field, there is no ranking, for the players are equal and all will be used. The names of the players follow:

Northwestern Squad Holds 1st Scrimmage

Northwestern's football team wound up the first week of practice yesterday with a scrimmage in which every player on the squad was given an opportunity to test his skill before the scrutiny of the coaching staff.

Red Hahnenstein, veteran left half back, turned in some of the best ball carrying performances of the day with two touchdown runs in which he displayed skill in dodging tacklers. Don Clawson, hard hitting junior full back, cut loose with several line smashing sorties. Other backs who looked to advantage were Erwin Madsen, Floyd Chambers, Ike Kepford, and Jim Furlong, half backs, and George Benson, full back. Danny Williams, a small but shifty sophomore half back from East Chicago, sparkled on occasion.

Operating on the first team line yesterday were Al Butherus and Jim Smith, ends; Corne Aarts and Alf Bauman, tackles; Joe Lokanc and George Zorich, guards, and Paul Hiemenz, center. Aarts, a senior, is the only member of this group who was a regular last year.

The Wildcats' growing injured list was increased yesterday as Paul Soper, veteran back, was sent to the sidelines with a pulled leg muscle.

MARQUETTE SCRIMMAGES.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 14 [Special].—The first scrimmage and the discovery of a promising new half back featured Marquette's drill today. Harvey Baerwald, a pole vaulter who joined the squad yesterday, promises to relieve Coach Paddy Driscoll's worries over a scarcity of reserve back field material. Blocking and timing were impressive in today's drill.

TRY TO FILL ILLINI GAP.

EVANS TROPHY IS STOLEN FROM RIVERSIDE CLUB

Dr. J. Earl Harris, publicity chairman of the Chicago District Golf association, reported yesterday that the Chick Evans trophy has been stolen from the Riverside Golf club, where it has been on display this year, Riverside having won the trophy in 1939.

The silver trophy was placed in competition by the Chicago District Golf association in 1916 in honor of Chick's victories in both the national open and national amateur tournaments that year.

PACKERS START TITLE DEFENSE IN GAME TODAY

Eagles Invade Green Bay; Cards Play Lions.

Today's Schedule

Philadelphia at Green Bay.
Brooklyn at Washington.
New York at Pittsburgh.
Chicago Cardinals vs. Detroit, at Buffalo, N. Y.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

The National Football league, its season opened officially if not auspiciously by the Cardinals and Pittsburgh last Sunday, settles down to its three months' championship pursuit on a fulltime basis today. Four games bring into action all teams but the Chicago Bears and Cleveland Rams, a couple of important western division entries who make their debuts in league play next Sunday.

Green Bay opens defense of its world championship today by entertaining Davey O'Brien and associate Philadelphia Eagles. The Packers will be seeking their tenth consecutive victory in a string that began after the Bears' game last November and includes all-star triumphs over the pick of the National league's stars on the coast last January and the college all-Americans in Chicago two weeks ago. This probably will be the most exciting encounter of the day, altho Brooklyn's visit to Washington will be more important as an index to division races. It will be closely watched for another reason, too.

Jock Sutherland's Debut.

This is the day that Dr. John Bain [Jock] Sutherland makes his debut as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Sutherland's University of Pittsburgh teams literally ran him to fame as a college coaching master. He frowned on the forward pass, some say because he never had a passer, others because his teams were always good enough to run over the opposition, and not a few envious critics claimed it was because he did not know anything but line bucks and off tackle smashes.

Whatever the reason, it will be interesting to see how Sutherland has adjusted himself to the professional game, in which mammoth lines and stubborn defenses make it necessary to pass or finish out of the money. To make the famous college coach's debut more interesting, they have matched him against the Washington Redskins, the strongest team in the eastern division and one of the finest in the league, despite the temporary loss of Andy Farkas, its great back.

The Chicago Cardinals, disappointed over their failure to get better than a tie in Pittsburgh last week, and about ready to get some good out of Marshall Goldberg, tackle a Detroit team that once again will rely on the wide reverses and weak side full back smashes on which Ernie Caddel and Ace Gutowsky brought Coach Potsy Clark a championship in 1935. They battle in Buffalo, N. Y.

Lions Miss Gutowsky.

In Caddel's place will be Lloyd Cardwell, who need make no excuses to Caddel. But there will be no Gutowsky at full back to do the spinning and carry the ball inside and outside the opposition's right tackle. Gutowsky has retired. Bill Shepherd, a great half back, will be at the full back position with Howie Weiss, former Wisconsin star. Whether Shepherd and Weiss can fill in well enough for Gutowsky remains to be seen. Perhaps Whizzer White can take up the slack. He will play the position held down by Dutch Clark during the Lions' championship days.

Coach Jimmy Conzelman has attacked the Goldberg problem from a different angle. He has switched the former Pitt star to full back. Here he can get by without the passing and kicking that have prevented him from showing any of his collegiate brilliance in pro football. Mario Tonelli, rookie from Notre Dame who suffered a bruised leg in Pittsburgh last week, will start at full back, however.

Schneidman Available.

Herman Schneidman, veteran blocking back obtained from Green Bay last week, will be available in Buffalo and so will Bobby Kellogg of Tulane, who will share the left half back assignment with Beryl Clark and Hugh McCullough.

Green Bay's debut in league play should be a spectacular display of aerial fireworks, what with O'Brien, Cecil Isbell and Arnie Herber all in one game. O'Brien completed 19 passes against the Packers the last time the two teams met and Green Bay had to indulge in a few last minute heroics to salvage victory. That was last season. O'Brien has been as effective as ever this year and with a better team helping him he has projected the Eagles into the eastern championship picture.

Pittsburgh will try to wean back disappointed followers by giving a better exhibition against the Giants than it did in allowing the Cardinals to tie last week. The Steelers, for all their poor football a week ago, should not be entirely hopeless. The Giants are far from the football team that reached the playoff last year, or at least, that is the impression they left in taking a 16 to 7 licking from a group of unheralded eastern college all-stars last week.

LITTLE BEANS IS SOME PUMPKINS IN HAVRE STAKE

Upsets Level Best to Win $10,000 Eastern Shore.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 14 (AP).—Little Beans, a 7 to 1 shot, sprang a surprise in the $10,000 added Eastern Shore handicap today by racing to a nose victory over Crispin Oglebay's filly, Level Best.

Right down to the wire it appeared as if Level Best, winner of five of her six starts this year, might add another victory to her string, but Jockey Eddie Smith got Little Beans up on the inside to triumph in a photo finish.

Level Best Is Favorite.

To the crowd of 15,000 which turned out for the opening of Havre de Grace's fall meeting, it was a decided shock. They had backed Level Best into favoritism.

C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap, recent winner of the Washington Park Futurity, was third in the field of nine 2 year olds, a length behind Level Best and a length and a half ahead of Brandon stable's Cavalier.

The victory was worth $9,725 to Mrs. L. Palladino. Little Beans covered the six furlongs in 1:11 2-5 and paid $16.40.

Level Best Close Up.

Little Beans, a consistent performer in New England, had been conceded little chance to take the Eastern Shore and by far most of the $58,763 wagered on the race went to support Level Best and Porter's Cap.

Level Best never was farther back than second and took the lead as the field swung into the homestretch.

HASH SETS RECORD

New York, Sept. 14 [Special].—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash, trailing early, drove by the field in the Edgemere handicap at Aqueduct today to win by a length in track record time before 20,255.

An objection was lodged, and the stewards deliberated at length before giving the Greentree horse $8,175, the major partion of the gross purse of $11,675. War Dog, the early pace setter, was second, two lengths ahead of Dit.

Hash's time, under topweight of 121 pounds, was 1:50 2-5 over a fast track, lowering by four-fifths of a second the record for nine furlongs set at the summer meeting by Westnesia.

The six furlong track record was equalled in the second race, and broken by Stimady in the third. Stimady's mark then was equalled by Archworth in the fourth.

A logical choice, the four year old, Hash, ran to form. The objection to his victory was based on the fact that as Hash moved forward, it was supposed that he brushed Aethelwold. However, Nick Wall, rider of Athelwold, said his horse was not struck by Hash and the race was declared official.

Hash, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, returned $5.50, $2.80, and $2.50.

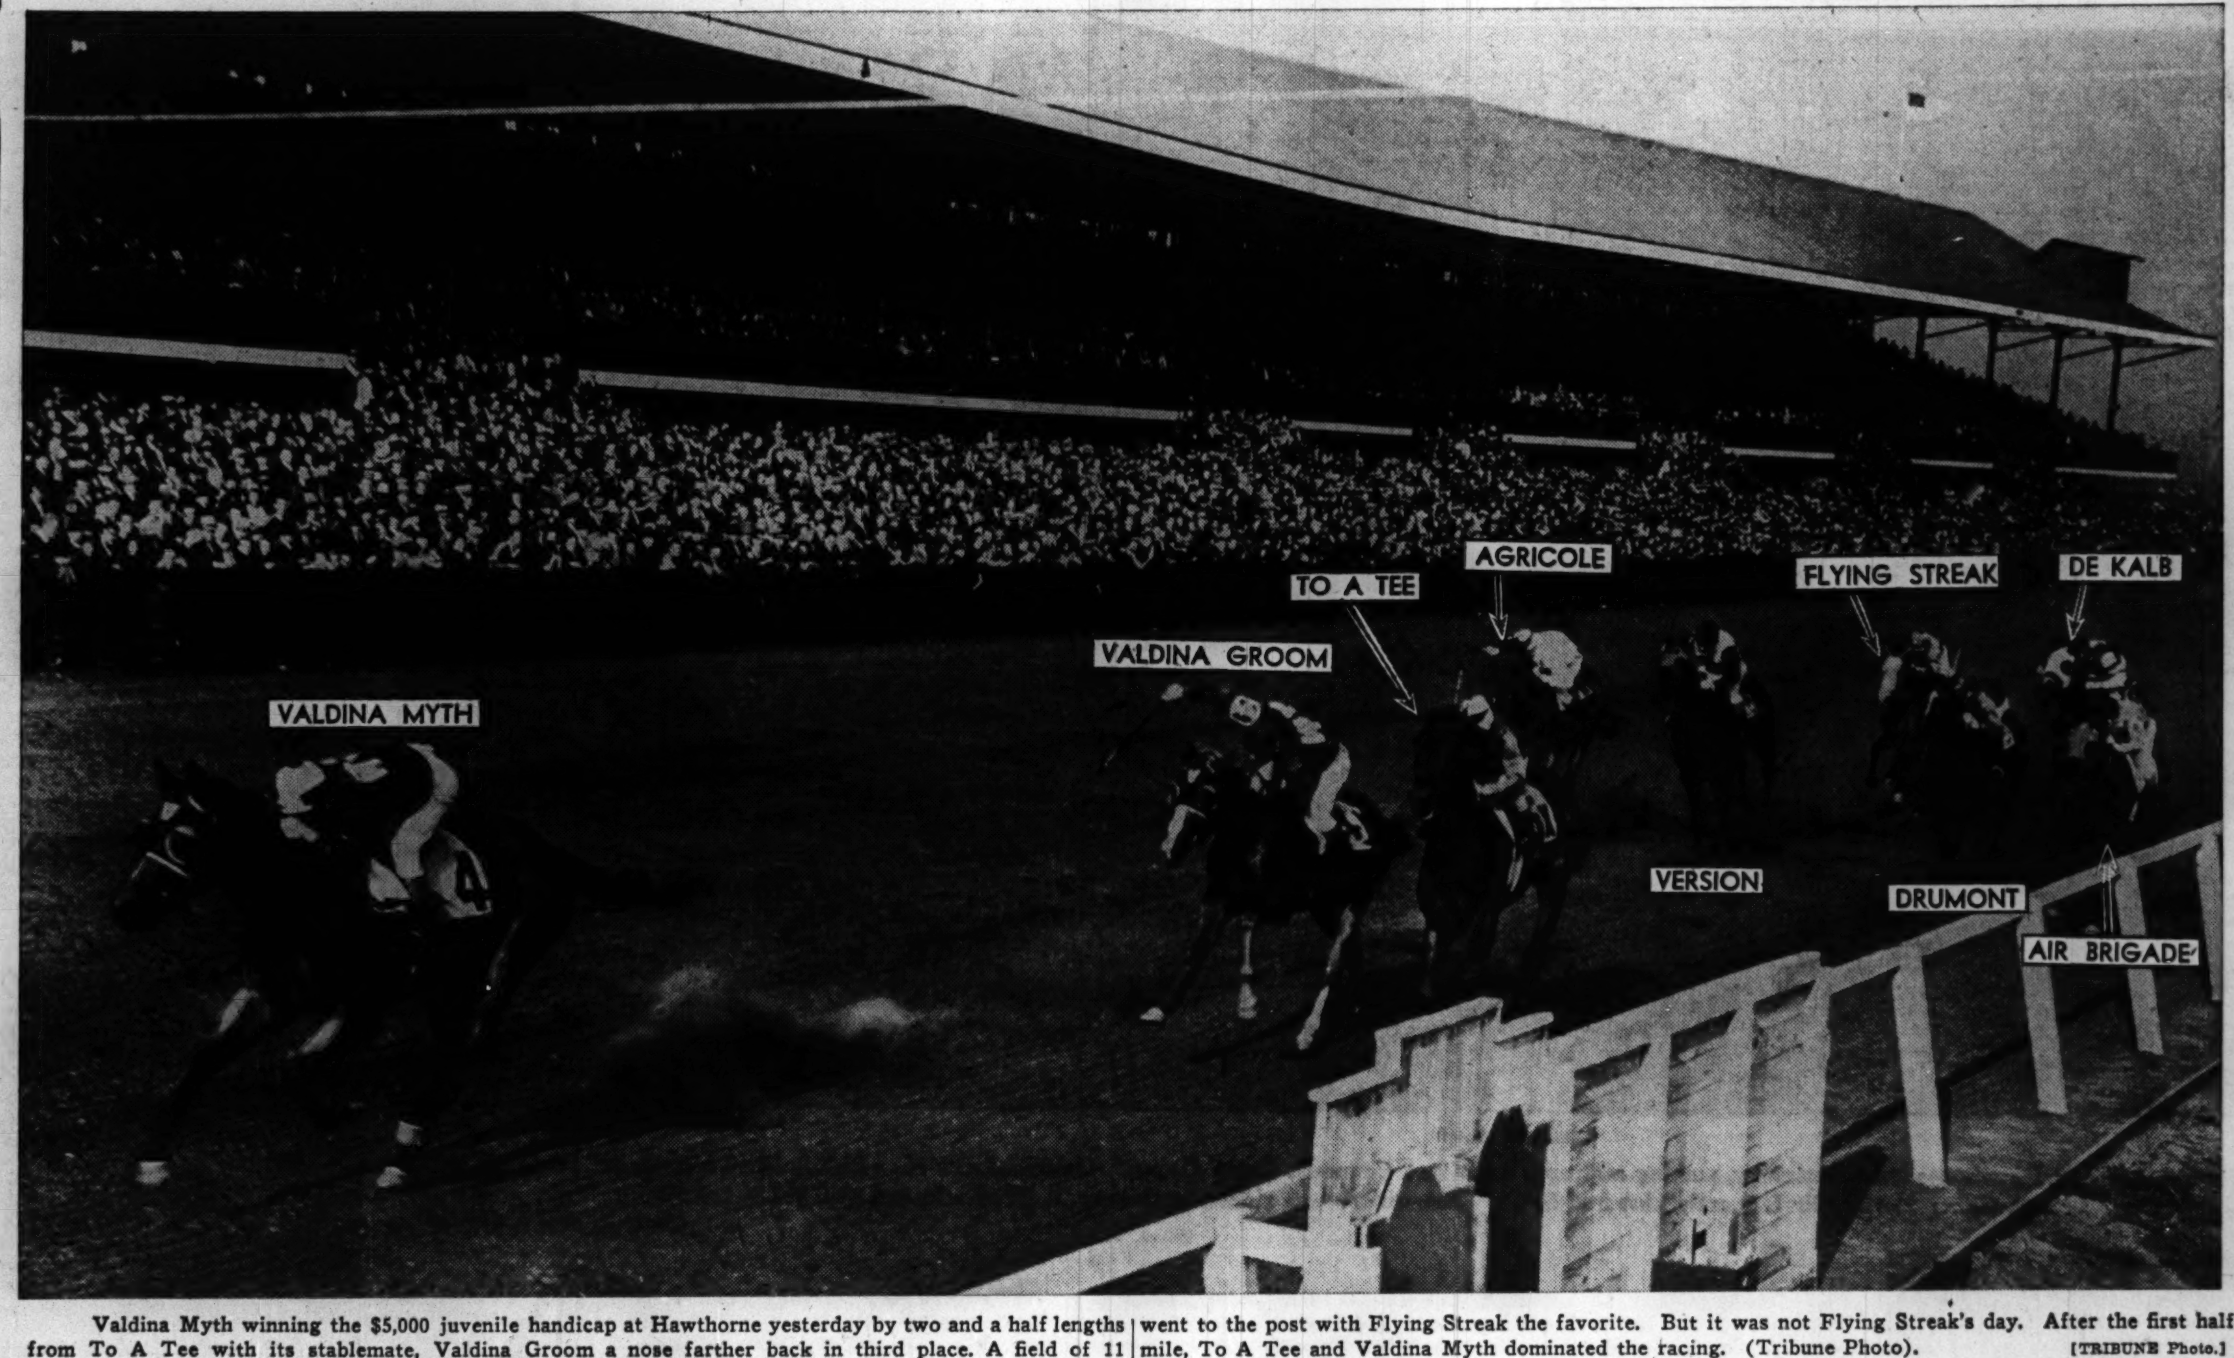
VALDINA MYTH WINS JUVENILE STAKE



Valdina Myth winning the $5,000 juvenile handicap at Hawthorne yesterday by two and a half lengths from To A Tee with its stablemate, Valdina Groom a nose farther back in third place. A field of 11 went to the post with Flying Streak the favorite. But it was not Flying Streak's day. After the first half mile, To A Tee and Valdina Myth dominated the racing. (Tribune Photo). colorbearer running long enough to withstand Valdina Groom.

The winner ran the six furlongs in 1:12. Tickets on the entry returned $9.60, $4.00, and $4.60 across the board. Place and show prices on To A Tee were $10.40 and $7.20. The mutuel handle was $547,468. On the corresponding day last year it was $425,903.

Advocator Scores.

Charles S. Howard's Advocator redeemed himself for his sluggish performance of the preceding Saturday by winning the Challenger II. handicap, secondary feature. After trailing the field during the early stages of this mile and a sixteenth gallop, Advocator began moving up rapidly on the last turn. He was running third as they straightened out for the run to the wire. Quickly he disposed of Rude Awakening and went on to engage Busy Morn in a spirited duel in midstretch. Then he drew clear to win by a length and a half. Busy Morn finished two and a half lengths in advance of Rude Awakening.

Busy Morn, which ran second to Burning Star in last week's Hawthorne Handicap, was established as the 3 to 2 favorite. Advocator, which had finished sixth on that occasion after being installed as the public choice, was demoted to second place in the betting at odds of 5 to 2.

Advocator made his winning effort in 1:44 2-5, which was only 4-5 of a second slower than the track record. In the mutuels he paid $7.60, $4.20 and $3.60. Place and show tickets on Busy Morn were worth $3.20 and $3. Rude Awakening returned $5 to show.

Count Counsel Wins.

A field of seven sprinters went to the post in the Bostonian purse, a dash of six and a half furlongs. After some precarious moments when Sir L drifted out in the stretch, Court Counsel got to the front and drew clear to win by two and a half lengths. Comendador II. was an equal distance in advance of the third horse, Designer.

Imperial Jayna, the 9 to 5 favorite, joined Sir L in a speedy sprinting duel soon after the break. They were at the quarter in :22 3-5 and the half in :46. As the stretch run began, Imperial Jayna began to show the effects of the pace. She dropped back steadily and Sir L took command. Meanwhile Jockey T. P. Martin had been bringing Court Counsel along and Comendador II. also was launching a strong bid.

Sir L Swings Out.

As Court Counsel drew up on even terms with the leader in the last furlong Sir L, tiring from his early efforts, began to bear out badly. For a few strides it seemed as tho the Court Counsel would be impeded sufficiently to take him out of contention, but Martin drove him past his rival just in time and went on to win. Court Counsel's backers collected $12.80, $6, and $4.60. His time for the six and a half furlongs was 1:18 2-5.

Mardromel Wins Two Mile Race.

Six distance runners went to the post in a two mile event. Mrs. Elizbeth Oros' Mardromel was the winner. After Boston Sound had set the pace for nearly a mile and three-quarters he gave way approaching the stretch. Mardromel took command and galloped on home a little more than a length ahead of Listowel, while Mon Reve was taking third money. Mardromel was the favorite, returning $5.40, $3, and $2.40.

AUTOGRAPH reached the leaders the last eighth and was up under a hard drive nearing the end. MERRYMOOD raced abreast of MELODIST from the start, made strong efforts in the last half mile, then fought it out courageously approaching the finish. MELODIST could not get clear while being rated in front, saved ground all the way, then tired in the closing furlong.

ADVOCATOR, inclined to bear out going to the first turn, was straightened away when reaching the back stretch, continued on the outside when working his way into contention at the final turn, caught BUSY MORN inside the closing furlong, then drew out under urging. BUSY MORN, displaying nice speed to set the pace, stalled off mild bids from RUDE AWAKENING but was unable to stay with the winner when caught. RUDE AWAKENING, rated back of the pacemaker, made a stout challenge midway of the final turn, then held on gamely in the closing drive.

VALDINA MYTH, outpaced for the first half mile, gained fast in the last five sixteenth, circled her company entering the home stretch, overhauled the leaders, and came out smartly under light pressure. TO A TEE, in the thick of contention from the start, bettered his position to take the lead when entering the home stretch but tired under severe pressure in the last eighth. VALDINA GROOM, raced in the first flight under stout urging, improved his position while losing some ground and continued tenaciously to the finish.

MARDROMEL, under steadying restraint for the first mile, was permitted to go along on her own courage to the final turn, went up fast to engage BOSTON SOUND nearing the homestretch, assumed command midway of the homestretch, then had enough in reserve to withstand LISTOWEL. The latter, forwardly placed in the first half mile, was allowed to fall back after eight furlongs, responded gamely in the late stages, and finished determinedly. MON REVE trailed for a mile and one furlong, moved forward to make a strong challenge entering the homestretch, but failed to keep up nearing the finish.

Winner trained by C. W. Tague. Went to post at 5:56½. At post ½ minute. Start good from gate. Won easily, place driving.

GETAWAY JACK, saved back of the leaders until nearing the last turn, moved up swiftly to engage the leaders, went into an easy lead, and held sway to the end. BAR PLAY, lacking speed in the first six furlongs, improved his position steadily when shaken, and closed gamely on the inside when reaching the homestretch. NICHOLAS S. was prominent under steady pressure and held on with good energy when the real test came.

MIDGET RACING AT RIVERVIEW TO END TONIGHT

Midget auto racing will close for the season tonight at Riverview speedway, Addison street near Western avenue, with the peak event of the summer months scheduled—the final contest for the Jay Horn trophy, emblematic of the season championship.

Entries will be augmented by drivers who are returning to Chicago for the closing program after summer campaigns in the east and west.

Interest will center in the battle among four drivers who lead in the point standings for the season title. They are Wally Zale, who tops the list; Ted Duncan, Ray Richards, and Bob Muhlke, who are pressing closely. A victory in the main event will yield the trophy and the championship for any one of the quartet.

Should Zale win the deciding contest he will have been victorious in 46 feature races in midget competitions during the outdoor season, 12 of which were scored at Riverview. The other victories were achieved in races at Milwaukee, St. Louis, Racine, and tracks in the midwest area.

HORICON MARSH TO REMAIN OPEN FOR DUCK SEASON

Fond du Lac, Wis., Sept. 14 [Special].—Altho portions of Horicon marsh, one of the largest game preserves in the country, may become the property of the federal government or state conservation commission for use as a wild life refuge, the area will remain open for duck and pheasant hunting this fall. This announcement was made by Walter E. Scott, supervisor of the state's interest in the marsh purchase plan.

Options have been obtained on almost all of the central area of the marsh and the federal men have been making a survey to determine the ultimate cost of the border lands. The marsh has been the subject of legal disputes for more than half a century.

AKNUSTI RELIES ON OFFENSE IN POLO TITLE GAME

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Gerry Brothers' Aknusti team will match its high powered attack against Great Neck's strong defense tomorrow in the final match of the national open polo tournament at the Meadow Brook club.

Aknusti has done the only important scoring in the tournament, routing Winston Guest's Gulf Stream Four 11 to 6 Wednesday. The Gerrys and their No. 1 man, Gerry Smith, have concentrated on goal-getting, leaving most of the defensive work to Alan Corey, youthful back.

SPEED CHART ON BIRDS COMPILED; DUCK HAWK NO. 1

Flies 175 Miles Per Hour in High Gear.

BY BOB BECKER.

It won't be long until millions of birds will be on the flyways, going south for the winter months, and duck hunters soon will be talking about the speed of water fowl in the marshes and trying to estimate the number of miles per hour these birds are flying. It's an acknowledged fact that the speed of many kinds of birds has been exaggerated for many years. All hunters especially are prone to attribute speeds of 75, 100 and even 150 miles per hour to water fowl—usually the ones we missed!

After many years of research, biologists have been able to compile some extremely accurate records on the speed of both song and game birds. Here is the latest compilation of facts on this subject which gives us a pretty good idea of how fast some of the better known species of birds go from here to there:

Mallard Maximum Is 58.

Mallard duck . . . 58 miles per hour is average maximum level flight thru still air. Airplanes have recorded speeds of 46, 60, 50 and 55 miles per hour for Mallards.

Pintail and canvasback . . . Ornithologists using airplanes have clocked these birds between 65 and 72 miles per hour. When they reached the 72 mark the birds were plainly exerting themselves—frightened individuals that had put an extra spurt into their wings.

Teal . . . Not as fast as the canvasback. The heavier, streamlined canvasback can beat the lightweight teal without undue effort. Teal's speed varies from 32 [loafing] to 68 miles per hour. In using a falcon against mixed flocks of teal and mallards to see which species the predatory bird could overhaul first, ornithologists have found that the teal drops behind first, and the longer the flight the more it lags. E. L. Munson, in timing ducks with an airplane, reported that twice he saw teal [greenwinged] outflown by canvasbacks. One of the most interesting points for hunters to remember about duck speeds is this: the mallard has a wing surface 20 per cent greater than the canvasback, yet the latter has a faster wingbeat and thus attains higher rate of speed.

Geese Comparatively Slow.

Wild goose . . . Top speed is 60 miles per hour and it could maintain that only a short time. Usually the honkers fly between 40 and 45 miles per hour.

Quail . . . a Georgia ornithologist in recording the speed of Bob Whites found them flying from 28 to 38 miles an hour. When frightened they may reach 48 miles an hour. Rapid wing beats and small stature add to the delusion of extreme speed of this popular game bird.

Duck Hawk . . . The cannon ball among birds. Clocked at 175 miles per hour when swooping for a bird. Travels three times as fast as most ducks.

ADD CLARK HIGH OF HAMMOND TO PREP CIRCUIT

Michigan City, Ind., Sept. 14 [Special].—The membership of the Northern Indiana High School conference was increased to 23 today with the granting of a franchise to George Rogers Clark of Hammond by athletic heads of the conference in their annual fall meeting. The admission of George Roger Clark, who will become an active member in the western division with the opening of the 1941 football season, gave the western half a membership edge of 12 to 11 over the eastern wing.

Today's action marked the third membership granted by conference officials this year. At their spring session North Side of Fort Wayne and John Adams of South Bend were voted into the eastern division. North Side and Adams will not officially compete for championships until the 1941 gridiron campaign.

P. D. Pointer, chairman of the schedule committee, and principal of South Bend Central, asked athletic heads to meet at South Bend on Sept. 25 to arrange dates for playing four conference games whittled off eastern division football schedules due to a prevailing infantile paralysis epidemic in St. Joseph county.

Sites were awarded for the 1940 conference track, wrestling, and cross-country meets. Roosevelt of East Chicago was awarded the track meet; the swimming meet went to Whiting; wrestling to South Bend Central, and the hill and dale event to Gary.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 14.—Another skeleton in the Cubs' closet popped out today, and so the Phillies walked off with the final game of the series, 5 to 3. It was the second time in two days that Cub discards have beaten the Chicagoans.

Chuck Klein, a Wrigley alumnus, walloped a pinch triple with the bases filled in the sixth inning today to match the Cubs' offense. Then a home run by Rookie Danny Litwhiler decided the game. These two drives were about all that was needed to whip the Cubs, but 42 year old Sylvester Johnson made sure of success with a five hit performance that more than matched the six hits made by his comrades off Bill Lee, Vance Page, and Ken Raffensberger.

Lee Is Jolted.

Lee, after a long vacation, was in quest of his ninth victory. Instead the four hits he surrendered sent him to his sixteenth defeat. Up to the time of Klein's stinging triple, Big Bill had limited the Phils to three hits, two of which occurred just prior to Klein's appearance.

Two of the Cubs' five hits were Stanley Hack's fourth and fifth homers of the season, both of which came with no one on base. The Phils' victory gave them two out of three in the series and pushed the Cubs a little deeper into sixth place.

Hack Gets Busy.

Until the Cubs managed to push over a run in the third inning, Lee and Syl Johnson were engaged in a pitching duel. Mattick dropped a single to center, moved to second on Lee's sacrifice, and scored when Hack singled to right to mar Johnson's perfect record. Hack tried for second on the throw-in, but was out, Litwhiler to Mahan to Jumonville.

Hack gave the Cubs a 2 to 0 lead in the first half of the sixth with his fourth homer of he season. His drive against the center field wall bounced away from Marty and the fleet Hack raced for home, making it when Jumonville's relay was wide of the plate.

Lee's blowup occurred quite suddenly in the sixth. With one out, Mahan singled to center and Marty fouled to Todd. Rizzo's single was the third hit off Lee and the bases were filled when May walked. At this point Manager Doc Prothro sent Klein up to hit and Chuck obliged with a triple down the right field line. This finished Lee and Page was summoned to retire the side with the Cubs behind, 3 to 2.

Litwhiler Busts One.

BROWNS CLOSE IN ON SENATORS BY WINNING, 5 TO 2

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 14 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns moved to within a game and a half of the sixth place Washington Senators today by defeating them, 5 to 2. Bob Harris and Ken Chase tangled in a pitcher's duel, Harris giving up only six hits to Chase's seven. A triple by the Brown pitcher in the third led to the only score of the first six innings.

Washington tied it up in the seventh and went ahead in the eighth, only to have the Browns come back in their half and score four runs on three singles, two errors and a walk. Score:

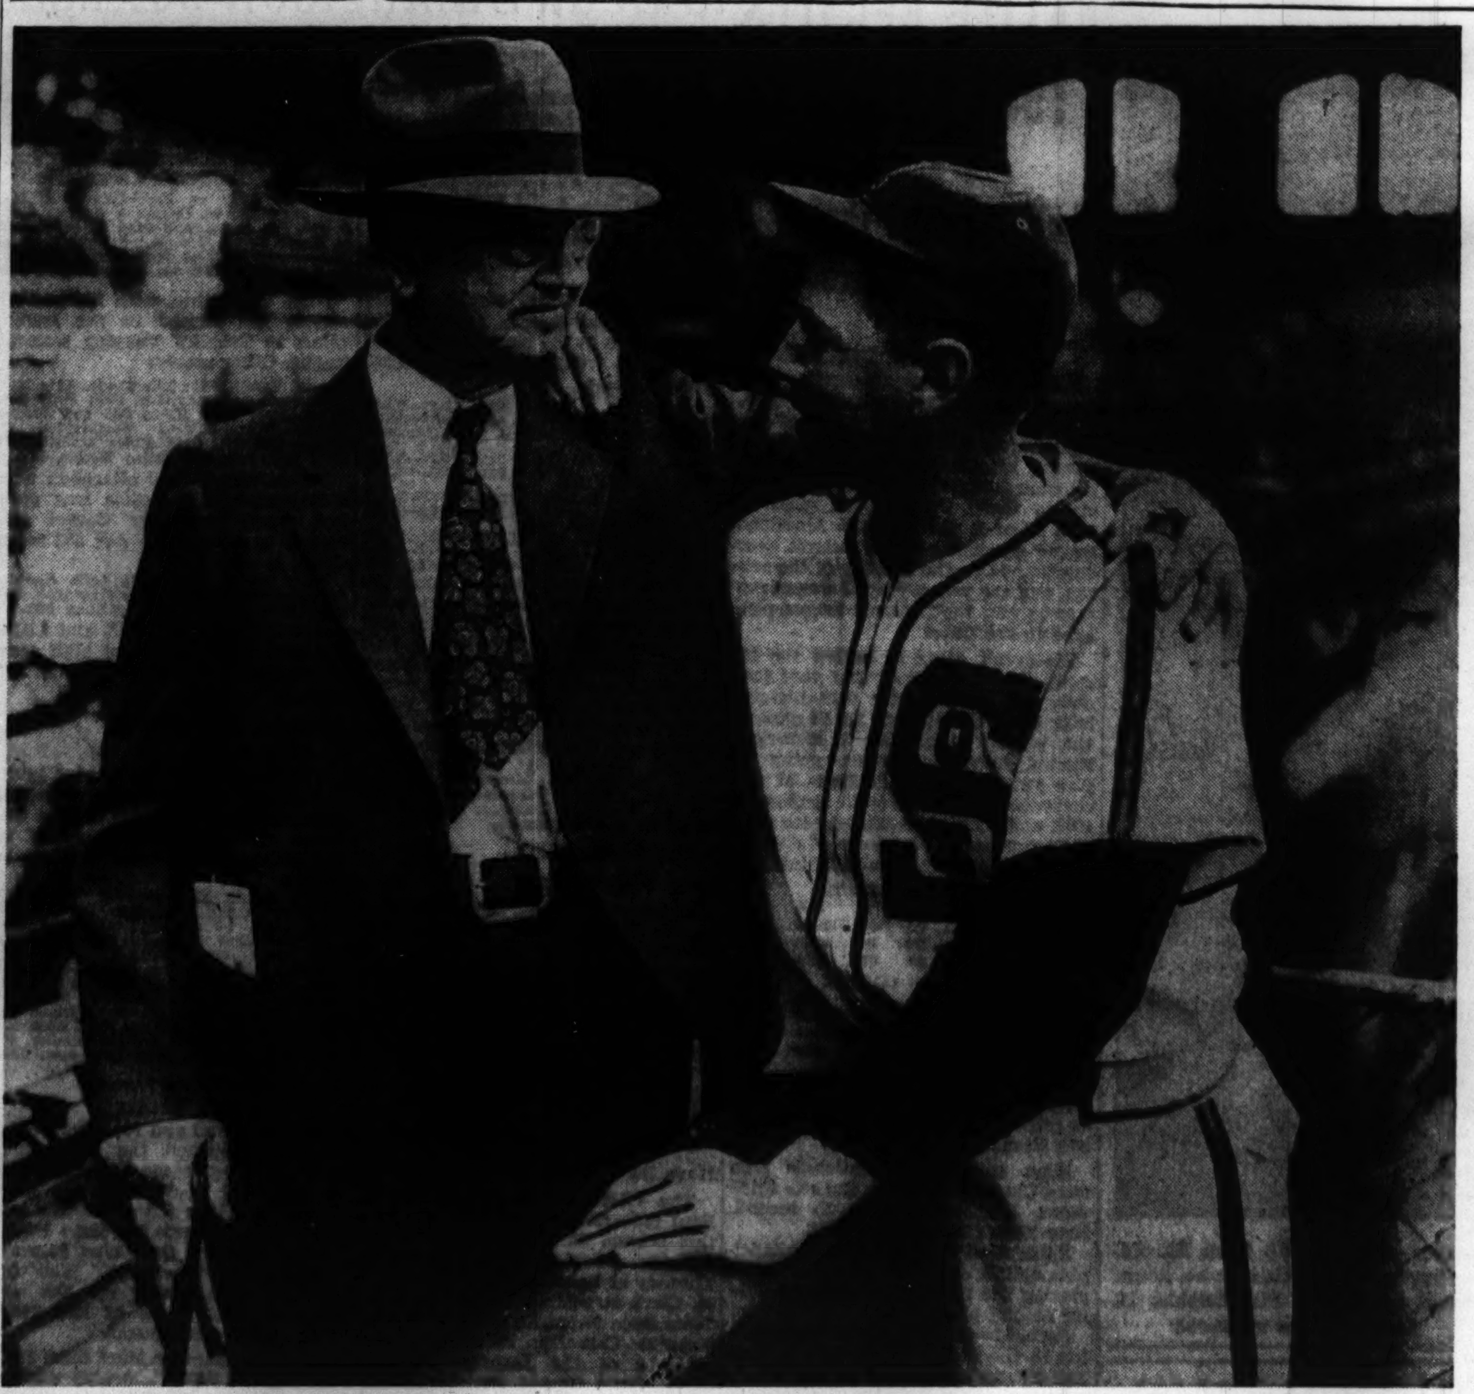
THE LYONSES, MISTER AND SON, TED



Ted Lyons, White Sox veteran, with his father, A. F. Lyons, who came up from Vinton, La., to help Ted celebrate Ted Lyons day at Comiskey Park today. Ted has been pitching for the White Sox for 18 years, but when he steps out on the mound against Boston today, it will be the first time Mr. Lyons has seen him in a big league game.

It's Ted Lyons Day Today; Fans Reward 18 Years of Sox Service

The boys in the White Sox clubhouse will be safe today from Ted Lyons, the team's champion roughhouser.

Ted, who likes to wrestle and frolic with his mates, will be too busy for such nonsense this afternoon. In the first place, he's going to pitch against the Red Sox, and on those days Ted pitches, horse play flies out the window.

But he has more on his mind today than pitching. After all, it's the 546th game of his big league career. This is Ted Lyons' day. A fan's suggestion that the Chicago fans should do something about honoring the veteran of all Chicago big league veterans crystalized into today's testimonial.

Gifts Galore.

For weeks now, fans have been contributing dimes, and the amount will be enough to pay Manager Jimmy Dykes' ball field fines for the next 10 years. Fans, rival big league ball players—and even newspapermen—have contributed.

A partial list of the gifts: A $1,550 automobile from the fans; other gifts from the fans including fishing and hunting equipment valued at $300 and gasoline cards; hunting coat and trousers from the Chicago chapter, Baseball Writers' association of America; a radio from Chicago sports announcers; a set of golf clubs from Andy Frain's ushers; a golf bag from vendors in the ball park; substantial cash gift from the ball club owners; cash gift and other presents from White Sox mates; personal gifts from Harry Grabiner, vice president, and Joe Barry, traveling secretary; monogram blanket of royal blue with his number "16" in center surrounded by a circle of 18 stars, one for each year he has been with the team.

The old maestro will pitch the first game and Johnny Rigney the second. Joe Heving and Les Fleming will do the pitching for the Red Sox, according to advices from Cleveland.

Battles Ups and Downs.

Lyons, at 39 years of age still one of the leading big league pitchers, has spent his entire professional career with the White Sox. He joined the club in June of 1923 after being graduated from Baylor university, where he also was a basketball star.

He has watched a parade of White Sox managers, most of them unsuccessful. He has seen hundreds of teammates come and go. Ted has had his ups and downs, too. Something snapped in his arm one cold winter afternoon in Houston when he was pitching against the Giants. That was in 1931. He won four and lost six games that season. It was feared he was thru. But he nursed the arm back to strength, and perfected a knuckle ball that still is the talk of the big leagues.

Included in his big moments is a no hit game, Aug. 21, 1926, over the same club he faces today. Those players who swung vainly at his pitches are all gone from the major league scene, and in their stead are such fellows as Jimmy Foxx, Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio, Flit Cramer, and Joe Cronin.

Cubs Remember Him, Too.

Even last year, the oldster set a personal record, giving no bases on balls in 42 consecutive innings. And his triumph in the seventh and deciding game of the 1939 city series is so recent it needs little recalling.

His best year was 1925, when he won 21 and lost 11. In 1927 he scored 22 triumphs and lost 14 times for a second division club. His most prolific year was 1930, when he won 22 and dropped 15.

Today, if he can get his mind off the mighty tribute that will come his way, Ted will be trying for his 231st victory. He has lost 210 games, has pitched 3,734 innings. He has a pretty good batting average, too, especially with the fans, who are putting it at 1.000.

When Clint Brown had to replace Pete Appleton, who had replaced Jack Knott yesterday, it was the first time the Sox had employed more than two pitchers in any game since Aug. 1 when Eddie Smith, Appleton and Brown worked against the A's here.

Knott, by the way, has won seven of his last eight starts but has finished only one of the eight. He was the only starting pitcher on either side in the five game series with the A's who didn't go all the way.

None of the games in the statistically remarkable Sox-A's five game series required two hours. The shortest game was reeled off in 1 hour and 18 minutes; the longest in 1 hour and 53 minutes.

hit, a single to right, and stopped at second on Chapman's single to left. Johnson hit into a double play, Moses taking third, whence he scored on Siebert's single to right. Hayes ended the session with a foul to Kennedy.

Potter, doubtless aware of Knott's propensity for fading in the late innings, pitched the Chicago seventh with great verve. He made Knott tap to McCoy, then struck out Webb and Tresh.

Appling's Triple Helps.

Knott's weariness was further reflected when McCoy opened the eighth with his sixth homer of the year. Brancato walked and Appleton replaced Knott.

The Sox added needed insurance with those two runs in the eighth. Solters singled with one down and scored on Appling's triple. Appling scored on Rosenthal's fly to Moses.

Yanks Crush Tigers, 16-7; Gordon Stars

DiMaggio Comes Thru.

DiMaggio, who is a hard guy to fool, singled past Higgins and Selkirk scored. Newsom revealed additional symptoms of distress by walking Keller. The first pitch to Dickey was wide so Newsom figured he could cause a shock by tossing up the cripple. Dickey walloped it into the right field seats, sending two men in ahead of himself to put the Yanks in the lead, 5 to 4. Dahlgren then popped Bartell and Crosetti passed up a third strike.

After Breuer had fanned to open the fifth Gordon hit into the upper deck in left for his second homer. Another run blossomed from a pass to Selkirk after Rolfe had flied to McCosky. DiMaggio doubled to center, Selkirk stopping at third. Campbell recovered the ball and whipped it to the plate, but Sullivan erred, so Selkirk scored and DiMaggio went to third. McKain came to Newsom's rescue and threw out Keller.

Breuer Averts Trouble.

The Tigers had Breuer on the ropes for a few minutes in the home fifth, but he bounced back and battled successfully enough to limit the damage to one run. With one out Gehringer singled. Passes to Greenberg and York filled the bases. Gehringer reached home on Campbell's fly and Crossetti threw out Higins.

The Yankees' four run sixth started with Dickey walking, but Bill was caught off first. Dahlgren then singled, Crosetti flied to Greenberg, and Breuer singled. Gordon walked to fill the bases. Rolfe singled to score Dahlgren, Selkirk walked, and Breuer scored. DiMaggio doubled past York to score Gordon and Rolfe. So Seats came to the rescue and induced Keller to pop to Bartell.

Rookie Has Trouble.

Dickey also walked as the opener of the hilarious seventh, in which Rookie Uhle was unveiled. Dahlgren and Crosetti singled, Dickey scoring. Breuer walked, filling the bases. At this point Uhle cut loose a wild pitch on which Dahlgren scored. Sullivan recovered the ball, threw wild to Uhle, who by this time was at the plate, and Crosetti scored. Gordon singled Breuer home. Gordon went to second on the throw-in and scored the fifth run on Rolfe's single. Trout intervened and set down the next three Yankees.

A pair of Yankee errors with a pass filled the bases in the seventh with two out and Averill hit for Trout, but popped a foul to Rolfe. In the eighth Meyer walked after two were gone and Greenberg drove his 34th homer into the left field upper tier for the last of the run making.

RIPPLE'S HOMER IN 9TH WINS FOR CINCINNATI, 3-2

Reds Defeat Giants; Gain 35th One Run Verdict.

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—A home run by Jimmy Ripple in the ninth inning today with one out and nobody on gave the league leading Cincinnati Reds their 35th one run decision of the season—a 3 to 2 victory over the New York Giants. The Reds thus swept the series and took the seasonal series, 15 games to 7. It was the Giants' fifth straight loss.

Jim Turner, the Reds pitcher, had to be given some assistance in the ninth by Joe Beggs, but Jim got the credit for his 12th victory, against 7 losses.

Hal Schumacher pitched a plucky game for the Giants, going the route and allowing only 7 hits, compared with the 11 the Giants got off Turner. But Ripple's second homer of the year upset Schumacher's bid for victory and instead handed him his 12th loss of the season. He has won 12. Score:

Herman to Be Out of Cubs' Lineup Week

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 14.—Billy Herman's ailment was more serious than at first suspected, so Bill, who received medical treatment yesterday at Jefferson hospital, will be sent to Chicago as soon as he is released. He will be out of the Cubs' lineup for at least a week.

The Cubs left for Boston tonight to play a double header tomorrow. The second game will be the one originally scheduled for Monday.

Claude Passeau and Dizzy Dean will oppose Manuel Salvo and Jim Tobin in the two games with the Bees. Dean originally was scheduled to pitch against the Giants Tuesday, but Manager Hartnett decided to use Vern Olsen against them instead. Passeau will seek his 19th victory tomorrow.

Dominic Dallessandro and Ken Raffensberger, products of the American Legion baseball leagues, were presented with gifts by a delegation of Legionnaires this afternoon.

PLAY IN PARK RIDGE.

The Match Corporation of America softball team will seek its fourth victory in five starts against the Park Ridge Merchants tonight at Park Ridge.

BUSHWHACKER WINS STAKE AT NARRAGANSETT

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 14 (AP).—Graduated from the maiden ranks last Tuesday, Bushwhacker from the Airmac farm stable rushed thru the stretch today to a half length victory in the final running of the $25,000 added Narragansett Futurity. Bushwhacker's time was 1:11 4-5 for the six furlongs.

Second place in the six horse field went to Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention, one of the season's outstanding juveniles and the 7 to 10 favorite. Attention had a neck advantage over Bull Brier, owned by Ben Lister, while Cleaveland Putnam's Swain, winner of the Arlington Futurity, finished fourth, a head behind.

Bushwhacker's victory was worth $38,060. Soundly ridden by Jockey Arthur Craig, Bushwhacker remained out, but ever close to the early pace set by Attention and Bull Brier, running like a team. Bushwhacker returned $12.40, $4.10, and $2.90.

Chapman leads, 3 up.

Both Land in Traps.

Both trapped their second shots to the first hole, but escaped safely and halved the hole. Chapman then wandered to the right rough with his drive to the second and found a trap with his recovery, while McCullough was holing a 10 footer for a winning birdie. An eight foot putt brought Duff a deuce at the third. The Philadelphian was short with a 6 iron second to the fourth, where Dick dropped a five foot birdie putt. McCullough then came down with a six at the 514 yard sixth, his drive striking a tree and landing in the rough and his second still remaining in the spinach. The climax of this sorry effort was a three putt green for a six.

He drove another bunker on the sixth, put got his par. Chapman went 1 down again on the 175 yard seventh by three putting. McCullough overdrove this green, but chipped back within a foot for his winning par. He was short at the eighth, however, and Chapman went 1 up by flipping a third shot up to a yard from the cup at the 515 yard ninth, whereat McCullough trapped his second and sent his third over the green.

McCullough rimmed the cup for a deuce at the 10th, but Chapman went to work then and hammered out two birdies, a two footer doing the job at the 11th, and a 3 iron and a 15 foot putt bringing him a four on the 500 yard 12th. A par sufficed to earn the 218 yard 13th for Richard. After bunkering his second, he hit the flag with his explosion shot and the ball halted four feet away. McCullough here was short off the tee, and then required three from there.

They got regulation par fours on the 14th, and Chapman lost the 15th to a trapped second. They escaped the rough and another bunker for a half in fives on the long 16th. McCullough hit a timid second to the 18th, but Chapman's second rolled into a trap and they halved it in fives.

The cards for the afternoon round:

Chapman—Out	433	354	344—33
McChllough—Out	544	455	45 —

Chapman wins, 11 and 9.

Gallery Is Shocked.

The gallery, not to mention McCullough, was stunned by Chapman's rapid pace in the brief afternoon round. Duff was short in the rough with his second to the 19th, and Chapman, after finding the rough off of the 20th tee, bent a shot from behind a tree to within 25 feet and then holed out for a birdie three. Duff three putted the 21st, Dick holing a four and one-half footer for his winning par.

This was only the beginning, for Chapman then dropped a 30 foot putt on the 22d to win his fourth consecutive hole of the afternoon round. He slowed down on the 23d, settling for a half with McCullough's par five, after visiting the rough with his first two shots. Duff had a chance to win here after a fine recovery from a trapped second, but couldn't hole a six foot try for a birdie.

The 24th saw Duff lose the hole and go eight down by missing a four foot putt. He then blew a two footer after chipping up from the fringe of the 175 yard 25th, and failed to hurdle a stymie on the next green. He conceded the 515 yard 27th and the match to Chapman, after bunkering his second and going over the green with his recovery.

Bengal to Box Bolden; Takes Place of Sutka

Billy Bengal, Detroit middleweight, has been substituted for Joe Sutka in an eight round bout against Nate Bolden in Marigold Gardens tomorrow. In his last Chicago appearance, Bengal lost a disputed decision in eight rounds to Al Tibbits. Bill scored two knockdowns in the first round and suffered a knockdown himself in the second. Prior to this encounter the Detroit lad boasted a record of 45 knockouts in 53 fights. Bengal scored a five round knockout over Eddie Carroll, former Chicago favorite, in White Plains, N. Y., April 16.

Bolden will be after his fourth consecutive victory, previous victims being Dick [Honeyboy] Jones, George Burnette, and Marty Simmons.

Three other matches of eight rounds and a six round event fill out the balance of the card. Johnny Pleasant, 1939 Chicagoland Golden Gloves lightweight champion, who knocked out Floyd Hagen on Aug. 26, will meet Chico Romo of Los Angeles, who is undefeated in this city. Kid Sanchez, Detroit lightweight who handed Joe Law a beating in an earlier appearance, will oppose Gene Ward. Don Siegel, heavyweight, also of Detroit, will be in quest of his 13th straight triumph at the expense of Fred Washington.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 14 (AP).—Shooting a four under par afternoon round, Betty Jameson, the national champion from San Antonio, added the women's western amateur championship to her collection with a 6 and 5 victory over Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., in the finals at the Seattle Golf club today.

They were even at the end of the first 18, but Betty took command on the first hole of the afternoon round to square accounts with the girl who gave her a 7 and 6 lacing in the finals of the same tournament three years ago.

Betty Is in Rare Form.

Betty went out in the afternoon in 36, one under par, then birdied on three of the next four holes to wind up four under par for the final 13. Miss Miley's uncertain putter, plus hooks and slices at vital points, made her game no match for that of the national champion.

Miss Miley carded 38, one over par, and held a 1 up lead while Betty was having trouble with her second shots, on the first nine.

But the girl from Texas came back with a par 39 on the second nine, against a 42 for Miss Miley, to square accounts.

She Just Misses an Ace.

Marion came 14 inches from an ace on the 133 yard 26th, which she won with a deuce. They halved the 27th with par fives, and turned with scores of 40 for Miss Miley and 36 for Miss Jameson, with the latter still 3 up.

Successive birdies at the 28th and 29th gave Betty a 5 up lead; they halved the 30th with par fours, and the match ended on the 31st as Betty pitched dead and holed her three footer for a birdie 3 while Marion needed two putts.

Blues Blank Millers, 4-0; Clinch Title

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 14 (AP).—The Kansas City Blues clinched the 1940 American association championship here today when they defeated Minneapolis, 4 to 0. It was the second successive year the Blues carried off the pennant.

Kansas City won the title in spite of the determined drive of the Columbus Red Birds in which the Birds have won 42 of their last 55 games and pulled into second place, three games out of the lead.

To Charlie Stanceu, pitching his first year in a class AA league, went the honor of making certain the title. He blanked the Millers with six hits, and only in one inning was Minneapolis able to get more than one hit. Four double plays helped Stanceu out of trouble in the early innings. During one stretch Stenceu fanned five Millers in succession.

The four double plays brought Kansas City's total for the season to 193, beating St. Paul's former all-time record for a 154 game schedule by 5.

CLOSE AMERICAN BATTLE RECALLS 1908 SCRAMBLE

Old Timers Say That Was Year of Years.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

No matter how hot the sizzling 1940 American league race continues to be, there are going to be a lot of old timers around who will tell you you haven't seen nothin' unless you are old enough and sharp enough of memory to recall the pennant races of 1908. That is the year the American league pennant winner, Detroit, was determined on the last day of the season, and the year a playoff was necessary to give the National league pennant to the Cubs.

We aren't going to review the famous Merkle boner of that year just now, but may become that historic later on if the current finish gets to the playoff stage. As a historical starter, however, we are going to give you the final standings of the contending teams of both majors in 1908, and a bit of chronology for part of September and a couple of days of October that year. The 1908 finish:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
Chicago	99	55	.643	..
New York	98	56	.636	1
Pittsburgh	98	56	.636	1

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
Detroit	90	63	.588	..
Cleveland	90	64	.584	½
Chicago	88	64	.579	1½

Chronological Review.

And here's some of the chronology, as printed in Spalding's Official Baseball Record:

Sept. 15—Boston Nationals won from Chicago, dropping Cubs to third place, Pittsburgh going to second, New York remaining in first.

Sept. 16—Pittsburgh and Philadelphia split a double header, the result placing the Pirates and Cubs in a tie for second place.

Sept. 17—Cleveland won from Boston in the ninth inning, 1 to 0. Joss and Young were the pitchers. . . . Marquard and Durham reported to the Giants from the Indianapolis club.

Sept. 18—Rhoades of Cleveland pitched a no-hit game against Boston, altho Boston scored a run. The largest crowd that ever saw a baseball game in the United States, estimated at 35,000, was present at a double header between New York and Pittsburgh in New York. New York Nationals won two, putting Pittsburgh in third place and giving New York a long lead.

Winning Streak Stopped.

Sept. 19—After winning 11 straight games, the Giants were defeated by Pittsburgh, 6 to 2, in 10 innings. New York Americans defeated Detroit, 6 to 5, and Cleveland won from Boston, bringing Detroit down to within two points of Cleveland.

Sept. 20—Waddell of the St. Louis Americans struck out 17 Washington batters. Smith of the Chicago Americans pitched a no-hit game against Philadelphia, winning, 1 to 0.

Sept. 21—Pittsburgh beat the Giants, 2 to 1, Willis and Mathewson being the pitchers. New York made two hits and Pittsburgh three. Cleveland went into first place by beating New York while Boston beat Detroit. Chicago Nationals won a double header from Philadelphia.

Sept. 22—New York Nationals were beaten two games by the Chicagos. Overall was batted out in the first game in the seventh inning and Brown took his place. Brown continued in the second game and won. Pittsburgh defeated Brooklyn in 11 innings.

The Famous Merkle Boner.

Sept. 23—New York Nationals batted the winning run over the plate in the last half of the ninth inning against Chicago, Bridwell making a clean single to center field. It was claimed that Merkle did not run to second and touch the base and therefore was forced out. The umpires sustained this claim, altho they did not make their decision until the crowd had left the field. Cleveland won its third straight from New York, leading the race by 10 points. Chicago Americans won in the 10th, 3 to 2.

Sept. 24—Harry C. Pulliam, president of the National league, announced the game between Chicago and New York the previous day stood as a tie, 1 to 1. Both clubs announced they would appeal the decision. New York Americans beat the Chicagos, 1 to 0. Washington won from Cleveland, 2 to 1. Detroit and Philadelphia tied.

Sept. 25—Cincinnati beat New York twice. Chicago won from Brooklyn. The victory cut New York's lead down to 1 point. Pittsburgh broke even in a double header and dropped out of a tie with Chicago. Detroit won a double header from Philadelphia, Summers pitching both games, 7 to 2 and 1 to 0 in 10 innings. The victories brought Detroit to within 2 points of Cleveland for the lead.

Chicago Americans Climb.

Sept. 26—New York won a double header from Cincinnati. Chicago won a double header from Brooklyn.

Sept. 27—Detroit went into first place by beating Philadelphia. Chicago Americans won from Boston, bringing them to a close third in the race.

Sept. 29—New York and Philadelphia Nationals broke even in a double header. Pittsburgh won two games from St. Louis. Detroit won a double header from Washington. Cleveland played a game in the morning with Philadelphia, fearful that it might rain in the afternoon. The regular game was played in the afternoon. Cleveland won both. Chicago Americans won a double header from Boston.

Sept. 30—Philadelphia was beaten by the New York Nationals, 2 to 1, and Cincinnati beat Chicago in the ninth inning, the Giants returning to first place.

Joss Pitches No-Hit Game.

Oct. 1—New York and Philadelphia broke even in a double header. Chicago won from Cincinnati, 6 to 0, and the result made a tie for second place between Chicago and Pittsburgh.

Oct. 2—Pittsburgh won a double header from St. Louis and went into first place. Chicago and New York also won. Cleveland beat Chicago, 1 to 0, Joss pitching a no-hit game. Walsh, Sox pitcher in the same game, struck out 15 batsmen. President Pulliam of the National league announced his decision, calling the "Merkle" game between New York and Chicago a 1 to 1 tie.

Oct. 3—Philadelphia Nationals beat New York and sent the Giants back to third place, as Pittsburgh and Chicago won. Detroit beat St. Louis with ease, and the Chicago Americans gave Cleveland a hard blow with a defeat.

Oct. 4—Chicago Nationals defeated Pittsburgh and put Pittsburgh out of the race for the championship. Attendance was 30,274, largest on record for a western game. Chicago Americans beat Detroit. St. Louis and Cleveland tied in an 11 inning game, 3 to 3. Board of directors of the National league, in an all-day meeting on the protest of the "Merkle" game between the Giants and Cubs, reserved decision. New York Nationals defeated Boston in the first game of three necessary for New York to tie Chicago for the championship. Cleveland and St. Louis broke even in a double header, putting Cleveland out of the American league race. Chicago Americans defeated Detroit and made it possible for Chicago to win the pennant if they could defeat Detroit the following day.

Tigers Win Title.

Oct. 6—Detroit defeated the Chicago Americans, 7 to 0, and won the American league championship. President Pulliam's decision on the "Merkle" game upheld.

Oct. 7—New York Nationals beat Boston and tied the Cubs for first place.

Oct. 8—Chicago Nationals arrive in New York and beat the Giants in the playoff of the protested game, winning the National league championship.

We don't blame any one for being excited about the American league race this year. But no matter how tight the finish, please let's not have any modern fan do any popping off to a 1908er.

END SEASON TONIGHT.

BETTY BRO WINS ROUGH RACE OFF CHICAGO HARBOR

Two Sloops Dismasted; Several Disabled.

A rising north wind, lowering skies, and five foot waves gave Chicagoland yachtsmen a rough and wet ride yesterday in club course races. At least two sloops were dismasted and several were disabled.

Betty Bro, Commodore Milton Friend's flagship of the Columbia Yacht club, won the handicap series race off Chicago harbor. The 36 foot cutter was sailed by Bro Friend, the commodore's 16 year old son, and a crew consisting if Bill Parks, Bill Brix, Bill Wymer, John Kasman, Jack Oakley, and Carl Thorsen, professional. Friend sailed on Trial, Fred Lippold's yacht.

Hope Finishes First.

Betty Bro took the lead from Hope, William Wachsman's 50 foot racing sloop, on the second leg of the course when the youthful crew hoisted a spinnaker. The veteran yachtsmen on Hope were too cautious to follow suit. On the last leg, a beat to the finish line, Hope slowly sailed out ahead of Betty Bro, finishing less than a minute ahead. Betty Bro's corrected time, 1 hour 24 minutes 15 seconds, was the best of the fleet, however.

Gossoon II., owned by Malcom D. Vail and Sterling Morton, won the Chicago Yatch club's R boat race off Belmont harbor. Its elapsed time, 2:22:47, was nearly two minutes better than that of Ardelle, the runner-up. It was Ardelle's first race since it was shipped back to Chicago by railroad from Rochester, N. Y., where it won the Great Lakes R class championship a week ago. The sloop is owned by C. E. Waltman and Clare Udell.

Falcon Is Dismasted.

Aquila, Hubert C. Ellis' entry, won the Eagle class race. Falcon, owned by Clyde H. Heichel, was dismasted during the race.

Skipit, Charles E. Galloway Jr.'s racing sloop, won the Sheridan Shore Yacht club's race for Star class yachts off Wilmette. It was sailed by Robert Bradbury, owner of Sagitta, and Richard Otter, co-owner of Step-N-Fetchit. Their elapsed time was 1:17:20. Pegasus, W. V. Gathany and L. R. Mace's Star boat, was dismasted when a backstay broke as it was sailing out of Wilmette harbor.

Saga, Fleet Captain Earl Ross and Paul Peterman's flagship, won the Chicago Corinthian Yatcht club's last Snipe class point score race of the season off Montrose harbor. The season champion is Dry Sue, owned by Kenneth Schmidt and George Lawyer.

CityHorseShoe League Closes Season Today

The Center and Hi-Way clubs meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon on Lincoln square courts, Lawrence and Artesian avenues, in the title team match of the Chicago Horse Shoe Pitching league, with John Lindmeier, national amateur champion, leading the Center quintet.

Lindmeier, graduate of Oak Park High school in 1936, regained the national title in Anderson, Ind., on Labor day. He had won the 1937 national meet in Cincinnati at the age of 18, and placed third in New York in 1938 and third in Anderson last year.

Hubert Trinkle of Anderson, winner of the title for the last two years, tied Lindmeier for first place in the recent national tourney, each winning 14 and losing one in a round-robin of 16 qualifiers. Lindmeier, who led the test round with a score of 250 out of 300 and a ringer average of 79 per cent, won two straight games from Trinkle in the playoff, 50 to 48 and 50 to 32. He had ringer averages of 74 and 77 per cent, respectively.

Lindmeier, who also won city and state titles the last two years, is president of the Chicago league, which ends its season today with the match between City club of Lincoln park, first half winner, and the Hi-Way club of the northwest side, second half winner. The lineups for today's 25 game playoff follow:

HOOSIER GOLDEN GLOVES PRODUCT JOINS MARINES

The Marine corps was assured yesterday of a contender for its boxing championship when George Lemar, of Grovertown, Ind., left his job as a welder and was sworn in by Lieut. Col. Chester L. Fordney.

In 1937 Lemar was the South Bend Golden Gloves heavyweight champion. He is 6 feet 1¾ inches tall and tips the scales at 225 pounds.

Lemar enlisted for a four year hitch, saying he thought it was a good idea to get into the service early.

ARMS SPENDING SPEEDS RISE OF U. S. INDUSTRY

Many Lines Nearing Record Production.

BY CHARLES GOTTHART.

Carried on by the momentum of multibillion dollar defense preparations which accentuated the normal autumn lift in peacetime activities, United States industry last week progressed another notch toward the goal of 1940 production records. Some divisions of industry had already achieved these marks.

Automobile manufacturers, getting into stride on new model production and, in addition, preparing to turn out vast numbers of weapons for national defense forces, contributed much toward the week's progress. They boosted assemblies to 63,240 units, from 39,665 the week before, and 42,445 last year.

Construction and steel operations were other potent factors in boosting the Associated Press index to its highest level of the year, with the exception of the second week of January. This measure of overall industrial activity rose during the week from 109.8 to 111.0.

Construction Activity Rises.

Building activities were stimulated by government preparations for the housing of army and navy personnel, as well as the vast army of factory workers needed to turn out arms and equipment. Residential construction moved to the highest level since 1929.

Steel mills more than recovered the lost ground of the Labor day holiday week, with schedules raised from a national average of 82.5 to 91.9 per cent of theoretical capacity, the year's peak. Chicago mills provided some of the steel going to England in an increasingly heavy stream.

The vast amount of business on the books of a large variety of manufacturers grew steadily larger. The backlog was augmented by naval contracts for 200 ships costing $3,861,053,312. Many millions in army contracts flowed to private manufacturers, including those in the Chicago area, and the war department authorized numerous companies to proceed with plant expansion required for producing a vast array of defense equipment.

Westinghouse Orders a Record.

Major additional defense projects included an $11,000,000 airplane engine plant to be erected by the Ford Motor company and government plans to put $40,000,000 into improvement of heavy forging facilities.

An example of how government orders have swollen the business of industrial corporations was provided in a report of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. August business, augmented by 36 millions in government contracts, broke all records. The company was one of many considering plans to expand its facilities.

Industrialists expressed conviction the upturn would continue with, of course, much depending on the duration of the war. Airplane manufacturers maintained or increased production which has risen steadily since the start of the war. British plane orders figured largely in their plans for new factories.

Business was encouraged by the largest volume of corporate financing since the Nazi war machine overran the low countries last spring. Part of the funds provided by the capital market was intended to increase war industry facilities, altho government funds so far have been financing most of the new defense plants.

Retail Business Makes Gains.

Listed security markets were placed in a state of suspense over the epic battle of England, with speculators and investors on guard against the heralded invasion. Commodities likewise felt the suspense over the fate of England, but certain industrial materials, notably steel scrap, were quoted higher in reflection of the drive behind arms manufacture.

Retail trade added to its August gains, stimulated by larger pay rolls in the industrial centers and increased expenditures in rural areas.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity, now at 111.0, based on 1929-'30 levels as 100, was 97.0 a year ago at this time. Here are comparisons of the components, which are adjusted for seasonal variations:

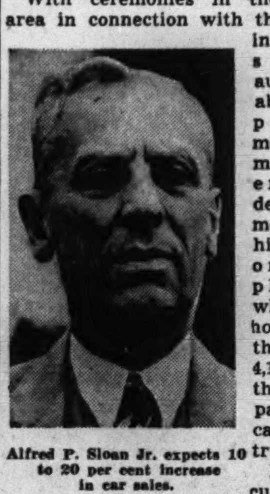
Auto Men Shift to High Gear in Sales Efforts

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

With ceremonies in the Detroit area in connection with the launching of a new season's automobiles about completed, motor car manufacturers and dealers are moving into high speed on sales plans by which they hope to pass the total of 4,164,000 of the 1940 passenger cars and trucks sold.



Alfred P. Sloan Jr. expects 10 to 20 per cent increase in car sales.

It's an old custom in the automobile industry to invite dealers, newspaper men, and others interested in the new cars to special showings called previews. The previews are held in Detroit and nearby cities with much fanfare, for a lot of showmanship goes into the promotion of the new cars.

Manufacturers have spent millions to bring out their new cars and they look to the previews for some indication of the public acceptance of their latest products. If the public takes to the new cars, the industry that provides the steel for them, parts makers, farmers, and others in many lines of activity profit. It is estimated that about 6,000,000 persons are engaged in work in connection with the automobile and truck.

Active Business Expected.

Each year the manufacturer endeavors to produce a car that will make the American motorist dissatisfied with his old car. Their success in this respect is indicated by the cash registers in dealers' salesrooms.

Present prospects indicate a good year for the 1941 models. The business outlook is favorable, with the entire nation about to work at high speed in factory and office on defense requirements. And the manufacturers without exception have produced automobiles that are bound to interest the public.

The motorist who goes into a dealer's showrooms to look at the 1941 models on the whole may expect to see a larger and more powerful car, new treatment in streamlining, more attractive and better finished interiors, and many refinements and improvements in existing mechanical details.

Many manufacturers have increased the wheel bases of their models and others have increased the over-all length without changing the wheel base. Most have widened interiors for more comfort to passengers.

Engine Power Increased.

Power of the engines in many cases has been increased and the amount of gasoline required to run the engines reduced. The car manufacturers are taking advantage of the better motor fuels to increase the efficiency of engines, a trend that is expected to be continued. The greatest benefit from the more powerful engines is not found merely in the ability to run faster. It is found in the greater smoothness in operating at normal cruising speed and ability to accelerate speed rapidly should the occasion demand.

There will be few of the old style running boards this year. They are either entirely absent or are concealed under flares at the bottom edges of doors.

Most manufacturers admit that women exert the most influence in the purchase of a family car. So, to win the women, they have paid the greatest attention this year to car interiors. Upholstery is offered in contrasting shades. Interior fittings, many made of plastics, likewise are installed with regard to color effects. Instrument panels are simpler.

Many Colors Provided.

In line with the public's acceptance of color, the new models are offered in many hues and in various color combinations. The two-tone cars which were successful last year are continued this year.

Among the mechanical improvements, driving methods that replace the necessity of using the gearshift are being extended this year. Chrysler's "fluid drive," first brought out on its expensive cars late in 1938, will be available on all Chrysler, De Soto, and Dodge models. General Motor's version, the Oldsmobile "hydra-matic" brought out with the 1939 models, will be highly exploited this year, now that manufacturing facilities have been enlarged to meet the demand for this device.

Exterior lines of most cars have been changed. Streamlining dominates. The torpedo type bodies which were so successful last year are being retained. In addition, some car makers are featuring the "teardrop" body. Highly streamlined, this type of body slopes abruptly at the rear from the roof to the bottom of the car, the line produced resembling a teardrop.

Goals of Companies.

Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of the board of the General Motors corporation, expects an increase in new car sales of 10 to 20 per cent, with chances good for a 20 per cent gain. Chevrolet alone has 1,100,000 cars as its goal, Ford looks for the sale of at least a million cars, and the Chrysler group aims at the million mark.

Should even a 10 per cent gain be obtained, the sales total for the 1941 models will exceed 4½ million cars of 1940.

U. S. Plywood 4 Month Sales Rise 31 Per Cent

The United States Plywood corporation reported yesterday that sales for the first four months of its fiscal year, the period ended Aug. 31, were $2,614,724, compared with $1,992,145 in the previous fiscal period, or an increase of 31.25 per cent. Sales for

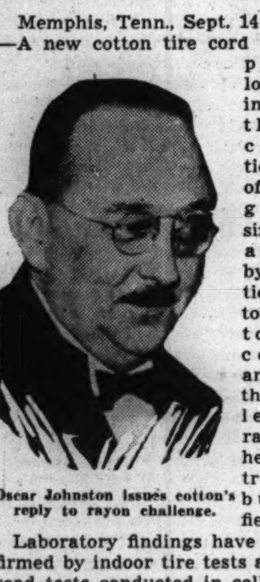
New Tire Cord Called 300 Pct. Longer Lived

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 14 [Special].—A new cotton tire cord with "300 per cent longer flexing life than the best conventional cord of the same gauge size" was announced by the National Cotton council today as cotton's answer to the challenge of rayon in the heavy duty truck and bus tire field.



Oscar Johnston issues cotton's reply to rayon challenge.

Laboratory findings have been confirmed by indoor tire tests and actual road tests conducted in collaboration with the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, the announcement said. It was claimed that in addition to its flexing properties the new cord has a 35 per cent higher breaking strength than the best conventional cord, and low sensitivity to both heat and moisture.

Second Largest Outlet.

The Cotton Research foundation, research agency of the council whose object is to promote the use of cotton, announced that thru patent rights the new cordmaking processes will be made available to the whole tire industry. Revenues gained from royalties will be used to defray further research expense.

"This is the raw cotton industry's reply," said Oscar Johnston, president of the council, "to the efforts being made to force synthetic fibers into the truck and bus tire market. The 60,000,000 tires produced in this country each year constitute the second largest use for the American cotton crop, and one which must be defended to the fullest extent. It is therefore with particular pride that we announce this achievement of the council's research program."

The new procedures are the result of three years of intensive study conducted by Dr. R. F. Nickerson at the Mellon institute in Pittsburgh under the auspices of the National Cotton council and its research affiliate.

Cost to Be Low.

The council said that the new processes "yield a stronger, more resistant, and longer-wearing cord for use particularly in high-speed and heavy duty tires."

"The new development is expected to yield a tire which will be superior to any availabe heretofore," the council declared. "The three year study which resulted in these new processing methods was devoted to an analysis of the properties of single cotton fibers and of tire cords with a view of modifying the fibers to meet utmost present day tire requirements.

"The cost of processing cotton by the new methods will probably be low and it is expected that tires made from it will compare favorably in price with present cotton tires."

COTTON EXPORTS FALL OVER HALF DURING AUGUST

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—Exports of American raw cotton declined in August to less than half the volume and dollar value of July, the department of commerce reported today.

August exports totaled 65,000 bales with a value of $3,482,000, compared with 137,000 bales with a value of $7,748,000 in July.

Compared with August, 1939, exports decreased by 150,000 bales or 69.8 per cent in quantity and $7,718,000, or 68.9 per cent, in value.

Exports to Japan and the United Kingdom, normally America's best cotton customers, showed sharp decreases. No cotton was exported to continental Europe during August.

United Air Lines Adds Fourth Los Angeles Flight

United Air Lines announced yesterday that a fourth round trip flight between Chicago and Los Angeles will be added to its schedule today. The new flight provides overnight service from Chicago to Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., and the eastbound schedule will provide a daylight flight.

COURT BARS C. I. O. INTERFERENCE WITH A. F. OF L. WORKERS

Flint, Mich., Sept. 14 [Special].—An injunction was issued today by Circuit Judge Paul V. Gadola of Genesee county against officers and members of C. I. O. local 581, United Automobile Workers' of America, employés of Fisher No. 1 body plant here, restraining them from interfering in any way with A. F. of L. union members while they are at work in the plant or molesting them while they are away from work.

The injunction action followed disorders in the Fisher plant early this week that resulted in its complete closing Tuesday by company officials. The Buick Motor company's plant which gets all its bodies from Fisher, was forced to close also. The Fisher plant reopened Wednesday and the Buick plant on Thursday.

The management said that fist fights occurred. Seventeen C. I. O. employés of the Fisher plant, including Louis Strickland, chairman of the C. I. O. bargaining committee, have been suspended.

SIX "PLENOCRAT" OFFICERS SUED BY TEN MEMBERS

A suit naming six officers of the Universal Order of Plenocrats was filed yesterday in Superior court by 10 members of the organization. The suit asks an injunction against the use of any money or sale of any property held by the order and asks also that a receiver be appointed.

The six named are Charles E. Oldenburg of Milwaukee, Wis., president; Justus Chancellor Jr., an attorney for the order; Claude H. Carter, Oklahoma City, Okla., vice president; Howard Callingham, a director, Fred E. Bennett, a Seattle, Wash., minister, also a director, and C. Franklin Davis, secretary and treasurer, now serving a sentence in the Milan, Mich., detention home for contempt of court.

Six officials of the order, including Davis, Carter, Bennett, and Oldenburg, were indicted several months ago on charges of mail fraud and violation of the securities act. "Plenocracy" involves investment in farms operated by the order and 30 per cent yearly return on investment was promised, government officials said. Actually, it is charged, the scheme consisted of the operation of a few farms, often at a loss.

CANADIANDOLLAR EXTENDS DECLINE 1½ CENTS MORE

Dropping 1½ cents in foreign exchange trading at New York yesterday, the Canadian dollar brought its losses for the week to 5¼ cents, one of its swiftest declines of the war period. It closed at 82½ United States cents.

Free sterling and the Swiss franc were unchanged while the Hongkong dollar dropped more than 1-10th of a cent to finish at 22.48 cents. The Argentine peso rose 1-20th of a cent to close at 23.40 cents.

Dealers said the Canadian dollar dropped because a Canadian bond issue matured Sept. 1, and while United States holders were given a chance to reinvest the funds in Canada's war loan, many failed to do so. The resultant flood of Canadian money into the New York market caused the drop, they said.

Chicago Companies Get War Department Orders

Chicago companies were awarded these contracts, the war department announced yesterday: Krupp Manufacturing company, gloves, $6,643; J. A. Dubow Manufacturing company, gloves [2 contracts], $11,104; Midwest Glove company, gloves, $13,107; Joseph W. Eisendrath, gloves [2 contracts], $102,960; Independent Glove company, [3 contracts] $34,570, and Midland Tailors, wool service coats, $14,800. A $9,163 leather glove contract went to the Boss Manufacturing company, Kewanee, Ill.

Hudson '41 Car Shipments Top Year Ago 127 Per Cent

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 14 [Special].—George H. Pratt, general sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car company, today announced 14,509 of the 1941 model Hudson automobiles had been shipped as of Sept. 7, an increase of 127 per cent over the parallel period of the 1940 model year. Last month's retail sales were 69 per cent larger than in August, 1939, he said.

House Passes Compromise on Trade Loan

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—The house approved a conference report today on legislation authorizing $500,000,000 for loans to Latin American countries by the Export-Import bank.

The roll call vote was announced by Acting Speaker Rayburn [D., Tex.] as 218 to 138.

The report, a compromise of differences between senate and house versions, now goes to the senate where Senator Robert A. Taft, [R., O.] announced he would lead a fight against it.

Opposes Extra Billion.

Taft objected to a provision increasing the lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance corporation by $1,500,000,000.

Of this sum, $500,000,000 would go to the Export-Import bank to assist in promoting trade in the western hemisphere.

The senate bill provided only for the $500,000,000 trade program and omitted the additional $1,000,000,000. Sponsors of the bill said the latter amount is needed for such things as loans to defense industries by the RFC.

Bars Johnson Act Violation.

The conference version included a senate amendment forbidding loans in violation of the neutrality act or the Johnson act, which bars further loans to governments already owing the United States on past debts.

Chairman Robert A. Wagner [D., N. Y.] of the senate banking committee said senate conferees agreed to the larger figure voted by the house because the money could be used by the RFC for loans to "speed the national defense program."

DPMA LIFTS ITS BID FOR BUTTER; BUYS 18,900 LBS.

The Dairy Products Marketing association, a federally financed cooperative, yesterday bought 18,900 pounds of 92 score butter on the Chicago Mercantile exchange at 27¼ cents a pound after offers of 27 cents had found no sellers for four days. The price boost came without notice, but prices of the best commercial grades of butter advanced the ¼ cent a pound as traders immediately supported the higher price and offered to purchase 140,000 pounds of the extra quality at the new level.

The DPMA reëntered the Chicago butter market last Tuesday after an absence of six months.

Altho DPMA agents did not disclose the purpose of the purchases, it is believed to be the result of the government's desire to build up supplies for distribution thru relief agencies.

Butter futures on the exchange advanced after the action of the DPMA and closed 0.10 to 0.15 cent a pound higher. November deliveries were 27.35 cents. Egg futures lost 0.05 to 0.10 cent a dozen in a slow market in spite of light local receipts. October contracts closed at 18.95 cents.

CUBAN DEPUTIES TALK ALL NIGHT; VOTE LOAN BILL

HAVANA, Sept. 14 (AP).—The chamber of deputies, after an all night session, today passed a bill authorizing President Laredo Bru's government to negotiate a $50,000,000 loan. The legislation next goes to the senate.

Under terms of the bill $40,000,000 of the loan would be dedicated to public works projects, including betterment of sanitary conditions at Guantanamo, the nearby United States naval base, and other projects at Havana and Santiago de Cuba. Construction of highways and housing facilities for workers were also planned.

The remaining $10,000,000 would be used to balance the national budget.

The loan, to be negotiated at a maximum interest rate of 3 per cent would be repayable in 40 years with proceeds of several taxes already in force.

ARMY PLACES BIG PLANE, GUN, ENGINE ORDERS

Volume for One Day Is 242 Millions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

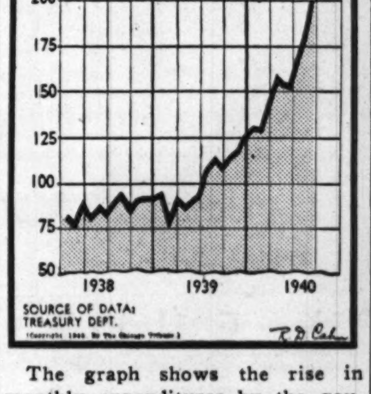
Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—The war department today announced the awarding of contracts totaling nearly 242 million dollars—the largest of the new fiscal year which began July 1—for fighting planes, machine guns, airplane engines, clothing, and other items needed to equip a potential army of 2 million men.

Army officials said that today's awards brought the total of contracts awarded for the year to date to more than 1 billion 200 million dollars against the total defense program of 15 billion dollars so far approved by this session of congress. Another 2 billions were asked by President Roosevelt today.

Biggest of awards representing additions to the army's "on order" equipment status [contrasted with a very low "on hand" status] went to General Motors corporation of Detroit for equipping four machine gun plants and making the weapons on a mass production basis. The contract totals $81,398,872.

Issued "Speed Up" Letters.

Only yesterday the war department issued "speed up" letters to General Motors enabling the company to tool up for these plants. The machine guns will be manufactured by these plants in the General Motors organization: The A. C. Spark Plug division,



The graph shows the rise in monthly expenditures by the government for national defense.

Flint, Mich.; Saginaw Steering Gear division, Saginaw, Mich.; Frigidaire division, Dayton, O.; and the Guide Lamp division, Syracuse, N. Y.

"General Motors will procure and install in its own buildings the equipment necessary for this purpose at an estimated cost of approximately 20 million dollars, plus a nominal fee of $1," the department said. "Title to this equipment will remain with the government. It is expected that these plants will be tooled up for production in about 15 months. The contract further includes an award for the production of machine guns at fixed prices, totaling $61,398,872."

It added that the contract provides for a reduction in price of the guns if General Motors can achieve economies thru mass production.

Preparations Under Way.

In Detroit, C. E. Wilson, acting president of General Motors, said that the company had plans well under way for production of the guns. The company was requested by the war department to study the production of the guns back in April, 1938, and that an educational order was placed with the Saginaw plant for 500 guns last May 29. Some additions to existing plants will be necessary.

Chrysler is preparing to build tanks and Ford is working on airplane engines. Packard Motor Car company today received an award of $62,448,000 to make an undisclosed number of Rolls-Royce airplane engines, for which this government has obtained the manufacturing rights from the British government.

Plane Contracts 76 Millions.

Airplane contracts announced today totaled $76,396,952. Bell Aircraft corporation, Buffalo, N. Y., got a contract for $19,896,668 to produce "Airacobra" pursuit ships and spare parts. The plane is a single engined craft, carrying a one pound cannon and four machine guns all fired automatically, and is capable of a speed of 400 miles per hour. The number of planes involved was not disclosed.

Republic Aviation corporation, Farmingdale, N. Y., received a contract for $56,499,924 covering pursuit planes and spare parts. The army said that the Republic contract included 225 airplanes, authorized by the original 1940-'41 appropriation for a total of 4,247 planes. To date awards have been made for 3,758 of these planes, of which only 1,728 are fighting planes. The others are trainers and transports. The army still has to award contracts for 14,000 more planes authorized by the 5 billion dollar supplemental appropriation bill signed last week.

Contracts awarded for the quartermaster and signal corps today totaled $21,478,975, most of which were for clothing items.

Urge Speedy Effort to Avoid Industry Delay

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—Administration economists, anticipating vast industrial and employment gains in the next year, urged immediate action today to prevent industrial bottlenecks which may touch off a spiral of rocketing prices. The recommendations were made in a memorandum prepared for circulation among high officials, particularly those concerned with defense.

Altho the report has not been made public, it was learned that the economists set out these general conclusions and recommendations:

1. Immediate expansion is necessary particularly in the number of railroad freight cars and production facilities for steel and machinery. Unless more are built, freight cars are expected to be 100,000 short of requirements by next fall. Steel production is slated to reach "practical capacity" by January. Shortages are appearing already in some types of steel such as armor plate. The machine tool industry needs 25 per cent more facilities.

Big Employment Expected.

2. Business is expected to produce employment such as the country has not seen since 1929. Depending on how fast the defense program gathers speed, industry is slated to hire 2,500,000 to 3,750,000 more workers by next July. The conscription and National Guard mobilization programs are due to take more than a million men out of the labor market in this period.

3. If prices remain unchanged, the national income, which totaled $71,700,000,000 in the last fiscal year, should reach $78,000,000,000 in this fiscal year which ends next June 30. If prices go up, and some rise is believed inevitable, the figure may shoot materially past $80,000,000,000.

Regarding industrial bottlenecks and prices, the economists said that there was this possible prospect:

Once business men see such bottlenecks delaying or making difficult the delivery of ordered goods they will start laying in huge supplies of things they expect to need in the future and at the same time bid up the prices not only of these specific items but nearly all others as well.

Price Advance Indicated.

If this happens, the cost of goods may be 15 per cent higher next June than it is now. A rise of 5 per cent is believed probable, in any case. Some slight price increases have occurred in the last month.

All these estimates were based on calculations of the effect of defense expenditures, foreign trade, and tax changes. Some alternate guesses also were made on what would happen if England surrendered.

A British capitulation, however, was not expected to alter the figures greatly. The experts calculated that to the extent that the United States lost business by surrender of Britain, American defense program probably would be stepped up. Thus, if Britain surrendered and failed to take several thousand airplanes she has ordered, the United States army and navy probably would buy the planes.

Views on Expenditures.

The dominant factor in the business situation as these economists see it is the size of this government's defense expenditures. The budget bureau has calculated that actual defense expenditures, in addition to normal costs of the armed services, will total $5,000,000,000 in this fiscal year. The economists said that $4,000,000,000 was more probable because of the potential bottlenecks in industry which would retard the program.

One of the few restraining influences they cited was the rise in taxes. To the extent that people pay taxes, the economists said, they can't spend money for other things. In this fiscal year alone, more than $700,000,000 was added to the federal tax bill. Another addition of at least $200,000,000 is scheduled in the proposed excess profits tax.

MIDDLE WEST HEAD DENIES SEC CHARGES

Purcell L. Smith, president of the Middle West corporation, said yesterday that the company's plans for integration under the "death sentence" clause of the public utility holding company act would progress as scheduled. His statement was occasioned by sharp criticism from the Securities and Exchange commission for the company's "leisurely" ways in hearings before the commission on the integration.

Since March 1 when the hearings were started the company has asked for six adjournments. Friday the SEC granted an adjournment, but stipulated that when the case comes up again on Sept. 23, the corporation's lawyers be prepared to continue for three weeks.

Smith said he had no wish to engage in a "combat of words" with the commission and said that to the company the proceedings are a "serious business" not to be robbed of dignity thru unnecessary comment.

The company recently received an order for 5,000 uniform blouses for the United States army.

SENATOR BYRD URGES LEVY ON TAX FREE LOANS

Fights Fiscal Policy of Government.

BY JOHN FISHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—Declaring that none of this year's "emergency" taxation is going for national defense, but for regular governmental expenditures, Senator Harry F. Byrd, [D., Va.] tonight urged taxation of tax exempt securities to help reduce the deficits.

Senator Harry F. Byrd.

The senator, a leading force for economy within the senate, supported an amendment to this effect in the pending excess profits tax bill. The senate recessed late this afternoon without completing action on the bill, altho it rejected an attempt by Senator Robert M. La Follette [P., Wis.] to revive the treasury plan for confiscatory taxation on normal corporation earnings rather than limit the tax to "excess profits."

Don't Meet Regular Spending.

Byrd issued a statement in which he uncloaked the administration's fallacy of upholding its two tax bills so far this session as "national defense financing." They won't even meet the government's operating expenditures, which have increased rather than declining, he said.

"It is significant," declared Byrd, "that even with the increases in taxation, the total revenue of the federal government will not be sufficient to pay for purely nondefense spending; that is to say, after every item of national defense is eliminated by the federal government, such nondefense expenditures will be approximately 7 billions of dollars, while the revenue with increased taxation will be 6.6 billions of dollars, leaving a shortage of nearly half a billion in the payment of ordinary and strictly peacetime expenditures of our government.

Merely Adds to Debt.

"This means that every dollar of national defense spending is being added to the public debt, notwithstanding the fact the public and taxpayers have been informed that the emergency taxation enacted at this session of congress was financing national defense. This startling picture of the inadequacy of our financial program should concern deeply every thoughtful person in America.

"The imperative need confronting our country is to adopt a financial prparedness program which will be adequate to pay, at least in part, for our defense expenditures, and prevent the inevitable bankruptcy which will follow if the present haphazard and loose fiscal policies are continued."

The pending bill will produce only about 300 million dollars annually, he estimated, which, with a 700 million dollar yield from the first 1940 tax bill, places the total yield from new taxes at 1 billion dollars. This compares with defense appropriations and authorizations of this congress amounting to nearly 16 billion dollars in addition to 7 billions for regular government expenses. Another bill is pending for 1 billion 700 million dollars to finance compulsory military training and related items.

25 Billion Obligation.

Byrd said that this session will obligate the government directly to the extent of at least 25 billion dollars, not counting obligations issued by government corporations and guaranteed by the treasury. The federal debt is nearly 44 billion dollars. He placed expenditures for this fiscal year at more than 15 billions, leaving a prospective deficit for the year of at least 8 billions and perhaps more—the largest in peacetime history.

"The pending amendment," said Byrd, "provides for the taxation of future issues of hitherto tax exempt securities, and this should be promptly enacted. It will equalize the taxation burden, and at the same time will add substantially as the years go on to the revenue of the government. The total of all tax exempt securities

STOCKS RECOVER PART OF LOSSES IN SMALL UPTURN

War Shares Lead Rally; Volume Is Smaller.

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Stocks recovered a little lost ground today in a market concerned more with the battle for England than with trading. Some of the war shares—steels, aircrafts, chemicals—led the mild rally.

Only 166,390 shares changed hands, compared with 224,010 last Saturday. But on those few transactions, the Associated Press index of 60 selected stocks rose .2 of a point to 43.1.

After two days of rising openings, the first bell today found traders in an experimental mood. Early transactions showed mixed trends which, however, quickly developed strength on the firmness of selected leaders.

Political Questions Studied.

England's defense against Germany's air attack continued to monopolize boardroom discussions, but a growing undercurrent of domestic political talk was noted. Observers said they found an increasing resolve on the part of operators to avoid definite bullish or bearish stands until Europe's air control is established and Presidential election sentiment is crystalized.

Practically all news of industrial activity remained a bolstering factor to the market altho the uncertainty of pending tax regulations prevented exact share earnings estimates.

Gains of major fractions or more were recorded for United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, American Can, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, du Pont, Union Carbide, Douglas, Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, and Great Northern preferred.

Checks Week-Long Decline.

Finishing ahead in the curb, which traded 26,000 shares compared with 41,000 last Saturday, were Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B," Brewster Aeronautical, Sherwin Williams, Montgomery Ward "A," and Niagara Hudson Power.

The day's rise in shares checked a week-long decline which marked the first market recession in four weeks. Total loss for the week on the Associated Press stock average was 1.8 points.

The down turn came as Germany increased the power of attacks on England. Volume, however, instead of increasing on the decline contracted to only 2,246,530 shares, compared with 3,507,340 in the preceding week.

Antwerp Bourse, Closed Since May, Will Reopen

BRUSSELS, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Antwerp bourse will reopen for trading Monday. Only cash transactions will be permitted. The market has been closed since the German invasion of the Low Countries in May.

PRICES OF GRAIN HOLD STEADY IN RANGE OF 1/2 CENT

Trading in grain futures on the Chicago Board of Trade continued at low ebb yesterday, with prices holding within a range of about ½ cent a bushel on wheat and ¼ cent on corn. Professional traders said there was too much "dynamite" in the European war situation to permit of extensive operations on either side of the markets.

Closing trades on wheat futures were ⅜ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower. Corn was ⅛ cent higher to ¼ cent lower, the latter on May. Oats finished ⅛ to ¼ cent lower. Rye was unchanged to ⅜ cent lower, and soy beans finished with losses of ¼ to ⅝ cent.

Sales of wheat futures yesterday were probably the smallest in many months, brokers said, estimating the aggregate business in all pits at not over 8,000,000 bushels, compared with 10,726,000 bushels on Friday. During the last week average daily sales of all grain futures on the Board of Trade were about 13,300,000 bushels, the Commodity Exchange administration reported, compared with an average turnover of 43,000,000 bushels in the same week of 1939.

Trading in grain futures has been decreasing steadily since the capitulation of France.

PRICES OF MOST STAPLES DECLINE SOME LAST WEEK

Wool Tops, Coffee Stem Downward Trend.

Losses predominated in commodity futures markets last week. Most of the declines, however, were small and price movements were generally indecisive and irregular as traders held back pending more definite war developments. Of the major commodities, only wool tops and Santos coffee were able to show gains, while rubber and hides slipped substantial amounts.

Wool tops futures, which two weeks ago advanced steadily, then reacted the following week, rallied strongly and closed 3 cents a pound higher, with October contracts at 97½ cents. In the cash market, standard tops outpaced the futures market, rising 8 cents to close the week at $1.12.

Santos Coffee Advances.

Speculative interest at the beginning of the week and optimism over possibilities of a definite aid program for South American coffee producers helped push Santos coffee futures 0.15 cent a pound higher. September deliveries were 5.40 cents. Turnover improved and on Thursday reached 32,000 bags.

Rubber futures finished a week of irregular price fluctuations with net loss of ¼ cent a pound. September deliveries closed at 19 cents. Cash rubber lost 0.18 cent. Hides dipped 0.23 cent, with September at 9.40, but prices in the cash market advanced about ½ cent a pound.

Copper, which had advanced in the preceding week and recorded the largest day's turnover in the history of the industry, found the going slow last week. The huge sales left a dull market and a pickup at the end of the week was unable to overcome earlier losses.

Other Metals Are Quiet.

September deliveries closed at 9.96 cents a pound, off 0.08 cent. Cash copper remained fairly steady at the 11½ cents a pound quoted Sept. 5 by major producers, altho custom smelters and smaller producers quoted 11⅜ cents.

Other metal markets were slow. Tin futures declined 0.07 cent. Lead and zinc were firm. Yesterday's prices:

LONDON MARKETS OPERATE DESPITE NAZIS' AIR RAIDS

Traffic Winds Thru Bomb Damaged "City."

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 14.—London markets carried on business this week regardless of the handicaps of delay and disruption resulting from Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's nonstop aerial blitzkrieg on the British capital.

A tour of the narrow streets and lanes of the historic square mile in which London's financial and commercial life is concentrated shows the area has not escaped unscathed but so far the fires and bombs have failed to make "the city" untenable for the markets. Traffic has had to be diverted here and there, numerous windows have been shattered, and some masonry has fallen, but most of the damage is confined to the outer ring of the square mile.

Stock Prices Move Lower.

The main headquarters of banking and insurance firms are still functioning and the centers of international shipping, commodity markets, stock markets, and many branches of overseas firms are intact. With various improvisations to make up for delays in mail and traffic, London's financial machinery is operating much as usual tho at a somewhat slower tempo.

Banks have experienced no exceptional cash withdrawals by the public and in the markets the chief effect of the raids is seen in the smaller attendance and the confinement of business to the barest essentials. Up to now stock prices have been comparatively steady altho a tendency toward lower levels became more pronounced as business declined.

A clearer picture of the effect of the war on Britain's financial structure may be seen in the latest treasury statistics on national income and expenditures for the first four and one quarter months of the financial year.

Deficit Nearly 4 Billions.

They show the gap between revenue and spending amounts to 986,229,000 pounds [about $3,944,916,000]. The deficit last week alone totaled 54,011,000 pounds [about $216,044,000], the expenditure for the seven day period amounting to 72,372,000 pounds [about $289,488,000], against revenues of only 18,361,000 pounds [about $73,444,000].

At the present rate of weekly deficits, financial experts estimate the gap will probably reach 1,150,000,000 pounds [about $4,600,000,000], at the end of the first half of the fiscal year or considerably more than one half of the deficit of 2,100,000,000 pounds [about $8,400,000,000], estimated for the full 12 months by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood in introducing a supplementary budget at the end of July.

Another aspect of the new phase of aerial warfare Britain is now undergoing is compensation for damage inflicted, particularly for the railroads. Under an agreement between the government and the railroads, which is still in force, the railways are empowered to charge to their ordinary current expenditure the first 10,000,000 pounds [about $40,000,000], of the annual air raid damage.

Public May Foot Bill.

This means in effect if the railroad companies' revenues are running below the minimum profit of 40,000,000 pounds yearly as guaranteed them by the government, the treasury and consequently the taxpayers are responsible for the payment of the first 10,000,000 pounds worth of damage. If railroad revenues exceed 40,000,000 pounds [about $160,000,000], then the companies themselves foot the bill.

More important financially than the actual damage has been the loss of current revenue to the railroads due to interrupted services. Like the material damage done to docks, factories, production centers, business, and domestic buildings, not even a tentative estimate is forthcoming either officially or in the financial press but already it is clear London alone will have to spend many millions of pounds to remove the war scars from the city and its environs.

COTTON

Trading in cotton futures yesterday was extremely small, and mainly of a professional character, other than a little buying by mills which offset hedging sales. Closing trades were .02 cent higher to .01 cent a pound lower.

Consumption of cotton by American mills in August aggregated 655,000 bales, the department of commerce reported, compared with 631,000 bales in August last year. The consumption was the largest in over 14 years. Exports of cotton during the past month were 64,743 bales against 214,541 bales in 1939. Imports aggregated 10,153 bales, or 5,341 bales less than during August, 1939.

Spot cotton closed .02 to .05 cent lower with New York, 9.61 cents; New Orleans, 9.45 cents; Galveston, 9.10 cents and Houston at 9.05 cents a pound. Prices follow:

Gold for Machinery

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 14 [Special].—Stevedores were busy today unloading 10 tons of gold from Russia, sent to this country reportedly to finance purchases of United States machinery. The gold was lifted from the hold of the Swedish Motorship Bardaland, which brought it here, and carried by power-operated slings to trucks. The metal was consigned to the Chase National bank in New York. The soviet consulate said the gold, mined in Russia, was sent probably to supplement credit of Amtorg, Russian-American trading organization which has purchased large quantities of United States made machinery. The metal was valued at $11,220,150.

ASSESSMENT ASSOCIATIONS.

The "low cost" life insurance offered by assessment associations has brought many inquiries to Investors' Guide. Persons of moderate means are especially attracted by the "cheap rates" being offered by this type of life insurance firm thru the mails and by house to house circulars.

Assessment life insurance operates on the plan of low premium rates which are supplemented by assessments when necessary to meet death claims and other expenses. The right of the association to assess policyholders often is unknown to them because the assessment clause is placed inconspicuously in the policy.

Because assessment associations frequently do not accumulate reserves for the protection of their policyholders' based on accepted mortality experience tables, there is no way of determining whether they are mathematically solvent. When premiums are not based on the life expectancies of the policyholders the assessments required to meet death claims might become so burdensome that they could not be collected.

There are assessment societies which have operated successfully for more than 60 years. Their success has been attributed primarily to sound management and the collection of adequate premiums to set up a surplus for the protection of policyholders.

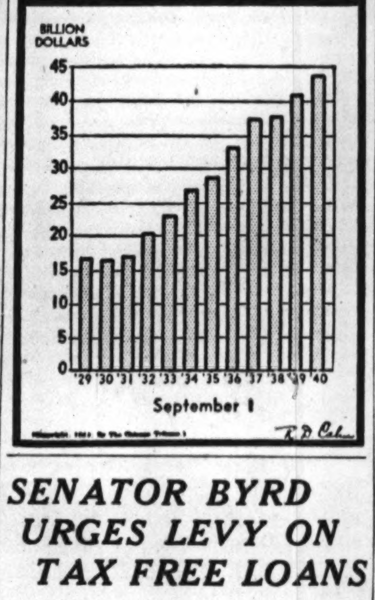
On the other hand, most assessment associations, which mushroomed in the 1880s, did not survive while the "old line" legal reserve companies have withstood several depressions and have come thru the business collapse of the 1930s with relatively few failures.

If you are contemplating the purchase of assessment insurance, acquaint yourself with the reputation of the management, the length of time it has operated, its policy of paying claims, and the relation of operating costs to benefits paid on policies. Compare the reserves or surplus to the amount of insurance in force. The average reserve for all legal reserve companies is about $180 for each $1,000 of insurance in force.

The policy or certificate should be examined carefully before signing. Some policies are so worded that some trivial mis-statement by the insured might be grounds for a denial of a death claim.

Because many of these associations do business by mail, the policyholder should realize that if a claim is contested he will have to sue the association in the state where it is incorporated.

U. S. Government Debt on September 1



SENATOR BYRD URGES LEVY ON TAX FREE LOANS

Assails Government's Fiscal Policy.

amounts to upward of 66 billions of dollars.

"Realizing the inadequacy of the pending tax bill, I will cast my vote for it, as I feel the imperative need of additional revenue," the senator declared. "We should know, however, that this is simply another patch added to the crazy quilt of federal taxation. It will yield only enough to pay the cost of three battleships."

The senate defeated, 41 to 20, the La Follette amendment which would have taxed as excess profits all corporation earnings above an eight per cent return on invested capital plus a flat exemption of $5,000. The senate bill as reported out by the finance committee provides that a taxpayer may be allowed his choice of basing excess profits on average earnings between 1936-'39 or after an 8 per cent return on invested capital plus a $10,000 exemption. The bill also provides a flat increase of 3.1 per cent in the normal corporation income tax. The La Follette amendment was defeated without debate.

Vandenberg Plan Defeated.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] moved to recommit the bill to the finance committee with instructions to report it back without provisions for excess profits taxes. This would have left the amortization and profit-lifting provisions contained in both the senate and house versions of the bill. The motion was shouted down and consideration of the bill was later interrupted for other matters, altho it had been hoped to reach a vote today. The senate will take up the bill again at 11 a. m. Monday.

The house approved a stricter form of the bill on Aug. 29. The rates in the house measure run from 20 to 50 per cent on "excess" profits and the senate levy ranges from 25 to 50 per cent. But the house bill attempts to drive corporations into the invested capital basis of computation, which penalizes normal earnings by imposing an added tax of 4.1 per cent if the taxpayer elected to choose the average earnings base. The senate bill in general provides more leniency. This clash in interests must be worked out in conference after the senate votes its approval of the bill.

RAILS STAND OUT IN RESTRICTED BOND MARKET

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Bond price changes were confined to minor fractions either way in today's market.

Rails came in for their share of favorable attention. Gainers included Mobile and Ohio collateral 5s of '38 at 44 and collateral 4½s of '77 at 37, Great Northern 5s of '73 at 97½, and Pennsylvania general 4½s of '65 at 102⅞.

In the foreign list Italian Credit Consortium 7s dropped 2½ to 33½, and minor weakness developed in German and Canadian loans.

Price changes in United States government loans were negligible.

Mortgages on City Homes Up 694 Millions in 1939

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10 (AP).—The federal home loan bank board reported today that the total of mortgages on city homes in 1939 increased $694,000,000, making it "the best home ownership year in a decade." Mortgages on one to four family homes amounted to $18,415,000,000 at the end of the year, the board said.

MEAT BILLS HIGH BUT EXPERTS CAN FIND "BARGAINS"

Pork Still Under Year Ago Despite Sharp Rise.

Altho meat prices, as a whole, are about on a parity with the high "war market" of September last year and substantially higher than early this year, bargains can still be found on retail counters, meat experts at the Chicago stockyards said yesterday. Most cuts of beef are selling higher than at this time last year, but some of the cheaper cuts as well as most pork and lamb can be purchased for less than in September of 1939.

The rise in prices to consumers during the last six months has been sharp, particularly in top cuts of beef and pork. A review of the wholesale markets at the close of last week disclosed that costs of the various cuts of top beef ranged from 23 to 35 per cent higher than six months ago.

Pork Up Over 50 Per Cent.

Pork increases amounted to 41 to 58 per cent during this period, and lamb meat ranged from 4 per cent lower to 18 per cent higher than six months ago.

Butcher shop owners yesterday paid 4 to 15 per cent more than on the corresponding day last year for the various cuts of top beef, but they obtained other beef at prices 7 to 10 per cent below a year ago. Retail stores found their costs of top pork cuts 4 to 6 per cent under 1939, and the cheaper cuts were 3 to 16 per cent lower. The various lamb cuts ranged from 4 to 16 per cent lower than a year ago.

Prices in cents per pound of top meat cuts in wholesale channels for various periods follow:

The rise in meat bills during recent months was caused by decreased marketing of live stock at higher prices which, during the last few weeks, have been the hightest of the year.

Cattle Rise; Hogs Slump.

Price trends were mixed last week. The setback in hog prices was offset by an increase in cattle prices. The three principal classes of meat animals, steers, hogs, and lambs, together averaged $9.05 a hundred pounds for the week, which was only 5 cents under the week before. The average was exactly the same as in the corresponding week in 1939. Six weeks ago it was $7.85.

Some classes of cattle sold higher, while others declined during the week. The six day steer average, at $11.50, showed a rise of 15 cents and stood highest since November, 1937. Prices were second highest for the month of September since 1929. A year ago the average was $10.25.

The break in hog prices was the sharpest in more than three months. The six day average declined 25 cents to $6.45, compared with $7.50 a year ago and $8.35 two years ago.

Very little change occurred in lambs. The close was steady to 10 cents lower than a week earlier, with the six day average steady at $9.20.

UNIONS MODIFY RULES ON USHA DEFENSE WORK

Agree to Permit Double Building Shifts.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 [Special].—Expenditure of more than $50,000,000 of works projects administration funds on national defense projects and an agreement by several building trades unions to work double shifts of mechanics at straight time wages on defense housing projects financed by the United States Housing authority were announced today.

The arrangement made by the unions cuts the building time in half without substantially increasing cost, it was asserted. It has already been made in seven localities, Montgomery, Ala.; Columbus, Ga.; Pensacola, Fla.; East Moline, Moline, Rock Island, and Rantoul, Ill.

Seek to Extend Plan.

Negotiations leading to the setting up of similar arrangements in other localities where USHA projects have been approved by President Roosevelt are now being carried on by Walter V. Price, director of the USHA labor relations division.

The agreement to work double shifts at straight time on an 8-hour day, 40 hour week basis will speed the construction of homes urgently needed for defense workers who are moving into industrial centers and at army and navy posts where housing shortages already are acute, USHA Administrator Nathan Straus said.

The $50,000,000 of WPA funds to be spent on projects of direct value to national defense were approved between July 1 and September 1.

Part Used on Armories.

Howard O. Hunter, acting commissioner of works projects, said today that improvement of airports, army and navy reservations, national guard armories and rifle ranges and other defense facilities approved during this period totaled $42,759,594.

An additional $9,781,340 was approved at the beginning of this fiscal year for vocational training to prepare skilled workers for defense industries.

Largest share of the $7,831,828 of defense projects approved since Aug. 15—$4,545,211—will go for projects sponsored by the army.

MOTORS—TRAFFIC—HIGHWAYS

STATE HIGHWAY OFFICIALS AWAIT FEDERAL PLANS

BY HAL FOUST.

Dispatches from Washington, D. C., have been telling much about a program for constructing "national defense roads" thru the various state highway departments. The Illinois highway department at Springfield last week hadn't heard anything about it thru official channels.

"We received a letter from the federal road commission," said Ernst Lieberman, chief of the state department, "asking if we would coöperate with the defense program. Of course our answer was affirmative. But we haven't received any instructions.

"I suppose we'll be asked to build some additional roads for local service at cantonments and army posts and at military flying fields. Of course we will do so. Other than that I haven't any idea of anything more that is to be done in Illinois in the name of national defense roads."

It's an Old Proposal.

A couple of years ago, Thomas Mac Donald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, urged congress to appropriate for a system of urban and interregional superhighways. These would penetrate and traverse large centers of population, including Chicago, and would connect larger centers of population, such as from Chicago to Detroit, Chicago to St. Louis, and Chicago to Milwaukee.

In his report to congress, Mac Donald said that the army had coöperated with his bureau in preparing these recommendations. It was concluded that the needs of efficient and safe motor transportation facilities in war time were the same in almost all particulars as the requirements for peacetime pavements on main travel routes.

Political Meddling.

Congress postponed consideration of MacDonald's suggestion for a quarter of a billion dollar federal revolving fund to assist in financing construction of the superhighways. Some states, notably New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Indiana, have made some progress in modernizing some of the routes recommended by MacDonald. Illinois has done little. In Chicago, the superhighway planning was muddled by political meddling. And then the Supreme court held as unconstitutional legislation to authorize the county and the city to spend $60,000,000 of future gas tax collections for this construction.

The designs recommended for the rural superhighways were functionally the same as those proposed for city construction—to free travel of all cross traffic, pedestrian or vehicular. In the city, this would require depression or elevation of the pavements. In the country, it would require grade separations at intersections and insulation from abutting property. By insulation it is meant that there would be no direct access to the express pavements from abutting property, from gas stations, hot dog stands, or farm yards.

Pennsylvania has one such superhighway, a toll turnpike to be opened soon between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh. In the vicinity of New York city, there are a few roads' meeting most of the requirements for accident prevention. There is nothing like it in Illinois where most of the main routes are antequated slabs with high death records.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Nearly 500 men from the Packard-Chicago dealer and retail organization will leave this afternoon on a special train to Detroit where they will examine the 1941 models and discuss sales plans for the year. Distributors and dealers from all over the country will meet tomorrow morning in Detroit's Masonic temple to learn about the Packard plans. Later they will go out to the Packard proving grounds to see the new cars demonstrated. Most of those attending will drive home in one of the new cars for display to the public in his own showroom.

The 1941 Pontiacs have a total of 129 improvements and refinements, a great many of which have been offered before only as special equipment at extra price, Harry J. Klingler, president and general manager, states. Prices are up slightly—from $1 to $45—but value has been increased greatly, he added. Wheelbases are longer, there is added weight and horsepower, and a new oil cleaner contributes to efficiency.

Over at the De Soto factory in Detroit they have a $1,000,000 car. It's not studded with diamonds, nor does it have any expensive gadgets on it, but to the De Soto officials it's the most important car of the year the pilot car. It's the car which first tests whether new dies, tools, jigs, and fixtures that have been installed at great cost are properly set for quantity production of the new models. C. E. Bliecher, vice president and general manager for De Soto, recently put his o. k. on the pilot car so that full production could get under way.

One of the hits of the recent Chevrolet presentation of its 1941 models to its wholesale staff in Detroit was a pageant of America prepared by R. K. White. The pageant presented America's history in a thrilling manner, starting with Patrick Henry's "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death." The great part that industry has played in the rise of America to the world's greatest country was emphasized.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

LOW LICENSE NUMBERS.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—I suggested some weeks ago to cut down on the many numbers used on vehicle license numbers to be able to read them easily. My idea to use the alphabet from A to Z starting with No. 1, or A-1, B-1, C-1, for all letters to be used starting with No. 1 and up and use the letters all the way up to 999, which would cut down the numbers used at present considerably!

By using the whole alphabet starting with A, we would have 26 cars with No. 1; 26 times 26 would make 676 cars with numbers not over 26. By using numbers up to 999 we would have 25,974 cars under the four letter numbers. This would look like: No. A-1, A-99, A-500, A-999, picked at random.

We could use two letters such as: AA-1, AB-99, AC-500, AD-999, etc. In that case there is no limit to the low numbers we can obtain.

We also can start at the end of the alphabet like this and obtain many more low numbers. This would look like: No. ZA-1, ZB-99, ZC-500, ZD-999, etc. Or: YA-1, HA-99, JA-500, BA-999, etc.

There should be different colors for truck license plates and for buses. If the colors were good the different vehicles could then use same numbers as automobiles, but naturally with a different color, such as truck license plates in red with green lettering; buses with yellow plates with red letters, and autos with blue color and white letters.

Using different colored license plates for trucks and buses would make it impossible to use a truck plate on a auto or bus or vice versa. Furthermore such plates would bring in a better and surer vehicle tax and trading of plates as is now done often, would be nearly impossible.

The two letter system proposed by Mr. Eisler, two at each end, would be too many and would make a plate with such numbering as AA-999-BB about the same as 1,756,999. IVAN O. ROSENQUIST.

MARINE DRIVE HAZARD.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—The unfortunate death and injury of a group of cyclists should awaken the authorities to the fact that Marine drive should be closed to either motorists or cyclists. The limitations of the street does not allow for two way traffic, especially during the home going hours when motorists are inclined to continue the speed maintained on the Outer drive on their trek home from the loop.

Cyclists, along this lane, drive toward you in groups of four and five on both right and left side of the road. Should a car be parked along either curb it is impossible for two cars to pass without creating a hazard. A. W. DITTMANN.

ANOTHER PUBLIC MENACE.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—I hope the driver of a Nash sedan bearing license No. 657778 was not too greatly inconvenienced when he had to stop on 95th street just east of Halsted street this morning because he had killed a dog, this because he was traveling around 50 to 55 miles per hour and was passing a car on the right side. It was bad enough to have seen the poor dog hit and suffer, Mr. Driver, but do you realize that you could have a hit a child in exactly the same way? Did you not think the car in front of you had any reason for slowing—we slowed trying to let the dog pass—you just plowed on ahead. WINIFRED WILD.

A LECTURE ON COURTESY.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Mayor Kelly has called upon all Chicago motorists and pedestrians to coöperate in Courtesy week, Sept. 29 to Oct. 5. Why one week of courtesy? We should have it and use it 12 months each year.

Courtesy should always start between our own ears. Let us be sure we understand it. Then let us start at home. Let us see that our families understand it and use it. It should be taught in our schools and colleges, it should be preached from every pulpit.

The lack of courtesy is more and more noticeable each day, between motorists on our streets and pedestrians and persons who use public conveyances.

The double parker, the horn blower, the lane straddler, the road hog, and the speedster should be classed along with other public enemies.

Motorist and truck drivers who use street car streets should be reminded that the blocking of the movement of these conveyances is a display of discourtesy toward the thousands of people who use the street cars as their means of transportation. W. G. ECHOLS.

HORNS.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—I recently returned from a trip to Miami, Fla., and after seeing the careful driving in that city where they have an ordinance forbidding the blowing of the automobile horn I am in favor of a like law in Chicago. The drivers are more considerate and driving an automobile seems much easier. JOHN J. BURNS.

AUTUMN IS HERE, MOTORISTS, TURN ON LIGHTS EARLY

BY HAL FOUST.

The sun, in its afternoon flight, is taking a longer and slower glide toward the western horizon. Dusk is longer each day, and earlier. It is a seasonal driving hazard.

As the days become shorter, the accident toll during late afternoon hours becomes longer. The gradual rise in the toll at this time of the year will jump, if history repeats itself, when the clocks are moved an hour, bringing sunset an hour earlier.

Extra Caution Urgent.

The advance of the season with earlier dusks requires extra caution by motorists. They can lessen this hazard by reducing their speeds and by being generous with their lights at the first trace of a fade in visibility.

There is an hour in traffic when only half of the cars are carrying lights. Those drivers with their lights burning are the better drivers.

In this hour of special hazard, the drivers of unlighted cars don't need their lamps to see the pavement ahead. Their lamps are needed so the cars can be easily seen by other drivers and by pedestrians. The lamps are to illuminate the moving car, not to illuminate the pavement.

A pedestrian might overlook an approaching unlighted automobile during the haze of an autumnal dusk, but will see moving headlamps from the corner of an eye.

Parking Lights Inadequate.

Drivers have difficulty in uncertain light in estimating the speed of a dark automobile. Such estimates must be made continually in traffic, rural and urban.

Parking lights are frequently deceptive. Being smaller than travel lights, the parking lamps sometimes give a false impression of distance. Such an illusion is dangerous when overtaking and passing automobiles on a two lane highway.

A few years ago, there was some justification for use of the parking rather than the driving lights during dusk. It was sometimes necessary to conserve batteries.

The newer automobiles have sturdy generators and large batteries. Economy with electricity is no longer an excuse for using parking lights when the driving lights would be safer.

Let's turn them on early, fellow good drivers.

Work has been started on the first unit of what is said will be a $250,000 business building project in the triangular block bounded by Devon, Central, and Caldwell avenues, in the Edgebrook area. Kurzon is architect.

This first section will have a frontage of 100 feet and contain five stores. F. A. Schepler & Co., managing agent of the property, said one of these, with 30 feet of frontage, has been leased to the Jewel Tea Food stores.

The first unit, to cost a reported $80,000, will be completed on Nov. 1, it was said. Later it is planned to build a second unit adjoining it on the west, and after that stores on both Central and Caldwell. Parking space for the proposed stores is to be provided in the rear, F. A. Schepler said.

Corporation Purchases 21 Parcels of Realty

Twenty-one parcels of Chicago and suburban real estate have been purchased in the last few weeks by the Jackson Realty and Management corporation of Chicago, for a reported total of over a million and a half dollars. Most of them, it was said, are to be remodeled. Seven properties were bought from the Brookshire Life Insurance company for $448,000, of which 10 per cent was paid in cash. Fourteen parcels were purchased from Oliver Root and Mary Powers, subject to $1,073,500 in mortgages. All of the properties are commercial or commercial with apartments. Whitney Wall Jr. & Co., and Harold J. Betty represented all parties.

Michigan and 24th Street Building Sold for $75,000

The Aviation and Transportation corporation yesterday sold the two story brick automobile sales building at the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and 24th street, 100 by 161, to the Drovers Trust and Savings bank, trustee, for $75,000 according to revenue stamps on the deed.

RIVER FOREST FLAT PROJECT IS 98% RENTED

Forty Families Already Moved In.

In less than 10 months the $745,000 River Forest Garden apartments, at the northwest corner of Harlem and Oak avenues, River Forest, have been 98 per cent rented. It was announced Friday at a formal opening of furnished model apartments that 125 of the 127 apartments have been leased. Raymond B. Gillespie, resident manager, said he expected the others would be leased over the week-end. Eighty-eight of the leases made are for two years.

In contrast to apartment trends in Chicago the smaller suites are not as popular in River Forest as the larger ones. There is a waiting list for the 4½ room apartments, Gillespie said, while the two unrented flats have 3½ rooms each.

40 Apartments Occupied.

Altho two of the eight buildings will not be entirely completed before Oct. 1, forty families already are living in the six completed units, and more are moving in daily.

The project's rent schedule runs from $55 to $77.50, which includes cooking gas and outdoor parking space. The apartments have 3, 3½, 4, and 4½ rooms. In one building two 3½ room suites have been made into one large apartment.

Of Fireproof Construction.

Designed by Holsman & Holsman, the project was financed by the Republic Realty and Mortgage company with a $545,000 mortgage. It was built and is managed by Morfandeb, Inc., and is owned by the River Forest Garden Apartment corporation, of which Benjamin Sugar is president.

The buildings are entirely of fireproof construction and have automatic elevator service. The units are four stories in height.

An unusual feature is the construction of the roofs which are planned to carry approximately two inches of water during hot weather to insulate the top apartments against heat.

JEWELERS RENT SPACE IN NEW LOOP BUILDING

More space has been rented in the building under construction at the northwest corner of Madison and Dearborn streets. Charles L. Schrager of the Charles L. Schrager company said the store 43 feet west of Dearborn has been leased for ten years from date of completion [expected to be Dec. 1] by the M. Wood Jewelry company. The lease, it was said, provides for a rental in excess of $77,000 as a minimum guarantee for the term. The lessors are the Continental National Bank and Trust company of Chicago, John R. Thompson Jr., and Henry M. Henricksen. The Schrager company is rental agent for the development. The building will have a frontage of 110 feet on Madison and 70 feet on Dearborn.

Realty Miscellany

Loans advanced for home construction by the First Federal Savings and Loan association of Chicago during August were four times as large as in the 1939 month, Frank V. Gilmore, vice president, announced. Of total disbursements of $266,829, 39 per cent, or $103,640, went for building 12 new homes, he said. This makes a total of 63 homes financed so far this year.

The model home displayed by the Chicago Maternity center in La Grange Park enters its final week today with nearly 70,000 paid admissions recorded, according to Charles E. Joern, or Wiliam Joern & Sons, builder of the house.

Stephen G. Cohn, of Dovenmuehle, Inc., has compiled a booklet on Federal Housing administration loan facts and figures. It is called "Accurate FHA Payments" and gives tables showing monthly payments on loans of various amounts.

CENTRAL 'Y' OFFERS NEW REALTY COURSE IN CONDEMNATION

A new real estate course in condemnation procedure and court testimony will be offered by the evening school of commerce of the Central Y. M. C. A. college in the fall semester, opening Tuesday. The course will be taught by Percy E. Wagner, president of Percy E. Wagner, Inc., an official of the Federal Housing Authority.

It is designed to give real estate operators a grounding in condemnation procedure which has increased in recent years, principally because of government activity in acquiring land for highways, subways, airports, street widenings, and other public projects. Students will take part in a mock court condemnation proceeding.

Other courses to be given this fall are real estate practice, real property law, property insurance, and real estate appraisals.

Chicago Suburban Building for August Exceeds $5,000,000

HOME PERMITS AGAIN HIGHER THAN LAST YEAR

Gary Leads All Towns in New Residences.

New building in the Chicago suburbs exceeded $5,000,000 during August for the third month this year. Permits issued in 81 communities totaled $5,039,894, an increase of 36 per cent over the $3,693,628 of August, 1939. Last month's total fell below that of July, when a $4,500,000 permit was taken out for Northwestern university's new technical institute, but would be larger if this vast project were eliminated from the compilation.

Home building was 51 per cent ahead of last year, both in number of homes started and in their value. Permits were issued for 611 homes, to cost $3,650,848, compared with 404, to cost $2,421,758, in August, 1939. This represents a gain of nearly $1,250,000. The average value of the homes remains at about $6,000.

Home building was most active in Gary, where Building Commissioner Alfred S. Hess issued permits for 82 homes to cost $338,000. Hammond was second with 48 homes costing $224,000. Niles Center [Skokie], with 18 homes costing $182,000, and Evergreen Park with 30 homes costing $153,000, were high on the list.

Alterations, repairs, additions, and modernization in August involved $357,987, against $398,000 in July, and $438,000 in June.

The four apartment building at 3623-25 North Artesian avenue was sold by the Mutual Trust Life Insurance company to Mrs. Eva Puth for a reported $11,500. The Lake View Real Estate exchange was broker.

NORTH SIDE ROW HOUSE PROJECT NEARLY FINISHED

The third row house project designed by Architect Martin H. Braun is nearing completion at the southeast corner of Spaulding and Thorndale avenues. It is being built by Carrothers & Braun, Inc. There are four units of six rooms each, and three with five rooms each. Mary J. Hutchison is owner. Completion is set for Oct. 1. Johnson Brothers, of Oak Park, act as sales agent.

BEGIN WRECKING LANDMARK FOR PARKING SPACE

The Federal Wrecking company last week began tearing down the half century old six and seven story Selz, Schwab & Co. buildings at the northwest corner of Market and Monroe streets. The contract calls for complete removal by the first of the year. The space will be used for parking by Ben D. Kissel. The wrecking job is one of the largest in the downtown area, involving buildings with more than 200,000 square feet of floor space. The company also is razing the Bedford and Temple Court buildings at Dearborn, Adams, and Quincy streets.

Croydon China Company Buys Site for New Store

The Croydon China company bought the southwest corner of Lincoln and Kostner, 80 by 125, from Charles W. Kopp, and will erect a one story building which it will occupy with its second china and glassware store. The company has a store at 9205 South Western avenue.

NEW FIRM WILL HANDLE WALTER McINTOSH LOTS

Mrs. Janet H. McIntosh, widow of Walter G. McIntosh, and Rush C. Smith, managing director of the Walter G. McIntosh company, have formed the real estate firm of McIntosh-Smith & Co. The new concern will take over the properties owned by the Walter G. McIntosh company, including Lakewood Lodge estates at the intersection of East River and Dundee-Barrington roads, near Dundee. It will close the loop McIntosh office at 134 North La Salle street and open an office at Lakewood Lodge estates. Smith is president, Mrs. McIntosh is vice president and treasurer, and Jack W. Barnard is secretary.

"The new firm will carry on the developments started by McIntosh and interrupted by his death in January, 1938," Smith said.

Ten houses costing from $10,000 to $20,000 have been built in Lakewood Lodge estates, three in the $15,000 to $25,000 bracket are being built, and work will start on three more shortly, Smith said. Eighty more acres will be opened up for residential building shortly.

Erects New Building at Peoria-Maxwell Corner

What is said to be one of the first moves by individuals to rehabilitate property in the Maxwell street district was reported by A. Oswianza, former president of the Maxwell Street Business Men's association and a member of the Chicago Plan commission. He has razed a dilapidated structure at the southwest corner of Peoria and Maxwell streets, which he owns, and is completing a new building to contain five stores.

Nelson Tells Builders Need of Industry

Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, told 120 members of the Metropolitan Chicago Home Builders association what he believed was needed to help the building situation here.

In his talk, delivered at the Chicago Real Estate board, Nelson said that a strong home builders association with the power to set up and enforce high standards for home builders was the best means of ensuring a profit to the building profession.

Too Much Racketeering.

In listing the handicaps holding back the building business here, Nelson said there was too much racketeering in the industry and too many impractical architects. He said there exists a definite need of licensing builders.

Nelson said that Chicago is not getting its share of the national defense business. Of a total of $240,000,000 in contracts placed in the north central states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin, Nelson said, Illinois received only $21,000,000.

May Become New Industry.

The defense program, for which $70,000,000,000 may be spent, may well become a new industry, Nelson said. And increased employment will result in increasing housing needs. The defense program will create a housing shortage, he predicted.

Nelson urged new laws to allow the sale of lots which now are tied up with back taxes and assessments. Reasonably priced lots should be made available for home builders, he said.

Chicago Offers Outstanding Inducements to Manufacturers

EXCELS IN SITES, TRANSPORTATION, SKILLED LABOR

Big Industrial Districts Are Features.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago occupies the unique position in the industrial world of offering tc manufacturers a more diversified factory area, to workers a more varied employment field, and to shippers more complete transportation facilities, than any other great city. Not only are manufacturers given a wider choice of factory locations, but they have at hand the largest army of skilled workers in every branch of industry to be found in any metropolis.

Chicago's diversification of manufacturing is unusual. Most big cities have one, or at most just a few industrial areas. Chicago's are scattered from one end of the city to the other and extend far into the suburbs.

Decentralization Begins.

Half a century ago most of this city's industrial activity was within two or three miles of the downtown district. Factories were housed in comparatively tall buildings.

But within recent years factories have moved farther and farther away from the center of the city. This decentralization was for three reasons—to get cheaper land, to reduce taxes, and to get better and more plentiful labor.

Racial characteristics of labor also had much to do with the formation of certain factory areas. Manufacturers sought sites in districts occupied by nationalities expert in their particular type of work. For example, Poles make good candy makers, so several big confectionery plants are near Polish neighborhoods. Swedes excel in die and tool precision work, so manufacturers who need that type of worker have in many cases built plants near Swedish areas.

Grow Horizontally.

With the gradual moving outward from Chicago's central industrial district, factories grew horizontally instead of vertically. Better light, ventilation, and production were found to be obtainable in a one story building than in a five or six story factory. Today practically every new factory—and this has been true for several years—is in a one or two story building with perhaps a taller unit for offices.

An outstanding feature of Chicago's industrial development is the assembling of large tracts of land into "manufacturing districts" by corporations and land trusts. Highly restricted as to plant layout, architectural design, and landscaping, these factory areas have done much to make Chicago a great manufacturing center.

The first and largest in number of industries is the Central Manufacturing district, containing 900 acres divided into four areas.

The Clearing corporation, formed several years ago, originally had 3,000 acres in Stickney township for factory sites. Recently it bought real estate for two more industrial districts; 18 acres at Kilpatrick and Montrose avenues, and 81 acres at Central avenue and 51st street, in Stickney.

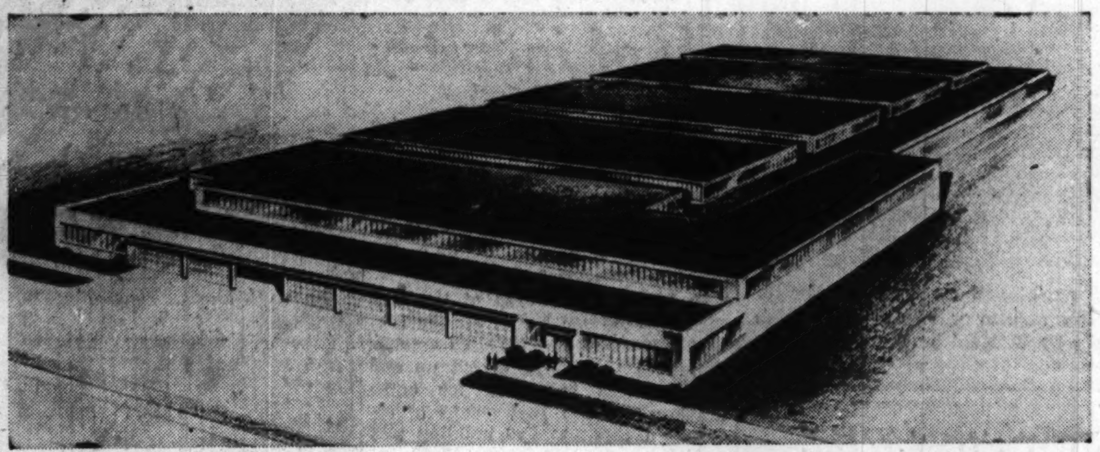
Phipps Trust Has Several.

The Phipps Industrial Land trust owns and operates several manufacturing areas; Burnside, Keeney, Kenwood, and Healy districts.

Other factory areas owned and operated by corporations are the Globe Industrial district, the West Pullman Manufacturing district, the State Manufacturing district, the Peterson Industrial district, and the Southwest Manufacturing district.

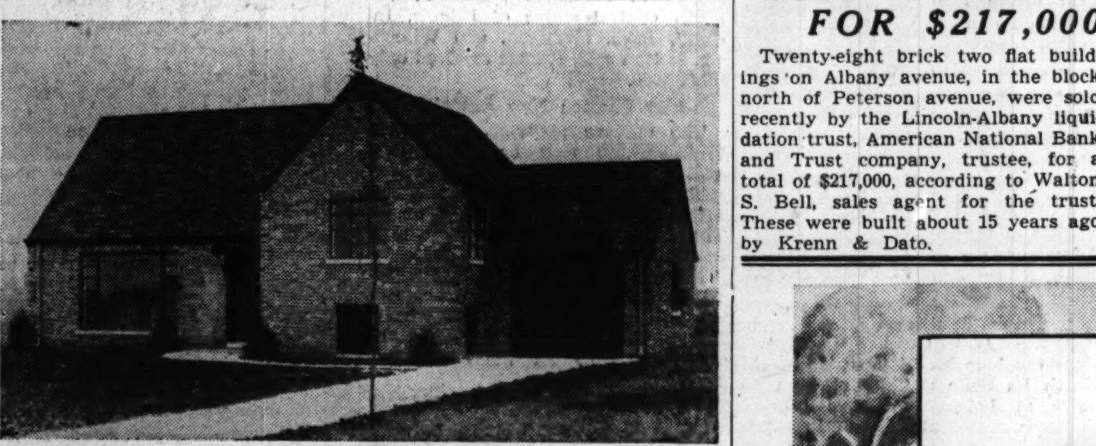
Chicago's reputation as the world's greatest railroad center, the nation's most important motor trucking center, the hub of a vast air line network covering the country, and its water transportation both by lake and river-canal systems, are factors which no other city can match. And without good transportation no manufacturer successfully can distribute his products.

$800,000 Warehouse for Far South Side



This 700 by 300 foot $800,000 warehouse will be the second big project in the Sherwin-Williams company's five year expansion program for its 97 acre plant site in Pullman. It will be built this fall on the 60 acres at the southwest corner of Doty and Kensington avenues. The first project in this year's building operations is a $500,000 chemical manufacturing unit, now under way. Both were designed by Albert Kahn, Inc., of Detroit. Details of the paint company's expansion plans were outlined in this section on Aug. 11.

A Three Level House



The above five room residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Dresselhuys, on Wheeling road, between Marion avenue and Willow road, in Smith & Dawson's Prospect Heights, was designed by William Kapple and cost $5,800 for construction and $700 for the lot, or $6,500 total. It was financed with a 25 year $5,400 F. H. A. loan thru the Percy Wilson Mortgage and Finance corporation, with $37 monthly payments. It has three levels, with the two bedrooms a few steps up from the living room and over the basement which is under only half of the house. A few more steps lead from the bedroom level to an attic which can be made into a bedroom later.

28 TWO FLATS SOLD BY TRUST FOR $217,000

Twenty-eight brick two flat buildings on Albany avenue, in the block north of Peterson avenue, were sold recently by the Lincoln-Albany liquidation trust, American National Bank and Trust company, trustee, for a total of $217,000, according to Walton S. Bell, sales agent for the trust. These were built about 15 years ago by Krenn & Dato.

Bakery Rents Oak Park Site for Building

Schlosser Bakeries, Inc., yesterday leased the property at 1145 Lake street, Oak Park, for 25 years at a reported net term rental of $186,000. The owners are Bernard and Bertha Adlerblum.

The lessees will wreck the present two story building and erect a one story store building fronting 25 feet on Lake street and extending 191 feet thru to Westgate terrace, where it will have 25 feet of frontage. It will be designed by E. L. Hallin, architect in the Schlosser offices.

The new store, to be opened about April 1, 1941, will be the company's tenth bakery unit. It will be completely air conditioned and have fluorescent lighting. The exterior will be of marble with bronze trim. It will represent a reported investment in building and equipment of $40,000.

The lease was negotiated by Frank S. Slosson of Hooker, Slosson & Randell, representing the owners, and Maurice H. Berkson, broker for the bakery concern.

Indiana Concern Buys Factory on South Side

The New York Blower company, of La Porte, Ind., which has occupied for several years the two story building at the northeast corner of Shields avenue and West 32d street, for office and assembly plant, yesterday bought the property for an indicated $35,000. Lura Belle and Eugene Mathis were sellers. Fred L. Steers was attorney.

SMITH & DAWSON ADDS 90 ACRES OF HOME SITES

With a construction record of $1,000,000 worth of homes built and sold during the last four years in their Prospect Heights development, Smith & Dawson yesterday purchased 90 additional acres. This will increase the total to 450 acres.

The company has erected 189 homes to date and is completing new units at the rate of two per week, Allen H. Dawson said. Sixty-five are under construction. Forty-two homes have been sold this year, he said.

Prospect Heights is about a mile north of Mount Prospect and the same distance east of Arlington Heights. It is on both sides of the Elmhurst road [state route 54] and is north of McDonald road.

The land just acquired will be platted into 140 homesites of 100 or more feet frontage, it was said.

Class Ring Manufacturer Locates at 353 W. Grand

The Josten Manufacturing company of Owatonna, Minn., one of the world's largest makers of class rings, announcements, and cards for schools and colleges, has leased the entire third floor of the building at 353 West Grand avenue, containing 8,000 square feet. The Bowes Realty company represented all parties. The lessee is moving its Chicago division from 233 East Ontario street.

DRUG, RESTAURANT CHAIN LEASES SPACE FOR FIRST LOOP UNIT

The Ford Hopkins company, which operates drug stores and tea rooms in 55 cities in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, yesterday leased its first Chicago loop location at 20 North Wacker drive, in the Civic Opera building. It will occupy a floor space of 6,000 square feet, with an option on 4,000 additional.

The new unit will be devoted primarily to a fountain lunch and restaurant. A second unit is expected to be opened shortly by the same company in the same building for a quick service sandwich bar. Other loop locations are being considered.

The Ford Hopkins company was started in September, 1928, by Lewis J. Ruskin, its president, with a drug store in Sterling, Ill. It now has 2,000 employés with a warehouse and commissary in Chicago employing 175, in the Ford Hopkins building, 400 West Erie street.

Of a total volume of business of approximately 6 million dollars annually, more than 2 million dollars is in the food and fountain division. Recently the company started a new department for "Hotel and restaurant locations." The first of the new type units was opened last month in the newly remodeled Oliver hotel of the Albert Pick chain, in South Bend, Ind.

CONGRESS RIVALS START CAMPAIGN

MEN GARDENERS SHOW THEIR OWN SUMMER WORK

First Event Even Has Table Setting.

Top gardener in the Highland Park Men's Garden club is Jesse L. Strauss of Glencoe. He walked off with the sweepstake honors at the club's first garden show last week in the Community house. Mr. Strauss led the field by 44 points, capturing a total of 145 points with 27 first places, seven seconds, five thirds, and six fourths.

His nearest competitor was the club's founder president, C. Eugene Pfister, who took 16 firsts, six seconds, seven thirds, and five fourths for a total of 101 points. Other sweepstake winners were Lawrence E. Abt, 67 points; Edward R. Seese, 53 points; Maurice L. Rothschild, 47 points; D. A. Kittermaster, 44 points; L. E. Leverone, 41 points; John C. McAleer, 34 points; F. D. Burroughs, 24 points; Guy C. Billeter, 22 points; H. L. Oppenheimer, 22 points, and Irving Meyerhoff, 21 points.

Get Special Awards.

Special awards were earned by David L. Dickenson for originality in layout and construction of properties, Mort Schamberg and Oliver Turner for a men's library arrangement, Bert Leech for an exhibit of garden pests, H. H. Small and Lloyd Tupper for color photographs, and William Savin for a poster design.

There were 55 contestants who displayed more than 70 exhibits. The club has 145 members, after starting with 15 last fall, and many who felt they had nothing worthy of exhibiting this year will be out for prizes next year. A repeated comment at the show was "I have flowers and vegetables in my garden as good as those."

The nine judges, headed by Hoyt Paxton of Elmhurst, president of the Men's Garden Clubs of America, said all plant and floral specimens were of professional quality. Each judge was an expert in some phase of gardening.

In Vegetable Class.

In the vegetable class, awards were divided between Mr. Seese and Mr. Rothschild, who displayed gargantuan sweet corn, tomatoes, beets, and other products. All the members do some of their gardening; others do it all.

When Mr. Pfister organized the group, many warned him that men were not interested in garden clubs. Mr. Pfister doubted this and proved his point.

A member, Alfred C. Hauser, explains: "The club has attracted many men who never thought they were gardeners. Garden tours this summer, when an expert explained the flowers and plants as we looked on, were especially popular. One man told me that the garden club was the only reason he could use to get away from home."

Interested in Novelties.

Visitors at the show were interested in the novelty exhibits. The most popular one was a table for eight "as set by the hillbillies of the Ozarks." Old fashioned oil lamps lighted a table covered with oil cloth and set with tin pie plates and cups. A half gallon "white mule" jug provided liquid refreshment for each diner. Robert Metzenberg and Samuel Rosenthal arranged the display.

Oliver Turner made a hit with the women by displaying a fully trimmed hat with veil created out of a last year's bird's nest. John Udell won a blue ribbon with a miniature formal garden two feet square, featuring a fountain and fish pool.

CHURCH COUNCIL TO RETURN FROM RETREAT TODAY

Council members of the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, 615 Wellington avenue, will return from their retreat at Gage's lake to attend the regular service at 11 o'clock this morning in the newly decorated and relighted sanctuary. The council assembled at Mrs. Fred Wittbold's summer home yesterday to make plans for the year.

The Rev. T. F. Rutledge Beale, pastor, will preach on "Opiates—the Religion of the People" today. Organ music will be played by Miss Christine Querfeld, and the choir and quartet, directed by Miss Marcia Sandahl, will sing "No Shadows Yonder" by Gaul. Miss Lorraine Westphal, soprano, will sing a solo.

The choir rehearses at 7:45 o'clock on Friday, and others who like to sing are invited to join. The girls' choir will resume rehearsals at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

40,000 CHILDREN TO RECEIVE FREE SCHOOL LUNCHES

Work Project administration officials announced yesterday that, in coöperation with the Chicago Relief administration and the board of education, free hot lunches will be served to 40,000 school children this year. Federal surplus commodities are available for the lunches, according to H. M. McCullen, Chicago WPA manager. He said some of the food has been grown in WPA gardens around Chicago and canned in WPA canning projects. The school board started serving surplus commodity lunches in certain schools last year.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

THE movies, which still are looking for Valentino types, recently put 19-year-old Our Towner Richard Angarola under option. He is a member of the Fish Creek, Wis., Players and has played the lead in Sophocles' "Oedipus Rex," which is not exactly a sheik rôle. Richard, the movie scouts say, qualifies generally as the Valentino type, but specifically as the George Raft type, altho he doesn't slick down his hair. He resides at 419 Roslyn place and is the son of Anthony Angarola, staff member of the Art institute. In addition to the movies Richard's ambitions include both radio and Broadway.

MR. AND MRS H. F. PENNINGTON, 1240 Carmen avenue, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Monday at their home. Mr. Pennington, a retired lawyer, taught for 15 years at the Chicago Law college. Mrs. Pennington for the last eleven years has been grand treasurer of the Order of Eastern Star of Illinois. They have one daughter, Mrs. J. H. Stearns Jr., 1244 Carmen avenue. The Penningtons were married in Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 9, 1890. They moved to Chicago shortly after their marriage and have lived here since.

Two Our Town graduates of De Paul university have been named candidates for Delta Epsilon Sigma, scholastic honor society. They are Herbert Johnson, 2453 Morse avenue, and Richard E. Von Holdt, 6160 Winthrop avenue.

CHESTER T. DIKE, 821 Ridge avenue, Evanston, recently ended a 50 year career of railroading when he retired as vice president of the Chicago and North Western railroad. He has been associated with the North Western road for 42 years. In 1930 Mr. Dike was named chief engineer of the road. In 1934 he was made a vice president.

MISS JACKIE VAN, 14-year-old contralto, is in the army now—practically. This is how it happened: Recently she sang on an amateur hour radio program. Officials of the 14th Cavalry band stationed at Fort Sheridan tuned in, listened and nodded their heads. They called her and told her she was just the kind of voice they needed on their "God Bless America" program which the band is playing this month in the Chicago parks. Jackie will appear with the band Thursday evening at Stanton park and at Hamlin park on Friday evening. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Van, 1662 Farwell avenue.

Pint Size Train Is a Headache to Indian Hill

BY DAVID ANDERSON.

A year ago the village settled its northeastern No Man's Land problem, the region between Kenilworth and Wilmette, simply by swallowing it by annexation [legal anschluss]. This year's threat is looming on Wilmette's western border.

The new problem, which already has made Indian Hill property owners quake a bit, is at the northwest corner of Illinois road and Skokie boulevard just outside the village limits. Here Wilmette faces the possibility of seeing the creation of what villagers say may eventually be an amusement park. Some, more pessimistic, see a north shore Coney Island, and they don't like it.

Exhibits on Film.

The matter reached a second hearing last week before the county zoning board. At the hearing Wilmette stoutly defended its western border by means of movie evidence against [1] a merry-go-round, [2] a miniature railway [equipped with a piping whistle, and [3] a hot dog stand [with mustard].

It all started when one Rudolph P. Bergeson sought permission to locate his miniature railway at the Skokie boulevard site. He now operates the little railroad east of Sheridan road in what was once No Man's Land No. 1. He has a temporary permit for its operation here. The permit expires at the end of the summer.

Last Tuesday afternoon Wilmette's village attorney, Edwin A. Robson, well versed in No Man's Land lore, presented the village case before the zoning commission which, headed by Robert Kingery, chairman of the Chicago Regional Plan commission, sat as a board of appeals. The commission is expected to hand down its decision within another week.

Just a Throw Away.

As evidence Mr. Robson unreeled a movie short [homemade] of the region in question. The movie, without hero, villain, or comic relief, consisted of 150 feet of film showing, one by one, the prosperous residences around the Indian Hill subdivision. Some of these residences with their neatly barbered lawns are within baseball throwing distance of the contemplated hot dog stand-miniature railway site. The baseball, Mr. Robson admitted, would be one thrown by a big league ball player.

Mr. Robson argued that if the commission were to grant the permit property values all around the area would be cut in half. Mr. Bergeson, thru his attorney, Lawrence C. Traeger, countered by saying that the village of Northfield's business section is only one mile away and that this fact has had no bearing on property values in the area.

Church Guild Luncheon.

Members of the board of the Evanston First Methodist church Junior guild will attend a buffet luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday in the Young People's parlor.

G.O.P. MARSHALS FORCES TO WIN BACK CONTROL

9th and 1st Districts in Battle Front.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Optimism of Republicans at a pitch unmatched for several years marked the start of the congressional election campaign in northern and northwestern Chicagoland last week.

Voters in this area will choose one congressman for each of six congressional districts in the general election Nov. 5. Only two of these six seats are now occupied by Republicans.

G. O. P. partisans are predicting, however, that their candidates will not only hold these two seats easily, but will take at least one other. Some of the more optimistic see G. O. P. triumphs in prospect in four or five of the six.

Close Race In 9th.

The districts that include northerly territory are the 1st, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th. Only the 10th and 11th are now represented by Republicans. The race is expected to be close in the 9th and perhaps the 1st, with some observers forecasting that the Democrats will have plenty of trouble in the 7th.

The incumbents have been renominated in all the northern and northwestern districts except the 10th.

In the predominantly colored 1st district, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, ardent New Dealer, faces a battle from Former Senator William E. King. Mitchell is counting strongly upon the relief vote to retain him in the office he has held since 1934, but King has a large personal following that may do much to overcome this advantage.

The 1st district has a population of about 140,000, most of it concentrated in the close packed tenements and old mansions of the near south side. A smattering resides in the hotels of the loop and nearby downtown section, which it also embraces.

56,603 Votes in 1938.

Two years ago the district cast 56,603 votes, 30,207 for Mitchell and 26,396 for William L. Dawson, then a Republican but since turned Democrat. In the Presidential election of 1936 the district cast 64,208 ballots, an all-time high, of which Mitchell was given 35,376 and former Congressman Oscar De Priest, the G. O. P. nominee, 28,640.

In the 19 congressional elections since the district was carved out in the last reapportionment in 1901, Democrats triumphed only once before Mitchell was first elected. That was in 1902 when Martin Emerich nosed out Martin B. Madden, who retaliated by winning the next 12 elections.

In the large and populous 7th district, with more than six times the population of the 1st, the fight is between Leonard W. Schuetz, who has occupied the seat since 1930, and former Ald. James C. Moreland, who was the nominee against Schuetz in 1930, 1936, and 1938.

Wins Without Talking.

Schuetz, who reputedly has never made a campaign speech, again depends on machine support to pull him thru. Moreland, a sage campaigner, is leaving nothing to chance but has already begun to whittle away at the 30,681 plurality Schuetz received two years ago. He is making capital of the growing dissatisfaction with Schuetz's do nothing record in congress.

Voters of the 7th amassed 354,819 congressional votes in 1938, when Schuetz polled 192,750 and Moreland 162,069. A record number of votes was established in the 1936 election, when 420,714 votes were tallied. Of these, Schuetz received 248,835 and Moreland 158,755.

The 7th is known as a traditionally Republican district. Only one Democrat before Schuetz has ever represented it. That was Frank Buchanan, who was elected in 1910, 1912, and 1914, when schisms split the G. O. P.

There seems little likelihood of a Republican victory this year in the 8th district, which has been represented continuously since 1932 by Leo Kocialkowski, a Democrat.

One of Smallest.

His challenger this year is Anthony V. Champagne, a lawyer who tried vainly for the G. O. P. nomination in 1934 and who in 1936 was elected an alternate delegate to the G. O. P. national convention.

The 8th district is one of the smallest in Illinois. It has a population of about 138,000 and the number has been decreasing steadily since the turn of the century. It cast 42,263 ballots two years ago and 43,849 in the last Presidential election, Kocialkowski receiving more than three-fourths of the vote each time. It is predominantly Democratic, the G. O. P. electing only one congressman, Charles McGavin, winner in 1904 and 1906.

Republican eyes are turning most hopefully to the 9th district, where for the second election in a row Charles E. Dewey, assistant secretary of the treasury under President Coolidge, is out to unseat Congressman James McAndrews. The 200,000 or more residents of the 9th include the impoverished families of the river precincts, the wealthy inhabitants of the gold coast, and the apartment-dwelling citizens of the middle class area in between.

Dewey Hits Administration.

WOULD BRIDGE LAGOON.

It is inconceivable that the Chicago Park District Planning commission, headed by Robert J. Dunham, have overlooked a much needed bridge across the outer lagoon and drive opposite the center of Lincoln park zoo. The old bridge, which was one of the principal landmarks in the park, was torn down years ago. I have learned that park visitors are very enthusiastic about the idea of having a bridge restored at this point, but do not know how to go about it. It would save exhausting walks and people would quickly get to the lake shore. R. L.

NOW TO PICK UP GARBAGE.

I think Oscar Hewitt should be given a vote of thanks for his work as public works commissioner in obtaining garbage cans for Chicago's poor districts. Now if some one in the city hall will see to it that the garbage is collected regularly! I live on the north side and it has been my experience that refuse is picked up regularly only around election time. The rest of the year garbage trucks come irregularly. CITIZEN.

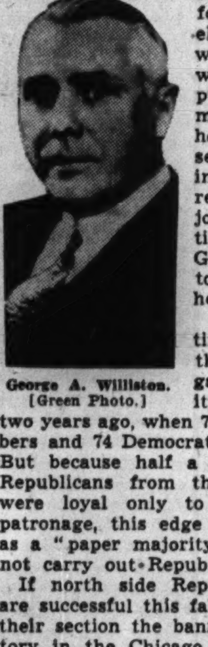
ASSEMBLY EIGHT PLANS MAPPED IN NORTH AREA

G. O. P. Has a Chance to Gain Three Seats.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.



George A. Williston.
[Green Photo.]

North area candidates for the state legislature last week began mapping battle strategy for the Nov. 5 election which will decide whether the Republican "paper majority" in the house of representatives will be increased to a real working majority This section offers the G. O. P. chances to gain three house seats.

For the first time since 1930 the Republicans gained a majority in the house two years ago, when 79 G. O. P. members and 74 Democrats were elected. But because half a dozen so-called Republicans from the river wards were loyal only to the party of patronage, this edge became known as a "paper majority" which could not carry out Republican policies.

If north side Republican leaders are successful this fall, it will make their section the banner party territory in the Chicago area. Two of the three house seats already belong to Republicans in the 7th district [most country townships in Cook county], and in the 8th district [Lake Boone, and McHenry counties]. Democrats are not contesting this status of affairs, so that the April nominees are as good as elected right now.

Drive in 3 Districts.

The party of the patient elephant is trying to take away one house seat from the Democrats in each of these districts: 6th [Rogers Park and Evanston], 25th [covering most of the northwest side], and 31st [Edgewater-Uptown areas].

Only in the 29th district [most of wards 42 and 43] is the Grand Old Party surrendering without a struggle. Here two out of three seats are held by Democrats and there is a lone Republican contender, by decision of a senatorial committee dominated by the city hall machine.

Sales tax reduction, parole reform, and old age pensions are among the matters which will come up before the lawmakers in Springfield. Therefore, citizens are warned by George A. Williston, former alderman of the 49th ward and Republican candidate for the house in the 31st district, not to permit foreign affairs to distract their attention from duty at the polls.

Home Problems First.

"A great test of democracy is approaching, right in our own neighborhoods," Williston said.

"While we are concerned with what happens to democracy in Europe and other far off parts of the globe, we must do our American duty by seeing that our own governments are improved to benefit state and nation. Now is the time, with the election yet weeks away, to get at the job of working and voting for candidates who will uphold the American way of life."

None of the political leaders fail to see the many ways in which the European war colors the election picture of 1940. Two north side members of the legislature are affected by a ruling of the Illinois attorney general that a man cannot serve both in the house of representatives and in the National Guard if his unit is called into active service.

Resigns His Captaincy.

Representative Pierce L. Shannon [D., 31st] resigned his captaincy in the Guard because of ill health following this ruling. Representative Robert M. Woodward [R., 29th], also a candidate for reëlection, is a major in the Guard. He said last week that he was marking time until further instructions are received from the army.

CONGRESS RACE STARTED IN SIX NORTH DISTRICTS

gress aspirants to start campaigning, is hammering away at the fiscal policies of the administration. McAndrews is relying upon the Kelly-Nash machine to put him across as it has in the past, but there are numerous signs of a sizable revolt.

Dewey came within 4,552 votes of turning the trick two years ago, when he was given 39,512 of the district's 83,576 votes. This was an imposing showing as compared with the 1936 election, in which McAndrews got 60,307 votes, as compared with only 41,587 for Mrs. Bertha Baur.

The 9th was almost exclusively a Republican district before McAndrews in 1934 unseated Fred A. Britten, who had held unbroken possession of the job from 1912 onward.

The only previous Democrat to score a victory was Linden Evans, winner in 1910, whom Britten trounced two years later.

In the 10th district, which includes much of the far north side of Chicago, the north shore suburbs and all of Lake county, the election of George A. Paddock, treasurer of the Cook county Republican organization, is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Vacated by Church.

Paddock was picked by his party as the nominee for the post that is being vacated voluntarily by Ralph E. Church, incumbent since 1934 and for several years the only Cook county Republican in the national house of representatives. Church quit to run unsuccessfully for the G. O. P. nomination for United States senator last spring.

The Democratic nominee is John Haderlein, son of a former Chicago alderman and known as an organization regular. He is not expected to make as good a showing in November as di Joseph F. Elward, Loyola university law professor whom Church defeated by a plurality of 39,451 votes in a total of 243,932.

Learn to Dance the HUNTINGHOUSE WAY

Dancing is the most attractive of all SOCIAL PASTIMES. LEARN IT NOW.

Dancing is the greatest Personality Developer.

Give yourself a reasonable chance in learning how to dance well. It is worth every effort, and you can do it if you select a reputable teacher.

This school is known for making BETTER DANCERS of its pupils. Yes, you, too, can become a marvelous dancer if you just try.

Dancing is an expression of JOY and HAPPINESS, but unless you get that JOY and HAPPINESS out of your efforts you are NOT dancing.

Mere shoving the body over the floor while an orchestra sits on the stage, does not make it dancing either. Dancing should be Play and Fun, not work, exercise, or drudgery.

If you want to remain young learn how to dance now.

We have lots of literature on HOW TO REMAIN YOUNG, which is free if you will write, phone or call for the same. DO IT NOW.

The Jacket Costume—with lapel ornament and faille trimming; tucking detail on the dress. $39.95

The Bolero costume—stitched velvet revers on the jacket; soft shirring on the simple wool dress. $49.95

There's more to a Blum Costume than appears with the jacket on! There's a good-looking dress beneath that you'd consider a "good buy" even without its jacket accompaniment! The coat costume sketched, for example, might easily cost $15 more if you had to order coat and dress separately! Hence we heartily recommend that your first purchase for Fall be a Blum Costume—chic, correct, exquisitely beautiful, the basis for your fall and winter wardrobe.

The Coat Costume—full-length, lined reefer coat, brass-buttoned, over a "dressy" dress of soft wool. $69.95 in what Vogue calls the "good little dress"—the wearable, liveable dress that is an American tradition and a forte of our American designers—the dress that you'll practically live in all season long, that's always right. That new look comes first from its straighter lines, not a match-stick straightness but rather an illusion of straightness broken by your own natural curves, skirts that hang narrowly but are actually comfortably full—second, from newness in ornamentation, from newness in drapery and fabric manipulation. We bring you a diversified and a complete collection of "good little dresses" at prices for lean or lavish purses.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 16.

Autumn flowering perennials should not be transplanted until early spring, but spring flowering kinds can be moved safely during autumn. A perennial border can be made now; spread a layer of decayed manure over the surface of the ground and spade under. The soil should be well drained. Allow the spaded area to settle and in the meantime work up a planting plan and buy the stock. A plan saves money, time, and labor.

Do not use too many kinds, but include some bulbous plants for groups in various sections, the lower plants in front and the tall ones in the rear.

Before severe weather comes lay in a good supply of material for mulching the border and bulb beds. Use materials that are free from weed seeds. Mow all weeds in the immediate area to remove insects or spots where they may lay eggs. Mow the vacant lot adjoining and save a lot of trouble later on.

Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Plant peonies now to enable them to become established before severe weather. Plant in a sunny spot and not too deep. Use good, rich soil, but avoid the use of manure at the roots.

Do not use too many peonies on the small grounds or they will dominate; two or three are plenty for small areas. Siberian and Japanese iris can still be planted. Tulips can be planted up to cold weather.

Wednesday, Sept. 18.

If only one or two trees are to be planted, go to the nursery and select good ones. A tree with a well developed root system, without a crouch, and with a good, well formed head, costs a bit more. It will require no more space and will require less care than a poor plant. Do not use too many trees on a restricted area.

Thursday, Sept. 19.

Plants that are to be removed indoors should be moved immediately or sudden weather changes may affect them, causing the leaves to turn yellow and fall. Geraniums should be dug before frost and stored in the cool cellar or basement; they will not bloom if potted before spring.

Palms, cacti, and other tender plants should be repotted if the pots have become broken, but cacti are best potted in spring. Buy a good fern, young geranium, sansevieria, aspidistra, small palm, philodendron, or other plant to grow on.

Friday, Sept. 20.

Remember to pot up small plants of pot marigolds, the dwarf asters, lantanas, petunias, bedding begonias, and others, for they will furnish good flowers for a long time. By potting now, they will become well established before cold weather. Watch for insects and spray if any are seen.

Divide the bleeding heart now. Seeds of hardy annuals may be sown now for early spring flowering. Remove cacti to the house before cold weather. Give them a sunny location. Plant the minor bulbous plants as soon as possible. These include the snowdrops, scillas, glory-of-the-snow, and others. They are fine when used in colonies, and are hardy.

Make a habit of syringing at intervals and the plants will keep in good condition.

Saturday, Sept. 21.

When potting, do not overpot by planting a small plant in a pot out of proportion to the size of the root system. Overpotting may result in overwatering. Water newly potted plants sparingly until well established. When transplanting, the soil should be packed closely about all roots. This applies to both outdoor and indoor planting.

Use the fingers and work the soil in and between the roots until the soil is in contact with each one, and continue until the pot is full or within a quarter inch of the top of the pot, depending on the size of the pot.

HOME IN SUBURB EMERGES IN NEW BRIGHTER DRESS

Traces of Mission Oak Era All Discarded.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Very tangible values are evident in the recently modernized home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Casey in Park Ridge. It is a piece of work which has solved a host of problems—the type of problems that confront a host of people. In this lie both its news interest and its remodeling interest.

The architect, W. F. McCaughey, Pickwick building, Park Ridge, inspected the original house carefully from the standpoint of practical renovations and alterations before Mr. and Mrs. Casey decided to buy.

There was no great risk involved structurally, since the house was basically sound. Nor was there any uncertainty as far as the site was concerned. The house stood on a handsome corner lot with spreading elms and hawthorns, ironwoods and maples. There were cherry and pear trees at the back and honeysuckles at the front. It was a site which needed expert landscaping, since nature had been allowed to run riot in masses of shrubs and vines and flowers. But a wealth of possibilities was there.

Beamed Mission Oak.

On other points Mr. and Mrs. Casey were not so sure. Could the house be made over so it would be really satisfying?

It would need a new overcoat. No doubt of that, for its exterior walls were drab and in need of repair. The roof called for added protection against the elements, and inside there were eight very nondescript rooms. The old living room was finished in mission oak with beamed ceiling, and light bulbs at the intersections. The walls were a dreary chocolate brown, the windows were small, and the kitchen and pantry definitely belonged to a past era. Mrs. Casey felt that if ever an interior were afflicted with room-atism, it was the interior of that house.

But then, slowly and surely, things began to happen. The exterior walls were covered with a new overcoat of 10 inch white siding. A new roof, a deep red shade, was laid, and the columns at the front were covered with heavy 2 inch fluting.

Mrs. Casey felt that she did not wish to have the front porch ripped off. It was a large and comfortable porch. [Attractive, too, now that its walls have been painted white and its floor a clear gray. It is well screened and there are plenty of women who will agree with Mrs. Casey.

The original living room was given more light by a picture window on one outside wall. At the far end of the room, on the fireside wall, old book cases were torn out and well balanced windows built. The fireplace was handsomely transformed, the walls of the room carried out in a soft green, and the woodwork and ceiling beams painted white. Radiators were inclosed and the floor carpeted in a deep shade of plum.

Beams Painted White.

The dining room now acknowledges quite as great a change of face. The ceiling beams were painted white, the walls covered with a blue paper stunningly patterned in silver, and in one corner there is a captivating cabinet with a collection of pitchers from all over the world.

Modern lighting was installed thruout the house and the kitchen is a true homemaker's workshop, "a private office," and a thing of beauty.

AIM TO DEPICT MOODS OF LIFE WITH FLOWERS

Words and pictures are used to interpret moods of life. A number of north shore women have decided to try a new medium: flowers. This class will be featured at the flower show to be given by the garden department of the Winnetka Woman's club from 1:30 to 9 o'clock Tuesday in the ballroom of the clubhouse. The department also includes members from the Junior auxiliary.

Entries in the "moods of life" class may suggest joy, despair, tranquillity, surprise or other emotions. One member is planning an arrangement entitled "Frustration." Another innovation is the novice class for exhibitors who have never won a ribbon or for those who have never exhibited at a show.

The invitation class is open only to other garden clubs. Members may enter analogous, monochromatic, symmetrical and asymmetrical arrangements. The committee is expecting some original decorations for wedding tables. In addition to the familiar themes of paper, wood, tin, crystal and silver, there are many other possible decorations such as leather, fruit, lace, ivory and coral.

Mrs. Kenneth Mullins, general chairman, reports that an exhibitor may have one entry in each class. Awards in all classes will be ribbons. Exhibits will be judged on distinction, relation to container, color harmony and proportion and balance. Those who plan to enter should notify Mrs. Dana P. Ogden of Winnetka.

Mrs. George I. Martin is chairman of the garden department. Assisting Mrs. Mullins on the flower show committee are Mrs. Munroe Cole, Mrs. John Clements, Mrs. Montague Ferry, Mrs. Alfred C. Freeman, Mrs. J. W. Garretson, Mrs. Carl Gibbons, Mrs. Edward C. Haase, Mrs. Samuel W. McCaulley, Mrs. H. A. Morrison, Mrs. Ogden, Mrs. Harry Smyth, Mrs. W. J. Smyth and Mrs. Clement F. Springer.

D. A. R. TO RECEIVE REPORT OF BOYS STATE DELEGATE

Fort Dearborn Chapter to Meet Tomorrow.

Fort Dearborn chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will observe Constitution day, officially to be celebrated on Tuesday, at its opening meeting tomorrow in the Evanston Woman's clubhouse. Mrs. Ray Garrett will begin her first year as regent at 10:30 o'clock. After the business session, members will adjourn at noon for a box luncheon in the garden.

Mrs. Harold E. Hayward. [Eugene L. Ray Photo.]

Mrs. Harry E. Hayward, first vice regent and program chairman, will introduce Kenneth Allen, who will report on his week at Boys State in Springfield, and Mrs. Alonzo Newton Benn of Chicago, who will speak on "The Blessings of the Constitution." For two years the club has sponsored young Allen at Boys State because of his outstanding civic record at Evanston Township High school.

Founded by Legion.

Boys state was founded by the American Legion to teach the youth of America the duties, principles, and responsibilities of American citizenship. Mrs. Benn is state chairman of the flag committee of the National society and chairman of the Americanism committee of the Chicago chapter.

Music will be provided by Miss Helen Hedges of Glencoe, a lyric soprano. A graduate of Northwestern university, she has appeared with the Detroit Symphony orchestra and is soloist at the Evanston First Methodist church.

Mrs. Kenneth W. De Garmo, hostess chairman, and her committee will greet new members. The committee includes Miss Martha Barrett, Mrs. Walter C. Burket, Mrs. Wilbur Helm, Mrs. Frederick B. Hinricks, Mrs. George J. Reeling, Mrs. C. Ernest Guyton, Mrs. Simon C. Miller, Mrs. Harry W. Blount, and Mrs. Charles H. Chandler.

Officers of the men's club are H. O. Curtiss, president; E. A. Grange, secretary, and J. F. Clough, treasurer. The Rev. Calvert E. Buck is pastor.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my life I had heard that horsemanship was the sport of kings. It was a bit surprising, therefore, to find that here in the Chicago area it is by no means limited to royalty, nor even to the very wealthy or the well-to-do.

Thanks chiefly to the forest preserves, the Chicago parks, and the sanitary district, public horseback riding facilities are accessible to Chicagoland people of all walks of life. Thanks to the swiftly growing popularity of the sport, the cost of riding has come down well within the means of all but the very poor.

Having learned the fundamentals of riding, I found available to me a wide range of methods of purchasing my riding.

Get What You Pay For.

Most stables have livery horses, which are rented out to riders at prices ranging from $1.50 or $2 an hour down to the approximate cost of renting a bicycle. In riding, as in most other commercial transactions, you get just about what you pay for, I found from actual experience.

At the higher priced academies I found such advantages as immaculately clean stables, spacious and comfortable club and restroom facilities, and the companionship of genteel men, women, and youngsters.

Horses there represent the cream of the sport. Attendants are efficient, reliable, and courteous. Saddles, bridles, and other equipment are of highest quality, kept clean and in safe condition. Usually indoor arenas are provided.

Such refinements, of course, cost the stable owner more, and he must pass the financial burden along or go bankrupt.

For those who must figure their recreational budget more carefully there are numerous less pretentious stables where the livery fees are, generally speaking, commensurate with the services and environment provided.

Some Offer Night Rides.

The lower one descends in the price scale the fewer niceties of livery riding he finds and the more he is surrounded by the reckless riders who treat their mounts as callously as automobiles and violate most of the rules of the trail.

Many stable owners offer night rides and Sunday morning breakfast rides at special low rates. These are a boon to those whose employment makes it impossible for them to ride during the day.

Outright ownership of horses is on the increase hereabouts, stablemen report. These private horses usually are boarded, groomed, and exercised at established stables.

In some stables it is possible to select a horse from the livery string, and by payment of a special fee reserve it for oneself exclusively by the month.

Club Riding Grows.

This practice has numerous advantages for the rider. It gives him the mount of his own choice, yet does not involve the responsibilities and initial cost of ownership. The stable furnishes saddle, bridle, and pad, and assumes all care of the mount.

Club riding is another growing practice. Members pay regular fees, in return for which they get generous use of a group of semi-private horses, plus expert instruction without additional cost.

One Chicago area stable owner has elaborated on the club plan to the point where he has graded his riders according to their ability, maintaining a group of horses for each class, and awarding promotions to the better riders. Members of his club are required to take regular riding instruction.

REV. FLANAGAN WILL BE SPEAKER AT IRISH PICNIC

Msgr. Edward J. Flanagan of Boys Town, will be the principal speaker at an Irish rally this afternoon in Mills stadium, 4660 Lake street. He will speak on Ireland's contribution to the economic, religious, and cultural advancement of the United States of America.

The afternoon and evening outing is being arranged by the Irish American National alliance, an association of all the principal Irish clubs and societies in Chicago. Father Flanagan started Boys Town in Omaha, Neb., in 1917 with $90 borrowed from a friend. Now 250 boys live on the 160 acre farm which is Boys' Town. It is incorporated and ruled by a local government of the boys.

RECORD ENTRIES ARE EXPECTED FOR HORSE SHOW

Town, Country Exhibit to Open Saturday.

Entries already received for the Town and Country Equestrian association's horse show next Saturday and Sunday indicate it will be the largest since the annual event was established three years ago for the benefit of the Sunbeam league.

This was announced by the association president, Herbert J. Lorber, at a horse show committee meeting at the Holdorf stables last week. Lorber also announced that tomorrow is the entry deadline for the show, which will be held in the polo field at Harms road and highway 58 in Morton Grove. Entries made later than tomorrow will not be listed in the program.

The names of the four judges who will officiate were announced at the meeting by John C. Bowers of Chicago, who heads the ring and judge committee.

Saddle horse judging will be done by Prof. E. A. Trowbridge of the University of Missouri, assistant director of agriculture for that state, and Harry Hess of Ridgewood, N. J.

Hunters and Jumpers.

The hunters and jumpers in the show will be judged by Brock Fuller of Milwaukee and Dr. Robert Elrod of Toledo, O. Association officials declared the judges are the most eminent available.

C. Frederick Herendeen of Chicago has been named field announcer for the show, Bowers informed his colleagues.

Special events that have been scheduled for the two day exhibition of plain and fancy horsemanship include broad jumping by Suicide, a horse noted for his recklessness; trick jumping by both one and two riders, and the unusual performances of Elmer Gantry, blind jumping horse.

Gantry, owned and ridden by Miss Eleanor Getzendaner of Barrington, has been sightless since 1934, but for the last three years has been taking the high hurdles at numerous exhibitions. He judges the height by his sense of touch, his only other aid being the spoken signals of his rider.

Nicholas J. Geib of Chicago, chairman of the entries committee, announced that horsemen from several states have signified their intention of bringing mounts to the Town and Country show.

Six Main Divisions.

There will be competition in six main divisions: Children's, pleasure horse, hunters and jumpers, show horse, harness and stake. Several classes have been set up under each division. Prizes range from ribbons to trophies and cash awards as high as $50. A new class is that for ranch stock horses, a type coming into popularity in the Chicago area.

Miss North Western

Mary Margaret Cooper, 1748 Albion street, 20 year old filing clerk of the Chicago and North Western railroad, was named Miss North Western in a contest among employes conducted by the North Western Post No. 430 of the American Legion. Her award is a trip to the San Francisco International exposition.

A GREAT ACTOR TO HELP LAUNCH W-G-N PROGRAM

Laughton Takes Lead in "Ode to Chicago."

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A great actor comes to town this week to play the leading rôle in a special W-G-N-Mutual broadcast—the world première of "Ode to Chicago" which is to be presented as the opening production of the 1940-'41 season. His name is Charles Laughton.

Just nine years ago Charles Collins, conductor of A Line O'Type or Two and then dramatic critic of THE TRIBUNE, prefaced a story of an actor, comparatively unknown, with the words, "A great actor came to town last week. . . . His name is Charles Laughton."

A bit further down in the article Mr. Collins observed, "Mr. Laughton appears to be one actor in a generation, and his arrival is something to celebrate."

That was in December, 1931. Mr. Laughton had come to Chicago without fanfare in "Payment Deferred," a grim melodrama of shabby middle class life, which was no smash hit. In the intervening years Laughton's notable work in the theater, in pictures and on the air have endeared him to the American people. His stature has risen steadily until his return to Chicago to help W-G-N launch the most important season in its history is "something to celebrate."

Unique Radio Creation.

"Ode to Chicago" is a unique radio creation. Employing drama, poetry, an original musical score and sound effects and other devices peculiar to radio, this production crystalizes the story and spirit of Chicago. The show will be aired before an invited audience—a first night audience of social and civic leaders of Chicago—from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening. It will be broadcast over the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

During the broadcast Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the president of W-G-N will speak, setting forth the basic ideals of public service and the comprehensive program plans of W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Builds Career in 12 Years.

Charles Laughton has built his phenomenal career as an actor in twelve years. While he showed a propensity for dramatics as a child it was not until 1928 that he got his first stage rôle. He had served in the army during the world war and later was a clerk in Claridge's hotel. It looked for many years as tho his mother's greatest fear that he "would end up on the stage" would not be realized. Finally he landed a small part in "The Government Inspector." Once started he lost no time in making his way into the front rank of London actors.

While playing in "Mr. Prohack" he married Elsa Lanchester, British actress. She played one of the wives in "Henry VIII.," the picture which won the Academy award for Laughton. Miss Lanchester will accompany her husband to Chicago this week.

OPERA FINALE HIGHLIGHT OF SYMPHONIC HOUR

Ruth Slater, Mark Love to Join Marion Claire.

The finale of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," sung by Marion Claire, W-G-N's prima donna, Ruth Slater, young Chicago contralto, and Mark Lve, basso, will highlight the W-G-N Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening.

Opening the hour with the overture to "Egmont," by Beethoven the orchestra also will play the coronation scene and Polonaise from "Boris Godounow," by Moussorgsky, and a polka from the "Gollen Age" ballet, by Shostakovitch. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, in the presentation of the Moussorgsky number.

Miss Claire will present three solos in addition to her part in the Offenbach opera selections. She will sing "Allerseelan," by Richard Strauss, "Floods of Spring," by Sergei Rachmaninoff, and the addio from the third act of "La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini.

The complete program:

Orchestra.
[a] Allerseelan ....Richard Strauss
[b] Floods of Spring..........Rachmaninoff

The contralto part in Jacques Offenbach's opera fantastique will mark Miss Slater's second appearance as a featured singer on W-G-N. As one of five finalists in the Chicago Opera talent search, she sang in a special audition broadcast over W-G-N last July 8. She so impressed Mr. Weber, musical director of W-G-N, that he decided to present her on the Symphonic Hour.

Miss Slater received most of her musical education at the University of Illinois. After her graduation in 1933, she moved to Chicago where she has appeared in concerts and at oratorio societies.

The Symphonic Hour is under the direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Cecil Smith of the music and drama department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE writes musical commentary for the program.

EDWARD BARRY TO BE HEARD ON YOUR MUSIC I. Q.

Edward Barry, THE TRIBUNE'S music critic, will take the rôle of expert on "Your Music I. Q.," to be broadcast from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow over W-G-N. Also answering the musical questions sent in by the audience will be Edith Mason, opera and concert soprano; Wanda Paul, winner of the Adult Education council's musical arts piano series award, and Don Bari, whose Debonairs play in the Blue Fountain room of the La Salle hotel.

Senders of the questions used on the program receive cash and tickets to Chicago Symphony orchestra concerts.

HALL OF SPORT PITS LISTENERS AGAINST EXPERTS

A three round sparring match between listeners and sporting experts—with wits the weapons instead of leathered fists—will be featured on the Hall of Sport 8:30 to 9 p. m. next Wednesday over W-G-N. This unique sports quiz will move to a regular 9:30 to 10 p. m. spot the following Wednesday.

Each week a board of four experts—three regulars and a guest—will stand up to sports questions sent in by listeners and slug, or be slugged, as the case may be. The program will be divided into three "rounds," with a regular ringside gong opening and closing each round. A question answered correctly scores a point for the experts; failure to answer chalks up a point for listeners. The blow by blow score will be tabulated at the end of each Wednesday's battle.

Listeners will receive two dollars for every question used, four dollars if the experts fail to answer correctly. A studio audience will have ringside seats for the mental sparring matches.

Referee in the battle between experts and listeners will be Doug Hope. Doug will toss the questions at the experts and will see that no verbal foul blows are committed.

Permanent board of experts will be Marvin McCarthy, sports editor of the Times; Ed Cochrane, sports editor of the Herald-American, and Herb Graffis, editor of Golfdom and Golfing Magazine.

SCOTCH TUNES ARE SCHEDULED BY NORTHERNERS

A medley of Scotch tunes will be presented by the Northerners from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Tuesday over W-G-N. The group will include "The Campbells Are Coming," "Loch Lomond," "Annie Laurie," "Blue Bells of Scotland," and "Auld Lang Syne."

Marking her return from a short vacation, Irene Verner, soprano soloist, will sing "Thine Alone" from the musical show, "Eileen."

Also on the program will be two special choruses singing "The Bishop and Priests' Chorus," from the opera, "L'Africane," and the "Cane Drivers' Chorus," from the motion picture, "Rebecca." The Northerners are under the direction of Harry S. Walsh.

CONGRESS RIVALS START CAMPAIGN

Runs from Division to 25th Street.

A thru bus line connecting the northwest and western sections of the city was ordered last week by Chairman William W. Hart of the Illinois commerce commission. The Chicago Surface Lines was given 60 days in which to install the new line, which is to run on Central Park, Homan, and Kimball avenues from 25th street to Wrightwood avenue.

The order ends a six year struggle which local merchants and civic organizations along the route have been carrying on. Eight separate proceedings were consolidated into the single one which has now been disposed of. Attorney Charles V. Falkenberg represented the group seeking this route.

Attorney Sidney Yates, for the commerce commission, said that the surface lines would make the next move by applying to the federal courts for permission to purchase the necessary buses and equipment.

Route of Line.

The new route, as outlined by Merrill B. Knox, transportation engineer of the commission, will run north on Central Park avenue from 25th street to Grenshaw street, east one block to Homan avenue, north to North avenue where it jogs east a few feet to Kimball avenue, and thence north to Wrightwood.

Thousands of persons will be affected by the new bus route, Knox said, because, as evidence brought out, there is no direct north-south route between Pulaski road and Kedzie avenue. Since the entire region is crowded, this has caused overcrowded conditions on these two lines during rush hours.

A second commerce commission order provides for establishment of bus service connecting the two Division street car lines which are separated by Humboldt park. Because of provisions in the deed setting aside Humboldt park for public use, street car service thru the park has been prohibited.

Where Line Will Run.

This bus route will run from Division street and California avenue south on the latter to Thomas street; west to North Mozart street; north to Division street, and west again to the Monticello-Grand-Division intersection.

Hitherto it has been necessary for thru passengers on Division street to transfer two or three times to connect the two street car lines. Residents of North Austin and business men along Division street testified before the commission that normal development of the street had been prevented by the lack of adequate transportation.

Groups in Campaign.

Among the organizations which have consistently advocated the route which has been chosen are the Logan Square Business Men's association, the Logan Square Community council, the Central Northwest Business Men's association, Amundsen Parent-Teacher's association, Kiwanis Club of Logan Square, and the Midwest Kiwanis club.

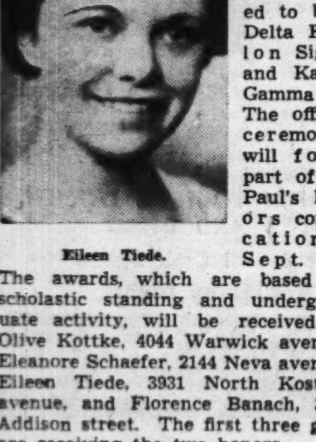
Leading individuals in the struggle have included Milton Friend, State Representative Raymond O'Keefe [25th]; Harry G. Weimer, Frank Campbell of the Kiwanis clubs, and Attorney Charles L. Barrett.

Des Plaines Health Center Will Be Open on Tuesday

The Des Plaines health center of the Tuberculosis institute of Chicago and Cook county will be open Tuesday from 2 to 4 o'clock, according to the September schedule announced by Mrs. Theodore B. Sachs, executive director. The center is at the Central school.

FOUR GIRLS ELECTED TO HONOR SOCIETIES AT DE PAUL UNIVERSITY

Four northwest side 1940 graduates from De Paul university have been named candidates for national honor societies and three of the four have been elected to both Delta Epsilon Sigma and Kappa Gamma Pi. The official ceremonies will form part of De Paul's honors convocation on Sept. 27.



Eileen Tiede.

The awards, which are based on scholastic standing and undergraduate activity, will be received by Olive Kottke, 4044 Warwick avenue; Eleanore Schaefer, 2144 Neva avenue; Eileen Tiede, 3931 North Kostner avenue, and Florence Banach, 3815 Addison street. The first three girls are receiving the two honors.

Lives on Cot, but Lives as She Always Did

Residents of North Edgebrook who have been wondering why no steps are being built into a compact home nearly finished at 5944 Fitch avenue will soon learn that the home is the newest of a series of conveniences which Morton H. Petrie has provided for his wife, Terese, who has been suffering from spinal paralysis for two years.

In July, 1938, Mr. and Mrs. Petrie were in an automobile accident in which her spine was fractured. Physicians at the Billings Memorial hospital told her husband that such an injury generally was fatal, but he was not discouraged, and due to his constant attentions his wife has been enabled to take part in nearly all the social activities in which she ordinarily would.

Parties Help Pay Cost.

To raise money for her hospital expenses, which amounted to about $1,300. Petrie, a candy manufacturing company official, organized card parties and other forms of amusement with financial angles among his friends, who enthusiastically coöperated.

After she was able to move to her mother's home at 4458 North Major avenue, where they have been residing, Petrie's ingenuity began to express itself.

"The first thing he made for me," Mrs. Petrie said, "was a card table that would fit on my bed. When we found I could not handle the playing cards, he put slits on my side of the table which would hold the cards so that I could see them."

Since Mrs. Petrie has been able to leave the house, her husband equipped a station wagon so that her portable cot could be wheeled in the rear. She has been able to attend all sorts of social functions and the movies.

Doors Are Problem.

"Whenever people ask me out," Mrs. Petrie, who is 29 years old, said with the good spirits which she has shown all along, "I ask them how wide their doors are. If they are not wide enough for my cot, then I can't go." Several weeks ago she entertained 75 persons for tea.

She and her 3-year-old daughter, Marlowe, have classes together in writing now. The mother can't write because she has not yet regained the use of her fingers, and Marlowe could write if she knew how, but she doesn't. So the class is mutually beneficial and both are improving.

Mrs. Petrie's most recent attempt is at needlepoint sewing. The needle is threaded by someone else. "But even so," she said. "I can't do so well at it yet." Ramps are being installed in the new home because of the difficulty of moving her cot up and down steps.

NEW FEATURES PROMISED FOR FLOWER EXHIBIT

Two innovations will mark the flower show of the Home and Garden club of Edison Park on Tuesday. The first is that the show in the Edison Park Methodist Episcopal church, Pratt and Oliphant avenues, will be public. The shows in the past have been private. The second feature will be the exhibits of flowers grown by children of the members.

The youngest child exhibiting is five years old and the oldest in the junior division is 16. They will exhibit blooms from the gardens they planted and cared for and also will try their hands at artistic arrangements. Mrs. A. B. Craft and Mrs. J. P. Schultz are in charge of this group of youthful gardeners.

The members of the committee appointed by the president, Mrs. Charles O. Bachmann, are: Mrs. J. A. Gebel, general chairman; Mrs. T. C. Pemberton, Mrs. Ralph Jaquith, Mrs. A. B. Craft, and Mrs. H. R. Cross. The judges will be Trov Standard, from the Gareld park conservatory; Mrs. Ruby Lambert, 5445 Iowa street, and Mrs. Alice Lubbe, 4149 Lawrence avenue.

DANISH LADIES SINGING GROUP WILL CELEBRATE

The Danish ladies singing society, "Illinois," is celebrating its 39th anniversary on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the meeting hall, 2042 West North avenue. Several of the present members were among those at the first roll call.

The society was founded by Mrs. Mathilda Huseby and Mrs. Carl Wolter, the former Elvira Petersen, and then are still with the society. Mrs. Anna Agger and Mrs. Camilla Mickelsen were also present at the first roll call.

The officers of the society are Mrs. Axel C. Modeweg, president; Mrs. Theodore Rasul, secretary; Mrs. Margaret White, treasurer; Mrs. Mathilda Huseby, director. Officers and members of other Danish and Norwegian singing societies have been invited to the celebration.

Says Lawrence Av. Survey Shows No Accident Rise

In response to charges that the widening of Lawrence avenue from Pulaski road to Cicero avenue had made it a dangerous speedway, Ald. H. L. Brody [39th] recently announced the results of a survey which showed an equal number of accidents, four, both during the six months before work began in April, 1938, and the six months after its completion last September. The road was widened from 38 to 51 feet.

Youngsters and Pets Ready for Barrington Dog Show

Peggy Dahl and her dog, Toni, are all set for the Barrington dog show next Sunday. Toni is almost as tall as his five year old mistress, but they're pals and can pose as well as any pair of professionals. Peggy lives in Wauconda and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dahl. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Cynthia and her white cocker Silver are dog show veterans, for they were in the last Barrington dog show, too. Cynthia is five years old and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Brewer of Barrington. Marvin Lipofsky, at the right, is doing some very heavy pondering these days for a man of two years because he has quite a problem on his hands. He and Como, his setter are going to win that show or else as Master Lipofsky's expression indicates. Marvin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lipofsky of Barrington.

LIGHT INDUSTRY ZONING SOUGHT IN DES PLAINES

Faced with both a steadily increasing residential population and spreading industries, the city council of Des Plaines tomorrow will consider using the term "light industry" in zoning land which should serve as a buffer district between heavy industrial and residential districts.

The problem arose recently when several manufacturers asked permission to use land nearer the commercial district than land hitherto zoned for industry. As it adjoins railroad tracks, the land is not in itself desirable for residences, City Attorney Kenneth G. Meyer pointed out, but nevertheless it would be near to homes and home owners have protested against its use by noisy and smoky factories.

The specific lot which will come up as a test case tomorrow, according to P. R. Napieralski, secretary of the zoning board, is a triangle just south of the main business district and bounded by the Milwaukee railroad tracks, Thacker street, and Graceland avenue.

Savant Club Will Open New Headquarters at Party

The Savant Progressive club, a recreational and social organization for young men of Irving Park, will hold an open house this afternoon for members and their guests in its new club rooms at 3937 North Kedzie avenue. Mel Bradford, 3923 North Spaulding avenue, president of the club, will be in charge. Edwin John Grayzeck, 3734 North Spaulding avenue, is secretary-treasurer, and Harold Tracy, 3743 North Sawyer avenue, chairman of the pastimes committee.

Portage Park to Be Scene of 'Midsummer Night'sDream'

The park district will close its summer season of plays and pageants Thursday evening with the presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at Portage park, 4100 North Long avenue, W. J. Higgins, supervisor of music and drama, has announced. Olive Colegrove of the park drama staff, is in charge of the cast of 75.

FLOWER EXHIBIT AT DES PLAINES TO OPEN FRIDAY

The Des Plaines Garden club will hold a flower show next Friday and Saturday at Rand park. The exhibit will be open from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock. Any one else who wishes to have an exhibit in the show may do so.

Classes will include artistic arrangements, still life, potted plants, fruits and vegetables, novelties, breakfast, lunch, and dinner tables, and miscellaneous. The chairman of the show is Mrs. Joseph Walsh.

Officers are Mrs. A. B. Perlin, president; Mrs. Freda Ederin, vice president; Mrs. Joseph Walsh, secretary; Mrs. H. A. Dooley, program chairman; Mrs. F. E. Marietta, membership chairman; Mrs. J. R. Marshall, civic and conservation chairman; Mrs. C. D. Johnson, Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild; Mrs. William Goeppinger, transportation; Mrs. Joseph Walsh, chairman of the Junior club; Mrs. Edith Jefferson, scrapbook; Mrs. A. D. Flentge, publicity.

BATTLE PLANS ARE DRAWN UP FOR ASSEMBLY

G.O.P. May Capture 3 House Seats.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Northwest area candidates for the state legislature last week began mapping battle strategy for the Nov. 5 election, which will decide whether the Republican "paper majority" in the house of representatives will be increased to a real working majority. This section offers the G. O. P. chances to gain three house seats.

William G. Thon.

There is only one legislative district in the northwest section where the Republicans are not trying to win another seat. This is the 27th district, made up of parts of wards 26, 27, 32, and 33, with Democratic votes easily justifying the fact that they hold two of the three house memberships.

The Republcans possess two of the three seats in the 7th district, comprising most of the Cook county townships outside of Chicago, and in the 8th district, which includes Lake, McHenry, and Boone counties.

Votes a Mere Formality.

In these three "setup" districts the winners in the primary were virtually elected. November votes will be a mere formality so far as these candidates are concerned.

Contest districts are the 23d [Oak Park and 31st ward], 25th [taking in the greater part of the northwest wards], 14th [Kane and Kendall counties], and the 41st [Will and Du Page counties]. Republicans hope to gain in the first three, but in the latter it is the Democrats who are the underdogs and will try to grab the odd house membership.

For the first time since 1930 the Republicans gained a majority in the house two years ago, when 79 G. O. P. members and 74 Democrats were elected. But because half a dozen so-called Republicans from the river wards were loyal to the party of patronage, this edge became known as a "paper majority" which could not carry out Republican policies.

Voters Are Warned.

Sales tax reduction, parole reform, and old age pensions are among the matters which probably will be acted upon by the lawmakers in Springfield. Therefore, citizens are warned by Representative William G. Thon [R., Oak Park] not to permit foreign affairs to distract their attention from duty at the polls.

Following are the house candidates in the northwest section, with present office holders shown by asterisks [*].

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

MAY BAKER, a June graduate of Maine Township High school, has been awarded a certificate of excellence in the Harper's magazine student writing contest for her poem "At the Threshold of Spring." The contest was open to under-graduates in American universities, colleges, normal schools, and junior colleges during the school year 1939-1940. Miss Baker is entering the University of Iowa, Iowa City, to major in creative writing and dramatics. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rondeau E. Baker, 207 Wisner avenue, Park Ridge. In the Illinois High School Speech league's reading competitions, Miss Baker won championships in both humorous and serious reading.

William McKoane, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Boyd McKoane of Park Ridge has been designated an honor scholar at Knox college, Thomas P. Carpenter, director of admissions reports. This rating will entitle McKoane to special academic privileges when he enters school this fall. The recognition was due to his record at Maine Township High school, where he was editor of the Latin paper and won several letters in swimming.

Senior Nurses Bernice Niemet and Clarese Bukowski of the St. Mary of Nazareth Training school have been elected editor and co-editor of the hospital newspaper.

Friday the 13th was no jinx for Our Towner Raymond Alman, 4340 North Mozart street. It was his 13th birthday and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Alman, gave a surprise party for him. They also gave him the present he wanted most—a football uniform. He plays regularly on one of the neighborhood boys' clubs teams. Ten of his pals came to the party. Raymond is in 8-B at the Bateman school.

Century Fete at Greenwood to Close Today

More than 2,000 neighbors are expected to join Greenwood township's 821 inhabitants as they close their three day celebration of the township's 100th birthday tonight. The ceremonies are being held in the village of Greenwood, in McHenry county.

Today's events will center in morning and evening sermons by Dr. John Holland, a radio preacher, which will be delivered in a large tent behind the Greenwood church. Celebration is being stressed in the religious field, for it was 100 years ago this month that Greenwood's first Christian services were held in a small frame house by a Presbyterian minister from Geneva.

Honor Pioneer Family.

Dr. Holland's services will honor the late Mr. and Mrs. Will Allen, among the original settlers of the community. Mrs. Eva Collins, their youngest daughter, will decorate the church for the day.

Listed among the present day old timers are John E. Harrison, 68 years old, for 21 years a member of the county board of supervisors and for 28 years proprietor of Greenwood's general store; Edwin Toles, 83, the oldest person born in the township, who resides in a log cabin on nearby Nippersink creek; Mrs. Rose Goddard, 86, the oldest woman, and Martin Hallstrom, the oldest resident, who will be 89 tomorrow.

Married 54 Years.

The oldest married couples are the Charles Andersons and the Brad Marbles, both of whom have been married 54 years and have lived in Greenwood nearly all of that time.

Dr. R. J. L. McKelvey is pastor of the church, and has contributed much to arranging the celebration. Mrs. Olive Hill, a rural schoolteacher, has assembled the historical materials used in the various events.

CONCERT GROUP TO BE HEARD IN CHURCH SCHOOL

The American Concert orchestra, Illinois Music project, will give a program in Christ church school hall, McLean and Richmond streets Thursday evening. The concert is being sponsored by Christ church music guild and is open to the public.

The orchestra will be conducted by Ralph Cissne. There are more than 50 professional musicians in the group.

The Rev. W. G. Dippold is pastor of Christ church and the chairman of the Guild is Paul Schiewe, 2514 North Sawyer avenue. At each of its monthly meetings the Guild features a program to promote a deeper appreciation of fine music. It has also subsidized some of the projects in connection with the annual season of twilight Lenten devotions and sacred recitals.

G.O.P. MARSHALS FORCES TO WIN BACK CONTROL

9th and 1st Districts in Battle Front.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Optimism of Republicans at a pitch unmatched for several years marked the start of the congressional election campaign in northern and northwestern Chicagoland last week.

Voters in this area will choose one congressman for each of six congressional districts in the general election Nov. 5. Only two of these six seats are now occupied by Republicans.

G. O. P. partisans are predicting, however, that their candidates will not only hold these two seats easily, but will take at least one other. Some of the more optimistic see G. O. P. triumphs in prospect in four or five of the six.

Close Race In 9th.

The districts that include northerly territory are the 1st, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th. Only the 10th and 11th are now represented by Republicans. The race is expected to be close in the 9th and perhaps the 1st, with some observers forecasting that the Democrats will have plenty of trouble in the 7th.

The incumbents have been renominated in all the northern and northwestern districts except the 10th.

In the predominantly colored 1st district, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, ardent New Dealer, faces a battle from Former Senator William E. King. Mitchell is counting strongly upon the relief vote to retain him in the office he has held since 1934, but King has a large personal following that may do much to overcome this advantage.

The 1st district has a population of about 140,000, most of it concentrated in the close packed tenements and old mansions of the near south side. A smattering resides in the hotels of the loop and nearby downtown section, which it also embraces.

56,603 Votes in 1938.

Two years ago the district cast 56,603 votes, 30,207 for Mitchell and 26,396 for William L. Dawson, then a Republican but since turned Democrat. In the Presidential election of 1936 the district cast 64,208 ballots, an all-time high, of which Mitchell was given 35,376 and former Congressman Oscar De Priest, the G. O. P. nominee, 28,640.

In the 19 congressional elections since the district was carved out in the last reapportionment in 1901, Democrats triumphed only once before Mitchell was first elected. That was in 1902 when Martin Emerich nosed out Martin B. Madden, who retaliated by winning the next 12 elections.

In the large and populous 7th district, with more than six times the population of the 1st, the fight is between Leonard W. Schuetz, who has occupied the seat since 1930, and former Ald. James C. Moreland, who was the nominee against Schuetz in 1930, 1936, and 1938.

Wins Without Talking.

Schuetz, who reputedly has never made a campaign speech, again depends on machine support to pull him thru. Moreland, a sage campaigner, is leaving nothing to chance but has already begun to whittle away at the 30,681 plurality Schuetz received two years ago. He is making capital of the growing dissatisfaction with Schuetz's do nothing record in congress.

Voters of the 7th amassed 354,819 congressional votes in 1938, when Schuetz polled 192,750 and Moreland 162,069. A record number of votes was established in the 1936 election, when 420,714 votes were tallied. Of these, Schuetz received 248,835 and Moreland 158,755.

The 7th is known as a traditionally Republican district. Only one Democrat before Schuetz has ever represented it. That was Frank Buchanan, who was elected in 1910, 1912, and 1914, when schisms split the G. O. P.

There seems little likelihood of a Republican victory this year in the 8th district, which has been represented continuously since 1932 by Leo Kocialkowski, a Democrat.

One of Smallest.

His challenger this year is Anthony V. Champagne, a lawyer who tried vainly for the G. O. P. nomination in 1934 and who in 1936 was elected an alternate delegate to the G. O. P. national convention.

The 8th district is one of the smallest in Illinois. It has a population of about 138,000 and the number has been decreasing steadily since the turn of the century. It cast 42,263 ballots two years ago and 43,849 in the last Presidential election, Kocialkowski receiving more than three-fourths of the vote each time. It is predominantly Democratic, the G. O. P. electing only one congressman, Charles McGavin, winner in 1904 and 1906.

Republican eyes are turning most hopefully to the 9th district, where for the second election in a row Charles E. Dewey, assistant secretary of the treasury under President Coolidge, is out to unseat Congressman James McAndrews. The 200,000 or more residents of the 9th include the impoverished families of the river precincts, the wealthy inhabitants of the gold coast, and the apartment-dwelling citizens of the middle class area in between.

Dewey Hits Administration.

ASKS LUNCHROOM ATTENDANT.

Let me voice my opinion of the Young grammar school, 1434 North Parkside avenue.

They refuse to let the pupils have their lunch at school unless their mothers agree to supervise the lunchroom, during their lunch period. And if the mother cannot do so, she has to arrange and pay for some one to take her place. Since this is the only school in this vicinity some of the children have to walk over a mile to go there and cannot go back home for their lunch. I refer to the younger children—first and second grades. Should the children go home they find on their return that the patrol boys have left 15 minutes before starting time and there is no one to see them across the street.

Is the board of education aware of these facts? Can they not put some one in the lunchroom. Certainly there are enough WPA women in Chicago. I am a taxpayer and demand to know what can be done about this.

A FORMER DEMOCRAT.

WANTS CLEANER ALLEYS.

Recently it was announced that the city council proposed a comparatively small appropriation to exterminate the rats from the city. This proposal is good and is worthy of commendation. The condition existing, however, could have been prevented if the aldermen would look after the cleanliness of the wards they represent.

I am sure we could eliminate the rats and other vermin if the council would order a more frequent removal of garbage from the alleys. In a recent tour of the 31st ward of which I am a resident, I found the alleys very dirty and the many garbage receptacles overfilled with garbage.

How can we expect to exterminate the rats with dirty alleys and areaways? I appeal, therefore, to the members of the council to help their constituents keep this city clean and we will have no worries about rats and other vermin.

C. J. T.

QUESTIONS REPORT.

According to a report published in THE TRIBUNE Metropolitan section last Sunday the 34th ward ranks 100 per cent in having garbage cans. Whoever made that report surely missed some of the alleys. When the rat exterminators start working they will find plenty to do in this ward. We hope that you publish this. It may wake up the residents to the fact that they are not coöperating. We do have regular garbage pickups.

UNITS OF POLISH CIVILIAN RELIEF TO REVIEW WORK

Group to Elect Officers at Dinner Sunday.

Members of the 105 units of the Polish Civilian War Relief of Chicago will hold an all day meeting next Sunday which will open with high mass at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, 1039 West 32d street. The war relief work of Chicago's more than 400,000 citizens of Polish extraction during the last year will be reviewed.

Mrs. Armella Mix.
[Lincoln Photo.]

There will be an afternoon program at the relief headquarters, 1309 North Ashland avenue, had a dinner and evening meeting will be held, at which new officers will be elected and members of the American Red Cross and the Polish unit will speak.

Raise $26,000 Fund.

The 8,000 active workers in the 105 units have raised $26,000 in the last year. This fund has been referred to the Chicago Red Cross chapter to purchase material and distribute it among the members to be made into garments for the people in Poland and for the Polish refugees in Rumania and other countries. Since Sept. 26, 1939, the Chicago Polish groups have completed 40,000 garment and rolled 25,000 hospital bandages.

On that day last September, when Poland was invaded, the Polish Civilian War Relief unit had its inception in Chicago. Its slogan was "Help Save the Polish Nation," and Msgr. Thomas Bona and Mrs. Armella Mix were the foremost members of the group organizing the relief unit.

Thru the churches, clubs, and other groups within the city, the individual units of the relief organization were formed. On Sept. 26, the unit was formally organized with headquarters in the Polish Women's Alliance building, 1309 North Ashland avenue. The space was donated to the group by Mrs. Honorata B. Wotowska, president of the Polish Women's Alliance.

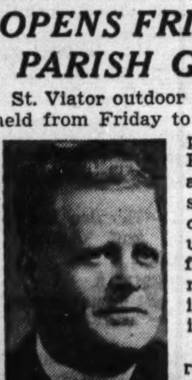
Leaders in Work.

Msgr. Thomas Bona is the honorary chairman of the Polish Relief organization and Mrs. Armella Mix is chairman. Other officers are: Arthur Korzeneski, Mrs. Angela B. Gorny, Mrs. Angeline Milasiewicz, Mrs. Josephine Rzewski, Mrs. Valerie Grotowski, vice chairmen; Miss Marie Kruppa, recording secretary; Miss Jewel B. Palewicz, assistant secretary; S. Charles Bubacz, financial secretary; Mrs. Maria E. Brzezicki, Miss Helene Perlinski, assistant financial secretaries.

John Nering, treasurer; Miss Adella Lagodzinska, Mrs. Joseph A. Slupkowski, assistant treasurers; Mrs. Eleanore Deka, membership chairman; Miss Bernice Eichler, Miss Tess Biegalski, publicity committee; Miss Pearl Suchomski, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Victoria Schlaeger, assistant corresponding secretary.

ST. VIATOR FETE OPENS FRIDAY ON PARISH GROUNDS

St. Viator outdoor carnival is to be held from Friday to Sept. 29 on the parish grounds, Kedvale avenue and Addison street. The proceeds will be used to help pay for improvements made on the parish school building this summer.



The Rev. Gregory A. Galvin.

St. Viator's parochial school was founded in 1910 and occupied the upper two floors of the church building. When the new church was erected in 1930, the old church space became additional classrooms. This summer the 18 room grade school had a rejuvenation. Desks were refinished, floors sanded, and the stairways were reinforced.

Two new additions included in the improvement plan of the Rev. Gregory A. Galvin, pastor of the church, are the creation of a health center and doctor's office in the school building.

Congress Districts on North Side

CONGRESS RACE STARTED IN SIX NORTH DISTRICTS

GOP Hopes to Regain Former Seats.

gress aspirants to start campaigning, is hammering away at the fiscal policies of the administration. McAndrews is relying upon the Kelly-Nash machine to put him across as it has in the past, but there are numerous signs of a sizable revolt.

Dewey came within 4,552 votes of turning the trick two years ago, when he was given 39,512 of the district's 83,576 votes. This was an imposing showing as compared with the 1936 election, in which McAndrews got 60,307 votes, as compared with only 41,587 for Mrs. Bertha Baur.

The 9th was almost exclusively a Republican district before McAndrews in 1934 unseated Fred A. Britten, who had held unbroken possession of the job from 1912 onward.

The only previous Democrat to score a victory was Linden Evans, winner in 1910, whom Britten trounced two years later.

In the 10th district, which includes much of the far north side of Chicago, the north shore suburbs and all of Lake county, the election of George A. Paddock, treasurer of the Cook county Republican organization, is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Vacated by Church.

Paddock was picked by his party as the nominee for the post that is being vacated voluntarily by Ralph E. Church, incumbent since 1934 and for several years the only Cook county Republican in the national house of representatives. Church quit to run unsuccessfully for the G. O. P. nomination for United States senator last spring.

The Democratic nominee is John Haderlein, son of a former Chicago alderman and known as an organization regular. He is not expected to make as good a showing in November as di : Joseph F. Elward, Loyola university law professor whom Church defeated by a plurality of 39,451 votes in a total of 243,932.

The 10th district has never sent a Democrat to congress, and it does not appear that this is the year the precedent will be broken.

Always Goes G. O. P.

Another tame race is getting off to a slow start in the 11th district, which takes in the ring of counties that hem Cook and Lake against Lake Michigan—Will, Du Page, Kane, and McHenry. The 11th is one of the four districts in the state that has never elected a Democrat to the national lower house.

The arm chair experts are saying that the Democratic nominee, Edgar O. Eakin, Elgin attorney, doesn't stand the ghost of a chance of unseating Congressman Chauncey W. Reed of West Chicago, in spite of his wide circle of friends and supporters.

Reed has been the incumbent since 1934, when he nosed out the Democratic nominee by only 721 votes.

OAKTON SCHOOL ADDITIONS ARE TO COST $30,000

A gymnasium, auditorium, and cafeteria will account for most of the $30,000 which residents of school district 64½ in Park Ridge have voted to spend on additions to the Oakton school, on Oakton street just west of Northwest highway. Plans are being prepared at the architectural offices of Godfrey E. Larson, Inc., and work should begin in a month or so. Willis Roe, clerk of the school district, said the school has an enrollment of 60 but that it should be prepared for more, since many new homes are being built in the region.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 16.

Autumn flowering perennials should not be transplanted until early spring, but spring flowering kinds can be moved safely during autumn. A perennial border can be made now; spread a layer of decayed manure over the surface of the ground and spade under. The soil should be well drained. Allow the spaded area to settle and in the meantime work up a planting plan and buy the stock. A plan saves money, time, and labor.

Do not use too many kinds, but include some bulbous plants for groups in various sections, the lower plants in front and the tall ones in the rear. Repeat the kinds at intervals in the plan and avoid using those that spread rapidly from underground stems, such as the Oswego tea, false dragonhead, rudbeckias, or golden glow unless they can be kept in bounds.

Before severe weather comes lay in a good supply of material for mulching the border and bulb beds. Use materials that are free from weed seeds. Mow all weeds in the immediate area to remove insects or spots where they may lay eggs. Mow the vacant lot adjoining and save a lot of trouble later on.

Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Good weather permitting, there is time to repair the lawn by sowing fresh seed of a high grade mixture. To keep a good, high class lawn requires attention at the proper time. Permanent lawns require no mulching to come safely thru the winter, and the practice of spreading straw or strawy manure over the lawn does more harm than good.

Plant peonies now to enable them to become established before severe weather. Plant in a sunny spot and not too deep. Use good, rich soil, but avoid the use of manure at the roots.

Do not use too many peonies on the small grounds or they will dominate; two or three are plenty for small areas. Siberian and Japanese iris can still be planted. Tulips can be planted up to cold weather,

Wednesday, Sept. 18.

If only one or two trees are to be planted, go to the nursery and select good ones. A tree with a well developed root system, without a crouch, and with a good, well formed head, costs a bit more, but will occupy no more space and will require less care than a poor plant. Do not use too many trees on a restricted area.

If the wisteria failed to flower well, it can be root pruned at this time. Take a sharp spade and cut the roots off about three feet from the plant.

Feeding roots will be reduced and flower spurs forced to appear. The plant is a gross feeder and if permitted to grow rampant will produce abundant wood and few flowers.

Thursday, Sept. 19.

Plants that are to be removed indoors should be moved immediately or sudden weather changes may affect them, causing the leaves to turn yellow and fall. Geraniums should be dug before frost and stored in the cool cellar or basement; they will not bloom if potted before spring.

Palms, cacti, and other tender plants should be repotted if the pots have become broken, but cacti are best potted in spring. Buy a good fern, young geranium, sansevieria, aspidistra, small palm, philodendron, or other plant to grow on.

Cuttings of plants for stock may be made now by placing in a four inch layer of sand in a cold frame to protect against early frost. The geranium, heliotrope, and many other kinds are usually used in quantity. They should be propagated now.

Friday, Sept. 20.

Remember to pot up small plants of pot marigolds, the dwarf asters, lantanas, petunias, bedding begonias, and others, for they will furnish good flowers for a long time. By potting now, they will become well established before cold weather. Watch for insects and spray if any are seen.

Divide the bleeding heart now. Seeds of hardy annuals may be sown now for early spring flowering. Remove cacti to the house before cold weather. Give them a sunny location. Plant the minor bulbous plants as soon as possible. These include the snowdrops, scillas, glory-of-the-snow, and others. They are fine when used in colonies, and are hardy.

Make a habit of syringing at intervals and the plants will keep in good condition.

Wash the leaves of house plants with soapy water to remove dust and insects. Syringing with water under pressure is one of the best methods to keep the foliage clean and insect-free.

Saturday, Sept. 21.

When potting, do not overpot by planting a small plant in a pot out of proportion to the size of the root system. Overpotting may result in overwatering. Water newly potted plants sparingly until well established. When transplanting, the soil should be packed closely about all roots. This applies to both outdoor and indoor planting.

Use the fingers and work the soil in and between the roots until the soil is in contact with each one, and continue until the pot is full or within a quarter inch of the top of the pot, depending on the size of the pot. Save all leaves that are not insect infested for the compost pile.

START JUDGING LAWNS IN CITY PARKS CONTEST

Mrs. Robert Ball, 5873 North Harlem avenue, vice president of the Norwood Park Woman's club, and Mrs. Lee J. Bisdorf, president of the Norwood Park Garden club, have been named judges for the northwest side in the park district's sixth annual "Save the Lawn" campaign contest for beautiful lawns. Judging will begin this week. Awards are based on general appearance, absence of weeds or insects, color of grass, neatness of trimming, and condition of surrounding trees, shrubs, and flowers. Paul Schulze, president of the Municipal Art league, is chairman of the citizen's committee coöperating with the park district in the campaign.

Traces of Mission Oak Era All Discarded.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Very tangible values are evident in the recently modernized home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Casey in Park Ridge. It is a piece of work which has solved a host of problems—the type of problems that confront a host of people. In this lie both its news interest and its remodeling interest.

The architect, W. F. McCaughey, Pickwick building, Park Ridge, inspected the original house carefully from the standpoint of practical renovations and alterations before Mr. and Mrs. Casey decided to buy.

There was no great risk involved structurally, since the house was basically sound. Nor was there any uncertainty as far as the site was concerned. The house stood on a handsome corner lot with spreading elms and hawthorns, ironwoods and maples. There were cherry and pear trees at the back and honeysuckles at the front. It was a site which needed expert landscaping, since nature had been allowed to run riot in masses of shrubs and vines and flowers. But a wealth of possibilities was there.

Beamed Mission Oak.

On other points Mr. and Mrs. Casey were not so sure. Could the house be made over so it would be really satisfying?

It would need a new overcoat. No doubt of that, for its exterior walls were drab and in need of repair. The roof called for added protection against the elements, and inside there were eight very nondescript rooms. The old living room was finished in mission oak with beamed ceiling, and light bulbs at the intersections. The walls were a dreary chocolate brown, the windows were small, and the kitchen and pantry definitely belonged to a past era. Mrs. Casey felt that if ever an interior were afflicted with room-atism, it was the interior of that house.

But then, slowly and surely, things began to happen. The exterior walls were covered with a new overcoat of 10 inch white siding. A new roof, a deep red shade, was laid, and the columns at the front were covered with heavy 2 inch fluting.

Mrs. Casey felt that she did not wish to have the front porch ripped off. It was a large and comfortable porch. [Attractive, too, now that its walls have been painted white and its floor a clear gray. It is well screened and there are plenty of women who will agree with Mrs. Casey.

The original living room was given more light by a picture window on one outside wall. At the far end of the room, on the fireside wall, old book cases were torn out and well balanced windows built. The fireplace was handsomely transformed, the walls of the room carried out in a soft green, and the woodwork and ceiling beams painted white. Radiators were inclosed and the floor carpeted in a deep shade of plum.

Beams Painted White.

The dining room now acknowledges quite as great a change of face. The ceiling beams were painted white, the walls covered with a blue paper stunningly patterned in silver, and in one corner there is a captivating cabinet with a collection of pitchers from all over the world.

Modern lighting was installed thruout the house and the kitchen is a true homemaker's workshop, "a private office," and a thing of beauty. The old pantry is now a gay and sparkling breakfast room with cream paper figured in red on the wall, and with the inside of wall shelves and cupboards also in red. This lively color is carried into the kitchen and seen on the counters and work surfaces as well as in the linoleum, which is red and black.

40,000 CHILDREN TO RECEIVE FREE SCHOOL LUNCHES

Work Project administration officials announced yesterday that, in coöperation with the Chicago Relief administration and the board of education, free hot lunches will be served to 40,000 school children this year. Federal surplus commodities are available for the lunches, according to H. M. McCullen, Chicago WPA manager. He said some of the food has been grown in WPA gardens around Chicago and canned in WPA canning projects. The school board started serving surplus commodity lunches in certain schools last year.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my life I had heard that horsemanship was the sport of kings. It was a bit surprising, therefore, to find that here in the Chicago area it is by no means limited to royalty, nor even to the very wealthy or the well-to-do.

Thanks chiefly to the forest preserves, the Chicago parks, and the sanitary district, public horseback riding facilities are accessible to Chicagoland people of all walks of life. Thanks to the swiftly growing popularity of the sport, the cost of riding has come down well within the means of all but the very poor.

Get What You Pay For.

Most stables have livery horses, which are rented out to riders at prices ranging from $1.50 or $2 an hour down to the approximate cost of renting a bicycle. In riding, as in most other commercial transactions, you get just about what you pay for, I found from actual experience.

At the higher priced academies I found such advantages as immaculately clean stables, spacious and comfortable club and restroom facilities, and the companionship of genteel men, women, and youngsters.

Horses there represent the cream of the sport. Attendants are efficient, reliable, and courteous. Saddles, bridles, and other equipment are of highest quality, kept clean and in safe condition. Usually indoor arenas are provided.

For those who must figure their recreational budget more carefully there are numerous less pretentious stables where the livery fees are, generally speaking, commensurate with the services and environment provided.

Some Offer Night Rides.

Many stable owners offer night rides and Sunday morning breakfast rides at special low rates. These are a boon to those whose employment makes it impossible for them to ride during the day.

Outright ownership of horses is on the increase hereabouts, stablemen report. These private horses usually are boarded, groomed, and exercised at established stables.

In some stables it is possible to select a horse from the livery string, and by payment of a special fee reserve it for oneself exclusively by the month.

A GREAT ACTOR TO HELP LAUNCH W-G-N PROGRAM

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A great actor comes to town this week to play the leading rôle in a special W-G-N-Mutual broadcast—the world première of "Ode to Chicago" which is to be presented as the opening production of the 1940-'41 season. His name is Charles Laughton.

Just nine years ago Charles Collins, conductor of A Line O'Type or Two and then dramatic critic of THE TRIBUNE, prefaced a story of an actor, comparatively unknown, with the words, "A great actor came to town last week. . . . His name is Charles Laughton."

A bit further down in the article Mr. Collins observed, "Mr. Laughton appears to be one actor in a generation, and his arrival is something to celebrate."

That was in December, 1931. Mr. Laughton had come to Chicago without fanfare in "Payment Deferred," a grim melodrama of shabby middle class life, which was no smash hit. In the intervening years Laughton's notable work in the theater, in pictures and on the air have endeared him to the American people. His stature has risen steadily until his return to Chicago to help W-G-N launch the most important season in its history is "something to celebrate."

Unique Radio Creation.

"Ode to Chicago" is a unique radio creation. Employing drama, poetry, an original musical score and sound effects and other devices peculiar to radio, this production crystalizes the story and spirit of Chicago. The show will be aired before an invited audience—a first night audience of social and civic leaders of Chicago—from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening. It will be broadcast over the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

During the broadcast Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the president of W-G-N will speak, setting forth the basic ideals of public service and the comprehensive program plans of W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Builds Career in 12 Years.

Charles Laughton has built his phenomenal career as an actor in twelve years. While he showed a propensity for dramatics as a child it was not until 1928 that he got his first stage rôle. He had served in the army during the world war and later was a clerk in Claridge's hotel. It looked for many years as tho his mother's greatest fear that he "would end up on the stage" would not be realized. Finally he landed a small part in "The Government Inspector." Once started he lost no time in making his way into the front rank of London actors.

While playing in "Mr. Prohack" he married Elsa Lanchester, British actress. She played one of the wives in "Henry VIII.," the picture which won the Academy award for Laughton. Miss Lanchester will accompany her husband to Chicago this week.

Guest on W-G-N

Charles Laughton, the distinguished British actor, as he appears in the new R-K-O picture, "They Knew What They Wanted." Laughton will come from Hollywood to play the leading part in "Ode to Chicago," a special musical dramatic program which will introduce W-G-N's fall season from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

Air Training Chief Speaks on Aviation Hour Today

Brig. Gen. Jacob E. Fickel, who is in charge of the United States Army air training, and Lieut. R. F. Schirmer, who has just been transferred to Mitchell field in New York after graduating from Randolph Field, Texas, will be guests on the Wings Over America broadcast at 11:30 a. m. today over WMAQ. The broadcast will explain how the army air cadets are chosen and trained under actual combat conditions.

OPERA FINALE HIGHLIGHT OF SYMPHONIC HOUR

Ruth Slater, Mark Love to Join Marion Claire.

The finale of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," sung by Marion Claire, W-G-N's prima donna, Ruth Slater, young Chicago contralto, and Mark Lve, basso, will highlight the W-G-N Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening.

Opening the hour with the overture to "Egmont," by Beethoven the orchestra also will play the coronation scene and Polonaise from "Boris Godounow," by Moussorgsky, and a polka from the "Gollen Age" ballet, by Shostakovitch. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, in the presentation of the Moussorgsky number.

Miss Claire will present three solos in addition to her part in the Offenbach opera selections. She will sing "Allerseelan," by Richard Strauss, "Floods of Spring," by Sergei Rachmaninoff, and the addio from the third act of "La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini.

The complete program:

Overture to Egmont .... Beethoven
Orchestra.
[a] Allerseelan .... Richard Strauss
[b] Floods of Spring .... Rachmaninoff
Coronation scene and Polonaise from Boris Godounow .... Moussorgsky
Chorus and orchestra.
Addio from third act of La Boheme ... Puccini
Marion Claire and orchestra.
Speech ....
Col. Robert R. McCormick.
Polka from "Golden Age" ballet .... Shostakovitch
Tales of Hoffmann .... Offenbach
Marion Claire, Ruth Slater, Mark Love, chorus and orchestra.

The contralto part in Jacques Offenbach's opera fantastique will mark Miss Slater's second appearance as a featured singer on W-G-N. As one of five finalists in the Chicago Opera talent search, she sang in a special audition broadcast over W-G-N last July 8. She so impressed Mr. Weber, musical director of W-G-N, that he decided to present her on the Symphonic Hour.

Miss Slater received most of her musical education at the University of Illinois. After her graduation in 1933, she moved to Chicago where she has appeared in concerts and at oratorio societies.

The Symphonic Hour is under the direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Cecil Smith of the music and drama department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE writes musical commentary for the program.

HALL OF SPORT PITS LISTENERS AGAINST EXPERTS

A three round sparring match between listeners and sporting experts—with wits the weapons instead of leathered fists—will be featured on the Hall of Sport 8:30 to 9 p. m. next Wednesday over W-G-N. This unique sports quiz will move to a regular 9:30 to 10 p. m. spot the following Wednesday.

Each week a board of four experts—three regulars and a guest—will stand up to sports questions sent in by listeners and slug, or be slugged, as the case may be. The program will be divided into three "rounds," with a regular ringside gong opening and closing each round. A question answered correctly scores a point for the experts; failure to answer chalks up a point for listeners. The blow by blow score will be tabulated at the end of each Wednesday's battle.

Listeners will receive two dollars for every question used, four dollars if the experts fail to answer correctly. A studio audience will have ringside seats for the mental sparring matches.

Referee in the battle between experts and listeners will be Doug Hope. Doug will toss the questions at the experts and will see that no verbal foul blows are committed.

Permanent board of experts will be Marvin McCarthy, sports editor of the Times; Ed Cochrane, sports editor of the Herald-American, and Herb Graffis, editor of Golfdom and Golfing Magazine.

'DAY IN VIENNA' WILL HIGHLIGHT MELODY PAGEANT

A special arrangement of "Day in Vienna," by Adolph Hoffmann to be sung by Kathryn Witwer, soprano, and Attilio Baggiore, tenor, will be featured on the Pageant of Melody from 9:15 to 10 p. m. next Wednesday. Offering classical and light classical music by the concert orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber, the program will be presented over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

For her solo, Miss Witwer will sing "O No, I Pray, Do Not Depart," by Sergei Rachmaninoff. Baggiore will present "Bird Song at Eventide," by Eric Coates, noted English composer.

The orchestra will open the program with Von Suppe's "Beautiful Galathea." Following Miss Witwer's solo, the orchestra will present Edvard Grieg's "Wedding Day at Troll-hagen."

Camille Saint-Saëns' "Samson et Delilah" and Achron's "Hebrew Melody" also will be played by the orchestra. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra in the presentation of the selection from Saint-Saëns.

Music ranging in tempo from hot rhumba to southern spirituals will be featured from 7 to 7:30 p. m. next Friday when Harold Stokes presents the Friday Night Show. This musical variety program will be broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Stokes will introduce "The Four Top Notes," a new singing combination, in a presentation of "Breezin' Along with the Breeze." Kathleen Karns, Bee Arden, Ray Charles, and Norman Luboff make up this mixed quartet.

Patti Clayton, featured soloist, will present two numbers—"The Nearness of You" and "Love Turns Winter to Spring." Miss Clayton, a W-G-N singing discovery, is making her first appearance as regular soloist on the Friday Night Show.

Curt Massey, romantic baritone, also will present two solos.

BECKER'S CHATS ABOUT DOGS TO RETURN SEPT. 29

Marking his 10th year as a broadcaster, Bob Becker, outdoor writer for THE TRIBUNE and dog fancier, will return to the air with his popular dog program, Chats About Dogs, Sunday, Sept. 29. The program will be aired each Sunday from 1:45 to 2 p. m. on W-G-N.

Helpful talks on dog care and thumb nail dramas depicting sagas of heroic and faithful dogs will be featured on the program. Special guests will come to the studio to chat with Becker about dogs. Periodically Bob will devote a quarter-hour to the mailbox, answering listeners' questions on their own dogs. "The Talking Dog" again will be presented on the series.

G. O. P. HOPES FOR CONGRESS RISE

Runs from Division to 25th Street.

A thru bus line connecting the northwest and western sections of the city was ordered last week by Chairman William W. Hart of the Illinois commerce commission. The Chicago Surface Lines was given 60 days in which to install the new line, which is to run on Central Park, Homan, and Kimball avenues from 25th street to Wrightwood avenue.

The order ends a six year struggle which local merchants and civic organizations along the route have been carrying on. Eight separate proceedings were consolidated into the single one which has now been disposed of. Attorney Charles V. Falkenberg represented the group seeking this route.

Attorney Sidney Yates, for the commerce commission, said that the surface lines would make the next move by applying to the federal courts for permission to purchase the necessary buses and equipment.

Route of Line.

The new route, as outlined by Merrill B. Knox, transportation engineer of the commission, will run north on Central Park avenue from 25th street to Grenshaw street, east one block to Homan avenue, north to North avenue where it jogs east a few feet to Kimball avenue, and thence north to Wrightwood.

Thousands of persons will be affected by the new bus route, Knox said, because, as evidence brought out, there is no direct north-south route between Pulaski road and Kedzie avenue. Since the entire region is crowded, this has caused overcrowded conditions on these two lines during rush hours.

A second commerce commission order provides for establishment of bus service connecting the two Division street car lines which are separated by Humboldt park. Because of provisions in the deed setting aside Humboldt park for public use, street car service thru the park has been prohibited.

Where Line Will Run.

This bus route will run from Division street and California avenue south on the latter to Thomas street; west to North Mozart street; north to Division street, and west again to the Monticello-Grand-Division intersection.

Hitherto it has been necessary for thru passengers on Division street to transfer two or three times to connect the two street car lines. Residents of North Austin and business men along Division street testified before the commission that normal development of the street had been prevented by the lack of adequate transportation.

Groups in Campaign.

Among the organizations which have consistently advocated the route which has been chosen are the Logan Square Business Men's association, the Logan Square Community council, the Central Northwest Business Men's association, Amundsen Parent-Teacher's association, Kiwanis Club of Logan Square, and the Midwest Kiwanis club.

Leading individuals in the struggle have included Milton Friend, State Representative Raymond O'Keefe [25th]; Harry G. Welmer, Frank Campbell of the Kiwanis clubs, and Attorney Charles L. Barrett.

MOTOR COUNCIL HAS NEW IDEA ON GRADE CROSSING

West Area council of the Chicago Motor club has changed its petition for a grade separation at Harlem avenue and the tracks of the Garfield park "L." The council now recommends double tracks thru the entire village of Oak Park and has asked a commission to study the advisabilityof extending such elevation west from Harlem avenue thru Forest Park.

The new request of the council follows the Oak Park plan presented and approved by voters of the village in 1938. It provides for subways carrying the traffic of the principal cross streets with residential streets being brought to a dead end at the elevation. It is expected the commission will set a new date for hearing evidence on the petition.

The Harlem avenue crossing is considered by the council to be one of the worst potential death spots in the area. There are 661 elevated trains, 22 steam trains and 17,000 automobiles passing over the crossing daily.

RIFLE, PISTOL SHOTS INVITED TO JOIN CLUB

Men and women in the vicinity of Villa Park who enjoy peering along the barrel of a rifle and scoring bulls-eyes, and who wish to enjoy the comradeship of others in the sport, will be given an opportunity to become members of the Villa Park Rifle and Pistol club.

The club will close its charter membership Tuesday night at a meeting in the basement clubroom of the Community Congregational church, Highland and Cornell avenues, Villa Park. Already the organization has 30 members.

Officers are Robert C. Tarr, president; Maynard Nagel, vice president; Forrest A. Rank, secretary; Walter Douglas, treasurer, and Capt. Floyd D. Gibson, executive range officer.

The club, which has applied for a charter in the National Rifle Association of America, has plans for an outdoor and indoor range. Rifles of .22 caliber and all calibers of pistols and revolvers will be used.

Forrest A. Rank, secretary of the club, said candidates must be citizens of the United States and more than 18 years old. The Villa Park club has been invited to join the Western Rifle league,

"Our club is strictly a civilian project and has no military connections," Mr. Rank explained. "It is for sport only. Capt. Gibson, our executive range officer, has shot on all the important ranges in the country, and our activities will be conducted under safety regulations as laid down by the National Rifle association."

Mr. Rank said there were 2,200 rifle clubs in the United States affiliated with the national association, and that these had a membership of a quarter of a million persons.

The purpose of the Villa Park club is set forth as obtaining a better knowledge of the safe handling and proper care of firearms.

Another Circle, No. 22 of the Junior auxiliary of Oak Park and River Forest Infant welfare will begin a new term, the silver anniversary year of the juniors, on Saturday afternoon. Program plans will be discussed at a luncheon at 1 o'clock in the Oak Park Country club. Mrs. Frank C. Ruthven (left) and Mrs. Allan M. Family Albums His Hobby; Can Be Any Family

Fred Bosserman collects people of yesterday. In a big trunk in his office at Austin Town hall, where he is park director, Bosserman has nearly 100 family albums. One is a music box album and one opens to become a family altar. One is decorated with metal cornstalks; some have coats of arms. Some are decorated with pictures of Niagara Falls, cupids, or blossoms.

Mr. Bosserman brings them out every few months, dusts them off and has an exhibit at the park. Occasionally a west side man or woman looking them over sees a long lost family album. "Why, my great-uncle, Henry, is right over there on that page with the sheaf of wheat painted on it." Mr. Bosserman gladly hands over great-uncle Henry.

Modern Over Laugh.

"I like to give old albums to their rightful owners," says Bosserman, "It's like giving some one lost back to his kin."

Bosserman haunts warehouses and auctions and takes all the albums given him. "What do most people do when they look at a family album?" Bosserman was asked.

"Laugh," was his immediate answer.

Folks were sure not to have a hair out of place when they posed for an afternoon or so for their daguerreotype, their thumbtype, or tintype. In one album Mr. Bosserman has collected pretty women. Another he calls his pretty men file. Children fill another.

In the last half of the 19th century the family album was as important as the radio is today. Sometimes the decoration portrayed the occupation of the head of the family. The bindings were usually standard book binding, altho Bosserman has several with metal strips holding each page and ingenious locks. The locks were important because they held the pages of the album shut tight against dust and the deteriorating effects of light.

Album of Freaks.

One of Bosserman's albums is from a Negro family and one is filled with circus freaks. The photographers' mark on the back of the pictures shows the places west side ancestors sat to record themselves. Mainly then were New York, Chicago, London, and Boston.

Mr. Bosserman collects albums as a record of one of the greatest social factors of their century. Lovers plighted their troth while Aunt Minnie dangled in a plushbound book over the edge of the sofa. Old folks exchanged memories over cherubs in lace leaning against a stone bench in a pseudo park. Settings for pictures were chairs, faked outdoor scenes, or stone fences to lean on. When a young lad leans in Mr. Bosserman's album he does it with such a studied carefulness that his elbow is an exact right angle.

On View Next Week.

The albums will come out of their trunk next week for another west side tour. Mr. Bosserman hopes again that some family will be reunited with its ancestors thru the family album. If he gives away an album he says, "I will go back to auctions and get more."

TEMPO OF RACE IN WEST AREA IS SPEEDED UP

Chances Best in 7th and 11th Dists.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Signs of a greatly stiffened Republican opposition were plentiful at the start last week of the election campaign in the six congressional districts that include parts of the west side and nearby suburbs.

Their hopes soaring because of the improved national outlook for the party, Republican candidates in most of the districts launched vigorously into the early phases of the battle for votes. In some cases this activity stirred to life the Democratic incumbents who in previous elections were content to ride along with their machine, thus capitalizing on the disorganization of their political foes.

The western Chicagoland districts are 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 11th. Only one, the 11th, is held by the Republicans. In fact, the 11th is the only one that has had a G. O. P. congressman since 1930, when the Democrats made a clean sweep of the other districts.

Look to 7th and 11th.

Republican hopes are highest in the 7th and 11th. Neutral observers are saying at the start of the campaign that the 11th will in all probability remain in G. O. P. hands, and that the race in the 7th is likely to be extremely close.

Without exception, the incumbent congressmen in all six of the districts are seeking reëlection.

The 4th district race is a one-sided affair, not even the most optimistic G. O. P. supporters claiming a chance for the Republican candidate, Henry F. Schmudde, against Representative Harry P. Beam, incumbent since 1930. Schmudde has practically no political background, while Beam is widely known and generally liked thruout his district.

The 4th has an almost unbroken Democratic history. The only Republican it ever sent to congress was Charles S. Wharton, who slid in in 1904 because of the absorption of Democratic strength by the Socialist and Prohibition tickets.

With a population of about 240,000, the 4th is one of the largest in the state. Of the 42,542 votes it cast in the 1938 congressional election, Beam received 61,504 as against only 18,962 for the Republican, Dominic M. Janee Jr. Beam's margin was even more decisive in 1936, when he polled 69,931 of the district's record total of 86,522 votes, his G. O. P. rival, Mrs. Irene A. Tomas, getting only 16,591.

Sabath Victory Probable.

In the 5th district, Congressman Adolph J. Sabath, incumbent since 1906, is expected to win in spite of his growing unpopularity. This anomaly is ascribed to the intrenchment of the Sabath machine in the easily controled 5th, one of the smallest districts in the state and which has come to be known as the most notorious of the "rotten boroughs."

Whatever G. O. P. standard bearing is done will be the task of Martin Dykema, an obscure political henchman of Ald. William V. Pacelli [20th]. Dykema was an unsuccessful candidate in the congressional primary two years ago, running a poor second to Max Price. This year he received 2,318 votes, while Sabath, faced with fairly strong opposition, received 29,327.

The 5th has not had a Republican representative since 1904, when Anthony Michalek was chosen to succeed James McAndrews, just nosing out the Democratic aspirant, Charles J. Vopicka. Two years ago Sabath's plurality was 21,262 out of a total of 42,946 votes. In 1936 it was 24,767 out of a total of 45,274 votes, the highest total ever counted in the district.

Dairyman Seeks Place.

In the large 6th district, which includes most of the western suburbs an da large slice of the southwest side, the Republican fight is being waged by Joseph Wagner, Berwyn dairyman who has openly fought the milk marketing schemes of the Roosevelt administration.

Wagner's man sized job is to wrest the place from Congressman Anton F. Maciejewski, Cicero coal dealer, who was installed solidly in it two years ago when Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien quit to run for sheriff. Wagner can count on carrying most of the suburbs, but he faces much harder sledding in the heavily Democratic west side Chicago wards.

The 6th has had only two Republican congressmen. One was the famous William Lorimer, who held the seat from 1902 to 1910. The other was John J. Gorman, who won in 1920 and 1924.

Maciejewski beat Robert Isham Randolph two years ago by a vote of 154,818 to 109,031. Two years earlier, when the district cast a record total of 312,211 votes. O'Brien got 204,548 votes to 107,649 for his G. O. P. challenger, Frederick A. Virkus.

Schuetz vs. Moreland.

In the large and populous 7th district, with more than six times the population of the 1st, the fight is between Leonard W. Schuetz, who has occupied the seat since 1930, and former Ald. James C. Moreland, who was the nominee against Schuetz in 1930, 1936, and 1938.

Schuetz, who reputedly has never made a campaign speech, again de-

Voice of the West Side

Readers of the Metropolitan Section are invited to contribute to this column on matters of neighborhood interest. Readers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Full names and addresses must be given. No manuscripts will be returned. Address Voice of the West Side, The Tribune.

PLEA FOR SAM'S MUSEUM.

Anent the article in the Metropolitan section regarding Sam Bornstein's miniature museum at the Jewish People's institute, I wish to voice my disapproval at what the institute authorities are contemplating. I feel that I am speaking for practically all of the intelligentsia in this vicinity when I say that to compel Mr. Bornstein to "pack up and leave" would indeed be a blow to the civic and educational pride of the community.

His interesting display has served to enlighten and entertain many a visitor for seven years, and to compel the curator to leave now is certainly an act of ingratitude, considering the effort and time spent by the humble tailor to assemble the unusual exhibit. J. C.

WANTS CLEANER ALLEYS.

Recently it was announced that the city council proposed a comparatively small appropriation to exterminate the rats from the city. This proposal is good and is worthy of commendation. The condition existing, however, could have been prevented if the aldermen would look after the cleanliness of the wards they represent.

I am sure we could eliminate the rats and other vermin if the council would order a more frequent removal of garbage from the alleys. In a recent tour of the 31st ward of which I am a resident, I found the alleys very dirty and the many garbage receptacles overfilled with garbage. C. J. T.

THE NOISY WEST SIDE.

The daily pounding west side residents take in the way of incessant noise is not so terrible as the fact that so little is ever done to lessen the noise. Railroad engines, street cars, autos, fire engines, newsboys, ice cream peddlers keep up a din for the full 24 hours. There are even those who say they don't like quiet, but psychologists show that the nerves are always aware of noise and its wearing effect. The city needs an antinoise checkup as much as it needed the antismoke cleanup. E. D. PETERSON.

MAP STRATEGY IN VOTE FIGHT FOR ASSEMBLY

G. O. P. Hopes to Gain a Real Majority.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

West section candidates for the state legislature last week began mapping battle strategy for the Nov. 5 election which will decide whether the Republican "paper majority" in the house of representatives will be increased to a real working majority. This section offers the G. O. P. chances to gain two house seats.

William G. Thon.

There are seven legislative districts on the west side which have two Democrats and one Republican representing them in Springfield, but in these the G. O. P. surrendered without a struggle to the party in power. Senatorial committees decided not to attempt to elect two Republicans in these districts—the 2nd, 9th, 15th, 17th, 19th, 21st, and 27th.

In this way the trio of nominees in each of the seven districts was practically elected in the April primary. Aside from the slight chance of write-in campaigns, the candidates will walk into office without a contest on Nov. 5.

Only Paper Majority.

For the first time since 1930 the Republicans gained a majority in the house two years ago, when 79 G. O. P. members and 74 Democrats were elected. But because half a dozen so-called Republicans from the river wards were loyal to the party in power, this edge became known as a "paper majority" which could not carry out Republican policies.

Contest districts where Republicans are trying to gain house seats are the 23d, which includes Oak Park, the 31st ward and parts of wards 26, 32, 36, and 37, and the 14th district, composed of Kane and Kendall counties. The Democrats will attempt to win an additional house member in the 41st district, made up of DuPage and Will counties.

Sales tax reduction, parole reform, and old age pensions are among the problems which probably will be acted upon by the lawmakers in Springfield. Therefore, citizens were warned by Representative William G. Thon [R., Oak Park] not to permit foreign affairs to distract their attention from duty at the polls.

Voters Are Warned.

"Americans who worry about what is happening to democracy in Europe had better do some worrying about democracy in their home territory," Thon said. "Our first job is to guard our rights as Americans in our own back yards.

"Democracy will prove its success in solving our problems only if we elect efficient public servants on Nov. 5. It is by no means too early for citizens to turn their attention to their duty of improving the administration of state and national governments thru the election."

Following are the candidates for the house in the west section, with present office holders indicated by asterisks [*]. In contest districts the three top vote getters will win the house seats, with pay of $5,000 a biennium.

He said some of the food has been grown in WPA gardens around Chicago and canned in WPA canning projects. The school board started serving surplus commodity lunches in certain schools last year.

BEG YOUR PARDON

A story on Aug. 25 on the antilitter campaign of the park district referred to Mrs. Bertha Van Wakeman as president of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Van Wakeman has not been president of the federation since January, 1939. Mrs. Park Q. Wray is the president now.

G.O.P. STEPS UP TEMPO SEEKING CONGRESS SEATS

Hopes Best in 7th and 11th Districts.

pends on machine support to pull him thru. Moreland, a sage campaigner, is leaving nothing to chance, but has already begun to whittle away at the 30,681 plurality Schuetz received two years ago. He is making capital of the growing dissatisfaction with Schuetz's do-nothing record in congress.

Voters of the 7th amassed 354,819 congressional votes in 1938, when Schuetz polled 192,750 and Moreland 162,069. A record number of votes was established in the 1936 election, when 420,714 votes were tallied. Of these, Schuetz received 248,835 and Moreland 158,755.

The 7th is known as a traditionally Republican district. Only one Democrat before Schuetz has ever represented it. That was Frank Buchanan, who was elected in 1910, 1912, and 1914, when schisms split the G. O. P.

Hopes Slight in 8th.

There seems little likelihood of a Republican victory this year in the 8th district, which has been represented continuously since 1932 by Leo Kocialkowski, a Democrat. His challenger is Anthony V. Champagne, a lawyer who tried vainly for the G. O. P. nomination for congressman in 1934, and who two years later was elected an alternate delegate to the Republican national convention.

The 8th district is one of the smallest in Illinois. It has a population of about 138,000 and the number has been decreasing steadily since the turn of the century. It cast 42,263 ballots two years ago, and 43,849 in the last Presidential election. Kocialkowski receiving more than three-fourths of the vote each time. It is predominatly Democratic, the G. O. P. electing only one congressman, Charles McGavin, winner in 1904 and 1906.

Tame Race in 11th.

Another tame race is getting off to a slow start in the 11th district, which takes in the ring of counties that hem Cook and Lake against Lake Michigan—Will, Du Page, Kane, and McHenry. The 11th is one of the four districts in the state that has never elected a Democrat to the national lower house.

The armchair experts are saying that the Democratic nominee, Edgar O. Eakin, Elgin attorney, doesn't stand the ghost of a chance of unseating Congressman Chauncey W. Reed of West Chicago, in spite of his wide circle of friends and supporters.

Reed has been the incumbent since 1934, when he nosed out the Democratic nominee by only 721 votes, but has since boosted the plurality to 45,689 in 1936.

HOME IN SUBURB EMERGES IN NEW BRIGHTER DRESS

Traces of Mission Oak Era All Discarded.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Very tangible values are evident in the recently modernized home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Casey in Park Ridge. It is a piece of work which has solved a host of problems—the type of problems that confront a host of people. In this lie both its news interest and its remodeling interest.

The architect, W. F. McCaughey, Pickwick building, Park Ridge, inspected the original house carefully from the standpoint of practical renovations and alterations before Mr. and Mrs. Casey decided to buy.

There was no great risk involved structurally, since the house was basically sound. Nor was there any uncertainty as far as the site was concerned. The house stood on a handsome corner lot with spreading elms and hawthorns, ironwoods and maples. There were cherry and pear trees at the back and honeysuckles at the front. It was a site which needed expert landscaping, since nature had been allowed to run riot in masses of shrubs and vines and flowers. But a wealth of possibilities was there.

Beamed Mission Oak.

On other points Mr. and Mrs. Casey were not so sure. Could the house be made over so it would be really satisfying?

It would need a new overcoat. No doubt of that, for its exterior walls were drab and in need of repair. The roof called for added protection against the elements, and inside there were eight very nondescript rooms. The old living room was finished in mission oak with beamed ceiling, and light bulbs at the intersections. The walls were a dreary chocolate brown, the windows were small, and the kitchen and pantry definitely belonged to a past era. Mrs. Casey felt that if ever an interior were afflicted with room-atism, it was the interior of that house.

But then, slowly and surely, things began to happen. The exterior walls were covered with a new overcoat of 10 inch white siding. A new roof, a deep red shade, was laid, and the columns at the front were covered with heavy 2 inch fluting.

Mrs. Casey felt that she did not wish to have the front porch ripped off. It was a large and comfortable porch. [Attractive, too, now that its walls have been painted white and its floor a clear gray. It is well screened and there are plenty of women who will agree with Mrs. Casey.

The original living room was given more light by a picture window on one outside wall. At the far end of the room, on the fireside wall, old book cases were torn out and well balanced windows built. The fireplace was handsomely transformed, the walls of the room carried out in a soft green, and the woodwork and ceiling beams painted white. Radiators were inclosed and the floor carpeted in a deep shade of plum.

Beams Painted White.

The dining room now acknowledges quite as great a change of face. The ceiling beams were painted white, the walls covered with a blue paper stunningly patterned in silver, and in one corner there is a captivating cabinet with a collection of pitchers from all over the world.

Modern lighting was installed thruout the house and the kitchen is a true homemaker's workshop, "a private office," and a thing of beauty. The old pantry is now a gay and sparkling breakfast room with cream paper figured in red on the wall, and with the inside of wall shelves and cupboards also in red. This lively color is carried into the kitchen and seen on the counters and work surfaces as well as in the linoleum, which is red and black.

Begin Registration.

Registration for the West Suburban Hebrew and Sunday schools, Oak Park, begins today. The schools are under the supervision of Rabbi Israel H. Weisfeld. High school classes will be held during the week instead of on Sunday.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 16.

Autumn flowering perennials should not be transplanted until early spring, but spring flowering kinds can be moved safely during autumn. A perennial border can be made now; spread a layer of decayed manure over the surface of the ground and spade under. The soil should be well drained. Allow the spaded area to settle and in the meantime work up a planting plan and buy the stock. A plan saves money, time, and labor.

Do not use too many kinds, but include some bulbous plants for groups in various sections, the lower plants in front and the tall ones in the rear.

Before severe weather comes lay in a good supply of material for mulching the border and bulb beds. Use materials that are free from weed seeds. Mow all weeds in the immediate area to remove insects or spots where they may lay eggs. Mow the vacant lot adjoining and save a lot of trouble later on.

Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Plant peonies now to enable them to become established before severe weather. Plant in a sunny spot and not too deep. Use good, rich soil, but avoid the use of manure at the roots.

Do not use too many peonies on the small grounds or they will dominate; two or three are plenty for small areas. Siberian and Japanese iris can still be planted. Tulips can be planted up to cold weather,

Wednesday, Sept. 18.

If only one or two trees are to be planted, go to the nursery and select good ones. A tree with a well developed root system, without a crouch, and with a good, well formed head, costs a bit more, but will occupy no more space and will require less care than a poor plant. Do not use too many trees on a restricted area.

Thursday, Sept. 19.

Plants that are to be removed indoors should be moved immediately or sudden weather changes may affect them, causing the leaves to turn yellow and fall. Geraniums should be dug before frost and stored in the cool cellar or basement; they will not bloom if potted before spring.

Palms, cacti, and other tender plants should be repotted if the pots have become broken, but cacti are best potted in spring. Buy a good fern, young geranium, sansevieria, aspidistra, small palm, philodendron, or other plant to grow on.

Friday, Sept. 20.

Remember to pot up small plants of pot marigolds, the dwarf asters, lantanas, petunias, bedding begonias, and others, for they will furnish good flowers for a long time. By potting now, they will become well established before cold weather. Watch for insects and spray if any are seen.

Divide the bleeding heart now. Seeds of hardy annuals may be sown now for early spring flowering. Remove cacti to the house before cold weather. Give them a sunny location. Plant the minor bulbous plants as soon as possible. These include the snowdrops, scillas, glory-of-the-snow, and others. They are fine when used in colonies, and are hardy.

Make a habit of syringing at intervals and the plants will keep in good condition.

Saturday, Sept. 21.

When potting, do not overpot by planting a small plant in a pot out of proportion to the size of the root system. Overpotting may result in overwatering. Water newly potted plants sparingly until well established. When transplanting, the soil should be packed closely about all roots. This applies to both outdoor and indoor planting.

Use the fingers and work the soil in and between the roots until the soil is in contact with each one, and continue until the pot is full or within a quarter inch of the top of the pot, depending on the size of the pot. Save all leaves that are not insect infested for the compost pile.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

Enters Goose in Pet Show

Little Miss Marion Brown, 735 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park, may have stepped out of a book of nursery rhymes. But she is a real little girl and so is her goose. When the call came for boys and girls to enter their dogs in the Friday pet show of the Oak Park playgrounds, it was discovered that dogs are not the only animals beloved to small owners. Some have turtles and goldfish. Some have canary birds and cats. Marion has a goose and the goose is entered in the eighth annual show which will be held in the Barrie playground, Lombard avenue and Garfield street.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my life I had heard that horsemanship was the sport of kings. It was a bit surprising, therefore, to find that here in the Chicago area it is by no means limited to royalty, nor even to the very wealthy or the well-to-do.

Thanks chiefly to the forest preserves, the Chicago parks, and the sanitary district, public horseback riding facilities are accessible to Chicagoland people of all walks of life. Thanks to the swiftly growing popularity of the sport, the cost of riding has come down well within the means of all but the very poor.

Having learned the fundamentals of riding, I found available to me a wide range of methods of purchasing my riding.

Get What You Pay For.

Most stables have livery horses, which are rented out to riders at prices ranging from $1.50 or $2 an hour down to the approximate cost of renting a bicycle. In riding, as in most other commercial transactions, you get just about what you pay for, I found from actual experience.

At the higher priced academies I found such advantages as immaculately clean stables, spacious and comfortable club and restroom facilities, and the companionship of genteel men, women, and youngsters.

Horses there represent the cream of the sport. Attendants are efficient, reliable, and courteous. Saddles, bridles, and other equipment are of highest quality, kept clean and in safe condition. Usually indoor arenas are provided.

Such refinements, of course, cost the stable owner more, and he must pass the financial burden along or go bankrupt.

For those who must figure their recreational budget more carefully there are numerous less pretentious stables where the livery fees are, generally speaking, commensurate with the services and environment provided.

Some Offer Night Rides.

The lower one descends in the price scale the fewer niceties of livery riding he finds and the more he is surrounded by the reckless riders who treat their mounts as callously as automobiles and violate most of the rules of the trail.

Many stable owners offer night rides and Sunday morning breakfast rides at special low rates. These are a boon to those whose employment makes it impossible for them to ride during the day.

Outright ownership of horses is on the increase hereabouts, stablemen report. These private horses usually are boarded, groomed, and exercised at established stables.

In some stables it is possible to select a horse from the livery string, and by payment of a special fee reserve it for oneself exclusively by the month.

Club Riding Grows.

This practice has numerous advantages for the rider. It gives him the mount of his own choice, yet does not involve the responsibilities and initial cost of ownership. The stable furnishes saddle, bridle, and pad, and assumes all care of the mount.

Club riding is another growing practice. Members pay regular fees, in return for which they get generous use of a group of semi-private horses, plus expert instruction without additional cost.

One Chicago area stable owner has elaborated on the club plan to the point where he has graded his riders according to their ability, maintaining a group of horses for each class, and awarding promotions to the better riders. Members of his club are required to take regular riding instruction.

MEXICAN PARADE TO WEND THRU STREETS TODAY

A parade of floats in the manner of fiesta time will circle thru the streets of the near west side this afternoon as men and women of Mexican descent celebrate Mexico's independence from Spain. The parade will begin at Halsted and Polk streets.

Arrangements for the celebration, which will end with a feast and dance this evening in the Ashland auditorium, Ashland boulevard and Van Buren street, were made by the El Comite-Patriotico, of which Miguel Avina is president.

The parade will be the first since 1928, when decorated floats proclaimed Miguel Hidalgo the Father of Mexican independence. Club Juarez was the leader in the float contest.

Mexican merchants in the area will be each represented by a float. Singing and dancing on the streets will make up the remainder of the program.

Kayaks in Regatta.

West side kayak owners will participate in a regatta at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Diversey beach, Lincoln park. The schedule will include eight regular novelty events.

A GREAT ACTOR TO HELP LAUNCH W-G-N PROGRAM

Laughton Takes Lead in "Ode to Chicago."

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A great actor comes to town this week to play the leading rôle in a special W-G-N-Mutual broadcast—the world première of "Ode to Chicago" which is to be presented as the opening production of the 1940-'41 season. His name is Charles Laughton.

Just nine years ago Charles Collins, conductor of A Line O'Type or Two and then dramatic critic of THE TRIBUNE, prefaced a story of an actor, comparatively unknown, with the words, "A great actor came to town last week. . . . His name is Charles Laughton."

A bit further down in the article Mr. Collins observed, "Mr. Laughton appears to be one actor in a generation, and his arrival is something to celebrate."

That was in December, 1931. Mr. Laughton had come to Chicago without fanfare in "Payment Deferred," a grim melodrama of shabby middle class life, which was no smash hit. In the intervening years Laughton's notable work in the theater, in pictures and on the air have endeared him to the American people. His stature has risen steadily until his return to Chicago to help W-G-N launch the most important season in its history is "something to celebrate."

Unique Radio Creation.

"Ode to Chicago" is a unique radio creation. Employing drama, poetry, an original musical score and sound effects and other devices peculiar to radio, this production crystalizes the story and spirit of Chicago. The show will be aired before an invited audience—a first night audience of social and civic leaders of Chicago—from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening. It will be broadcast over the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

During the broadcast Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the president of W-G-N will speak, setting forth the basic ideals of public service and the comprehensive program plans of W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Builds Career in 12 Years.

Charles Laughton has built his phenomenal career as an actor in twelve years. While he showed a propensity for dramatics as a child it was not until 1928 that he got his first stage rôle. He had served in the army during the world war and later was a clerk in Claridge's hotel. It looked for many years as tho his mother's greatest fear that he "would end up on the stage" would not be realized. Finally he landed a small part in "The Government Inspector." Once started he lost no time in making his way into the front rank of London actors.

While playing in "Mr. Prohack" he married Elsa Lanchester, British actress. She played one of the wives in "Henry VIII.," the picture which won the Academy award for Laughton. Miss Lanchester will accompany her husband to Chicago this week.

Guest on W-G-N

Charles Laughton, the distinguished British actor, as he appears in the new R-K-O picture, "They Knew What They Wanted." Laughton will come from Hollywood to play the leading part in "Ode to Chicago," a special musical dramatic program which will introduce W-G-N's fall season from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

President's Power to Be Review Stands' Topic

"How Much Power to the President?"—a discussion of the varied aspects of intelligent and efficient administration of the national defense program—will be presented on the Northwestern University Reviewing Stand from 10:15 to 10:30 a. m. this morning over W-G-N and the Mutual network. Kenneth W. Colegrove, chairman of the department of political science, and Lane W. Lancaster, professor in political science, will be speakers.

Air Training Chief Speaks on Aviation Hour Today

Brig. Gen. Jacob E. Fickel, who is in charge of the United States Army air training, and Lieut. R. F. Schirmer, who has just been transferred to Mitchell field in New York after graduating from Randolph Field, Texas, will be guests on the Wings Over America broadcast at 11:30 a. m. today over WMAQ. The broadcast will explain how the army air cadets are chosen and trained under actual combat conditions.

OPERA FINALE HIGHLIGHT OF SYMPHONIC HOUR

Ruth Slater, Mark Love to Join Marion Claire.

The finale of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," sung by Marion Claire, W-G-N's prima donna, Ruth Slater, young Chicago contralto, and Mark Lve, basso, will highlight the W-G-N Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening.

Opening the hour with the overture to "Egmont," by Beethoven the orchestra also will play the coronation scene and Polonaise from "Boris Godounow," by Moussorgsky, and a polka from the "Gollen Age" ballet, by Shostakovitch. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, in the presentation of the Moussorgsky number.

Miss Claire will present three solos in addition to her part in the Offenbach opera selections. She will sing "Allerseelan," by Richard Strauss, "Floods of Spring," by Sergei Rachmaninoff, and the addio from the third act of "La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini.

The complete program:

Overture to Egmont..............Beethoven
Orchestra.
[a] Allerseelan ....Richard Strauss
[b] Floods of Spring..........Rachmaninoff
Coronation scene and Polonaise from Boris Godounow..........Moussorgsky
Chorus and orchestra.
Addio from third act of La Boheme...Puccini
Marion Claire and orchestra.
Speech ....
Col. Robert R. McCormick.
Polka from "Golden Age" ballet.... ....Shostakovitch
Tales of Hoffmann..............Offenbach
Marion Claire, Ruth Slater, Mark Love, chorus and orchestra.

The contralto part in Jacques Offenbach's opera fantastique will mark Miss Slater's second appearance as a featured singer on W-G-N. As one of five finalists in the Chicago Opera talent search, she sang in a special audition broadcast over W-G-N last July 8. She so impressed Mr. Weber, musical director of W-G-N, that he decided to present her on the Symphonic Hour.

Miss Slater received most of her musical education at the University of Illinois. After her graduation in 1933, she moved to Chicago where she has appeared in concerts and at oratorio societies.

The Symphonic Hour is under the direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Cecil Smith of the music and drama department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE writes musical commentary for the program.

HALL OF SPORT PITS LISTENERS AGAINST EXPERTS

A three round sparring match between listeners and sporting experts—with wits the weapons instead of leathered fists—will be featured on the Hall of Sport 8:30 to 9 p. m. next Wednesday over W-G-N. This unique sports quiz will move to a regular 9:30 to 10 p. m. spot the following Wednesday.

Each week a board of four experts—three regulars and a guest—will stand up to sports questions sent in by listeners and slug, or be slugged, as the case may be. The program will be divided into three "rounds," with a regular ringside gong opening and closing each round. A question answered correctly scores a point for the experts; failure to answer chalks up a point for listeners. The blow by blow score will be tabulated at the end of each Wednesday's battle.

Listeners will receive two dollars for every question used, four dollars if the experts fail to answer correctly. A studio audience will have ringside seats for the mental sparring matches.

Referee in the battle between experts and listeners will be Doug Hope. Doug will toss the questions at the experts and will see that no verbal foul blows are committed.

Permanent board of experts will be Marvin McCarthy, sports editor of the Times; Ed Cochrane, sports editor of the Herald-American, and Herb Graffis, editor of Golfdom and Golfing Magazine.

Charles Sears Will Sing Ballads, Old Favorites

Charles Sears, young tenor, will sing romantic ballads and oldtime favorites on Your Treat, musical variety program presented from 10 to 10:15 a. m. Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays over W-G-N. Your Treat also features Harry Kogen, violinist, composer, and conductor, and his string orchestra. Vincent Pelletier is master of ceremonies for the program.

NEIGHBORS UNITE FOR YARDS FAIR

DRAW UP LINES FOR CONGRESS SEAT BATTLES

G.O.P. Centers Fight in 3 Districts.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

A return to the bang-up scraps of earlier years loomed last week as principals prepared for the congressional election campaign in the six districts that embrace the south and southwest sides.

Heartened by the increasing G. O. P. strength being reflected in their districts and thruout the nation, the Republican candidates in most of the districts expressed confidence of their ability to carry the election on Nov. 5.

That these predictions are carrying more significance than in previous years is evident from the concern being shown by most of the Democratic incumbents. Plans for active campaigns are being made even by those who have depended entirely on organization support in the immediate past.

All Incumbents in Race.

The districts that include south side territory are the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 6th, and 11th. Only the 11th is held by the Republicans, and it is expected to remain in their custody. There is reason to believe that Democratic occupancy of the 1st, 2d, and 3d districts is much less secure than formerly. The incumbents are seeking reëlection in all six of the southerly districts.

In the predominantly colored 1st district, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, ardent New Dealer, faces a battle from Former Senator William E. King. Mitchell is counting strongly upon the relief vote to maintain him in the office he has held since 1934, but King has a large personal following that may do much to overcome this advantage.

The 1st district has a population of about 140,000, most of it concentrated in the close packed tenements and old mansions of the near south side. A smattering reside in the hotels of the loop and nearby downtown section, which it also embraces.

[illegible] Votes in 1938.

Two years ago the district cast 56,603 votes, 30,207 for Mitchell and 26,396 for William L. Dawson, then a Republican but since turned Democrat. In the Presidential election of 1936 the district cast 64,208 ballots, an all-time high, of which Mitchell was given 35,376 and former Congressman Oscar DePriest, the G. O. P. nominee, 28,640.

In the 19 congressional elections since the district was carved out in the last reapportionment in 1901, Democrats triumphed only once before Mitchell was first elected. That was in 1902 when Martin Emerich nosed out Martin B. Madden, who retaliated by winning the next 12 elections.

In the 2d district the struggle is between a congressman and a former congressman. The Republican, former Representative Patrick H. Moynihan, has squared off against Congressman Raymond S. McKeough, faithful New Deal yes man, and there are many who insist Moynihan has better than an even chance to win.

Voted Against Dies.

McKeough has been widely criticized both for his inactivity and for his wooing of radical elements. He was one of five Illinois congressmen who voted against continuation of the Dies inquiry into un-American activities.

His foes are hopeful that the district will return this year to the Republican fold, from which it had never strayed before 1934, the year Moynihan was unseated by McKeough after one term in office.

Two years ago McKeough got 129,620 votes to 108,483 for the Republican, Noble W. Lee. This was a much smaller plurality than he had in 1936, when he polled 163,198 votes while Moynihan was gathering 130,197.

In the 3d district Congressman Edward A. Kelly, Democratic incumbent since 1930, faces a determined rival in the person of Waldemar J. Roehler, former west parks commissioner.

Largest Vote in 1934.

Kelly rolled up his highest plurality in 1934, when he downed his G. O. P. challenger, Frank M. Fulton, 122,109 to 70,329. Two years later he repeated his defeat of Fulton to the tune of 156,425 to 106,300. In 1938 the Republican, Goodwin L. Dosland, cut Kelly's plurality to 27,240, getting 100,357 votes to Kelly's 127,597.

The 4th district race is a one-sided affair, not even the most optimistic G. O. P. supporters seriously claiming a chance for the Republican candidate, Henry F. Schmudde, against Representative Harry P. Beam, incumbent since 1930. Schmudde has practically no political background, while Beam is widely known and generally liked thruout his district.

The 4th has an almost unbroken Democratic history. The only Republican it ever sent to congress was Charles S. Wharton, who slid in in 1904 because of the absorption of

Back of The Yards Council Will Open Neighborhood Fair Friday

Every Thursday's the day there's much ado in Davis square fieldhouse at 45th street and Marshfield avenue for it's the time the Infant Welfare organization of the Back of the Yards Neighborhood council examines the youngest residents of the area. On Thursday, Sept. 26, the regular examinations will be for the healthiest baby trophy and 50 ribbons being offered in connection with the Stockyards fair which begins Friday in the playground at 47th street and Damen avenue. A likely contestant is Laurence Puchalski, 4818 South Loomis avenue, who is 11½ months old. Watching Laurence get weighed is Miss Helen Ryan, a secretary assisting with fair plans and a first rate candidate for the beauty queen contest planned for a week from Sunday. The nurse is Miss June Hall of the Infant Welfare. Back of the yards section prides itself on the many nationality groups living there side by side. Monday evening, Sept. 23, will be Nationality night, and young and old Americans of foreign birth and descent will vie for a trophy to be presented to the individual wearing the most attractive native costume. Miss Shirley Martinez, one of the many senoritas who reside back o' the yards, will come dressed in her Mexican costume. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

There is such a thing as doing a job too well. That's what 12 year old Dean Griffith, the esteemed treasurer of the Hawks Gra-Y club, is thinking these days. He's pretty sure about it, in fact.

Historically, the whole situation goes back to those first glorious school's-out days last June. Dean, as treasurer of the Gra-Y's, a Beverly Y. M. C. A. club for lads his age, was entrusted with the club's $2.49 for the summer. Now $2.49 is $2.49, and Dean figured he should be pretty careful about every penny of it. The other fellows in the club sort of suggested he should take good care of the $2.49, too.

Foils Would-be Burglars.

A fellow can hide club funds in his room, but he might have a burglar some night. A fellow can put club funds in a bank, but withdrawing the money is a lot of writing on important looking slips, and a lot of nuisance. Especially if a fellow wants just part of the money, for instance 9 cents from $2.49.

Finally Dean hit upon the classic system of guarding treasure. He buried it. He buried it deep; he buried it well. He didn't even tell where he put it. He didn't tell even his mother or his best friend. He even let the whole thing slip his own mind. And now the Gra-Y Hawks are clamoring for the $2.49, and Dean can't for the life of him recall where it is.

Memory Fails Him.

He thinks it's somewhere in his own back yard at 9931 South Seeley avenue; he isn't too sure. He can't recall whether it's under one of the shrubs or under one of the little evergreen trees; whether it's over by the garage or along the fence of the dog run. Meanwhile, his friends, armed with shovels and sticks, are cultivating the neighborhood grounds in dirt farmer fashion. If stirring up the soil aids growth, there should be a good crop of something or other in the vicinity of 9931 South Seeley avenue.

Republican Women.

The South Side Republican Woman's club will meet at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at 413 West Englewood avenue. Mrs. W. G. Suthers and Mrs. T. K. Renaker will speak.

LINDBLOM GRADUATE WINS AWARD IN ELKS SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST

William L. Langbauer, 2049 West 47th street, will receive an honorable mention award won in the annual scholarship contest conducted by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks thru the Elks National Foundation. Presentation of the award will be made in special ceremonies at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Chicago [South] lodge, 6156 Cottage Grove avenue, Langbauer's sponsoring organization. Four scholarships and eight honorable mentions are awarded annually by the Elks Foundation to young men and women in the United States and territorial possessions. The honorable mention award carries a substantial sum of money to apply to college training. Langbauer finished at Lindblom High school.

LEGION TO OPEN NEW QUARTERS NEXT SATURDAY

Darius-Girenas Memorial building, recently completed at 4416 South Western avenue, will be dedicated with programs Saturday night and Sunday arranged by Darius-Girenas post of the American Legion. Saturday night a dance will be held in the new $50,000 structure. There will be a parade at 2 o'clock Sunday with Legion posts of the 4th district taking part.

The post honors the names of Capt. Stephen Darius and Lieut. Stanley Girenas, who were killed when their plane crashed in Germany during a trans-Atlantic airplane flight in 1935.

Funds for the building, first of its kind in the Chicago area, were raised by donations from Lithuanians of Chicago, members of the post, and business men of New Brighton community. It provides lodge halls, a first aid station, a library, and a meeting place for the post. B. R. Pietkiewicz is chairman of the building committee. Officers of the post are William B. Sebastian, commander; Joseph A. Kibort, adjutant, and William J. Kareiva, finance officer.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

RECENT celebrants of 50th wedding anniversaries were Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Elliott, 6524 South Justine street. Mr. Elliott was born 76 years ago in London, Ont., and Mrs. Elliott, 73, was born in Sarnia, Ont. They both came to Chicago soon after their marriage and first lived at 57th and Green streets. They have resided on the south side ever since. They are the parents of seven daughters and two sons and have six grandchildren. Their hobby is gardening and their summer home in Union Pier, Mich., is noted for its beautiful flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Schwab, 5352 South Laflin street, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary a few days ago with an open house. The couple have six children. The oldest son is the Rev. Francis Germain, a member of the Franciscan order. He served at the altar as subdeacon at the mass said in honor of the occasion.

William A. Hayes, 6345 University avenue, was recently announced as winner of a scholarship to De Paul university. William is starting his junior year at the school and won the scholarship on the basis of his scholastic record. Another winner of a scholarship to the university was John Edward Gallagher, 7216 Rhodes avenue. He was awarded the honor for being the outstanding cadet at the Citizens' Military Training camp at Fort Sheridan. John will work toward a law degree and will enter the liberal arts college.

THE administrative office of the United States courts announced the appointment of Victor H. Evjen, 934 East 81st street, as assistant chief of the United States probation system. Mr. Evjen took over his new duties a few days ago. He has been affiliated with the probation and parole office in Chicago for the last four years. He will continue to work as managing editor of the Federal Probation Quarterly, a journal devoted to all phases of delinquency and crime problems. In his new post Mr. Evjen will assist in administering, standardizing, and coordinating the work of probation offices in 92 federal courts.

The last month saw a flood of anniversary celebrations for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blank, 10546 Avenue J, and their relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Blank observed their silver wedding on Aug. 12. Mrs. Blank's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Ricketts, 10510 Avenue J, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary a few weeks before. Mrs. Blank's brother, James R. Ricketts, 10338 Ewing avenue, had his silver wedding Aug. 21.

Capt. Thomas J. Martin of truck 49 of the fire department, who lives at 7313 Kingston avenue, recently was made captain of engine company 46 at 93d street and South Chicago avenue. Capt. Martin replaced Capt. William O'Grady, who retired after 37 years as a member of the fire force.

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Shapira, 5327 Dorchester avenue, observed their 50th wedding anniversary recently. They live with their daughter, Mrs. Jacob Block. Mrs. David Crohn, Dr. Charles Shapira, Dr. Theodore Shapira, and Jerome Shapira, their other children, were present.

BOYS, 8 AND 10, PROVE WINNERS AS GARDENERS

Daniel and Omer Beshir are 8 and 10 years old, respectively, but they're sweepstakes winners. The sons of Dr. and Mrs. N. R. Beshir, 11057 South Hoyne avenue, they have raised the outstanding children's garden in the entire community according to judges from the Beverly Y. M. C. A., the children's garden sponsor in Beverly.

The boys grew 25 different kinds of flowers. They built winding pathways thru the rows of blooms and they engineered an irrigating system. Their top soil is ashes, but they managed to produce bachelor buttons, asters, petunias, poppies, sweet williams, and other delicate blossoms.

Daniel can name the varieties in rapid fire fashion while doing a fast tour of his plantings. The boys had a couple of assistants in Mildred, 5, and Marilyn, 4, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leland S. Ford, the neighbors.

Highland Business Group Prepares for Dinner Dance

The Highland District Business Men's association will hold a dinner dance Wednesday, Sept. 26, at the Ridge Country club. An afternoon of golf is on the program. Dr. Edmund M. Glavin, 1535 West 79th street, is chairman of the event.

TWO SOUTHWEST SIDE AIR CADETS ADVANCE TO PURSUIT GROUP

Lieut. James K. Dowling and Lieut. William D. Chalek are former Chicagoans now training at Moffett field in California. Dowling, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Dowling of 3341 South Western boulevard, reported for active duty in tactical training at the California air field after completing the United States army flying cadet courses at Randolph and Kelly fields in Texas. He is an alumnus of De La Salle high school and attended St. Mary's college in Winona, Minn., and the University of Illinois.

Lieut. Dowling.

Lieut. Chalek.

Chalek is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Chalek of 7318 South Oakley avenue. He was graduated from Lindblom High school where he was president of the honor society, and he attended Central Y. M. C. A. college for three years. Later he went to law school at Northwestern.

Both have been assigned to the 20th Pursuit group. They will be reserve officers on active duty for three years or until they receive regular army commissions after passing one of the annual examinations.

Cisca Alumni to Assemble for Day of Recollection

Miss Jean Hart, 855 East 87th street, is chairman of the Cisca alumni meeting beginning at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Ignatius High school, 1080 West Roosevelt road. The occasion is the autumn Day of Recollection and is being conducted by the Rev. Martin J. Carrabine, S. J., Cisca moderator. Rita Kuhn, 5359 South Justine street, is in charge of arrangements.

Church to Use Ancient Rites in Dedication

Something old, something new, will be the background of next Sunday's dedication of the Russian Orthodox St. Panteleimon church at 7549 West 61st place, Argo-Summit. The something old is the ritual, the gowns of the priests, the deep significance of the litanies that reach back, back into old Russia. The something new is the church home itself in a new land serving Russians who are employed at modern tasks in a modern, industrial America.

The Rev. John Manchuk, rector of St. Panteleimon's, will be in charge of the ceremonies. The dedication ritual will be celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Leonty of Chicago. There will be a procession preceding the formal service at 10:30 o'clock next Sunday morning.

Music on Program.

The service will include music. Russian churchmen from all of Chicagoland and from Milwaukee will be in Summit for the day. After the long rites, they will go to the parish community house, 6100 Archer avenue, for an afternoon of banqueting. Dancing will begin at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The new church home replaces the community house as a place of service. In itself it represents a transfer not likely to occur in Russia. It was formerly the meeting place of a Nazarene congregation and was built by that group 10 years ago. The Nazarenes have a new church.

New Altar and Tower.

An altar and a new tower over the cross have been built to transform the building from a Nazarene to a Russian meeting place. The Russian congregation paid approximately $7,500 for the property, and repairs total $3,000. The building is of brick.

Summit's Russian colony was established about 25 years ago. Its original members were immigrant laborers from Russia or from Austro-Hungary. There are 35 families in the St. Panteleimon parish. The pastor is from Russia, but he has been in America for many years. His son is a former army man and is now on sick leave from service. His wife, a trained nurse, is with the son, who is being treated in Detroit. Two daughters live with their father. The Manchuks have an apartment in the community house.

NEW PLAY LOT WILL BE SCENE OF 11 DAY FETE

Proceeds Will Help Drive on Rats.

BY GLADYS PRIDDY.

Churches, schools, labor organizations, business men, and about every resident of the back of the yards area are coöperating to stage a Stockyards Fair beginning Friday and continuing thru Sept. 30. The fair grounds will be the newly cleaned and equipped play lot at 47th street and Damen avenue.

The more successful the fair, the more garbage cans back of the yards, according to Joseph Meegan, executive secretary of the Back of the Yards Neighborhood council, sponsoring organization. The council will buy the cans in coöperation with the city-wide campaign to eradicate rats by making it impossible for them to reach food.

The year's hot lunch program for grade school children certified from back of the yards neighborhood schools will be another beneficiary of the proceeds.

Bishop to Dedicate Site.

A high point in activities will be reached at 4:30 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, Sept. 29, when Bishop Bernard J. Sheil will dedicate the field site of the fair. The property has been filled in, leveled off, and equipped with playground apparatus by the Back of the Yards council together with contributions from neighborhood business men and NYA and WPA labor.

The first evening, Friday, has been designated labor night. Representatives of the A. F. of L. and of the Packinghouse Workers and the C. I. O. will take part in the ceremonies. Father Bernard Sokolowski, chairman of the fair, will speak at 10 o'clock in the evening on "What Labor Has Contributed to Back of the Yards." Father Sokolowski is from Sacred Heart church.

Saturday evening will be Youth night. The Youth committee of the council will be in charge. Agnes Yucus, Emily, Kawal, Michael Antosiak, Sigmund Wlodarczyk, and Rose Frabus are on this committee. Edward Bushman is president of the Youth committee, and John Zeglin is in charge of publicity.

Trophy for Champions.

Youth night will be dedicated to the 37 young people's clubs in the neighborhood. The champion softball team, the Stiegals, will receive a trophy.

Next Sunday afternoon will be children's day, with the back of the yards merchants providing cut rate tickets to the merry-go-round, ferris wheel, and all the other whirligig rides.

Monday, Sept. 23, will be Nationality Night with all of the 18 nationality groups out in native costumes. There'll be prizes for the best outfits. Among groups that will be represented are Mexican, Polish, Irish, Spanish, Slovak, German, Russian, and Lithuanian.

Republican night falls on Tuesday, Sept. 24, with Michael Ruddy, representative from the 4th district, as the sponsor. Political leaders will be invited to speak.

Date Night Wednesday.

It'll be date night on Wednesday, and the merchants will do their bit to encourage good old-fashioned courtin'. There'll be prizes for all couples announcing their engagements that evening.

Interest will swing over to Davis Square fieldhouse on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 26. There, from 1 until 4 o'clock, the Back of the Yards beauties, ages from practically zero to 3 years old, will compete for healthiest boy and healthiest girl championships. There will be 50 ribbons awarded babies in various classes. That night will be mothers' night at the fair. The baby awards will be announced then.

Other awards will go to the mothers themselves. The one with the greatest number of children will get a prize. So will the mother of the first child born after the fair starts on Sept. 20. Father James J. Rowley of St. Rose of Lima church will be in charge of the mother and baby winners.

Friday, Sept. 27, will be Democratic night with Ald. Bryan Hartnett [12th] as chairman arranging to have all Democrat leaders on hand.

Business Men to Rule.

The next evening will feature the business men with the Chamber of Commerce arranging activities. Jack Finn is president of the chamber, and Miss Gertrude Yore is secretary. A tent, 150 by 80 feet, will house 100 booths thruout the fair period. Local business men have rented space for their exhibits. In addition to the commercial displays, there will be an Infant Welfare booth, a Park district booth, and a Davis Square Branch library exhibit.

Sunday will be dedication day for the field. Bishop Sheil will conduct the ceremonies at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. A parade from the fieldhouse at Davis square, 45th street and Marshfield avenue, to the playground at 47th street and Damen avenue will precede the services. Representatives of the churches, labor, and youth organizations will be in the procession.

Plan Essay Contest.

An essay contest, sponsored by Michael Ruddy and the James J. Zientek post, No. 419, American Legion, will wind up at this service.

PLEA FOR WEED CUTTING.

Will you permit me to "arise in my large white cravat" and ask a very simple question?

I would like to know just why the south and west sides of the city are one mass of obnoxious weeds. At least 90 per cent of hay fever is brought about by rag weed, and notwithstanding this fact this weed, together with many other varieties, has been permitted to flourish for many years. There are in Chicago today thousands of people on relief; many of these people are able bodied and there is not one reason in the world why they should not be put to work at least four hours a day in clearing this city of the weeds and dirt you find almost everywhere. Why not quit spending millions on the lake front, where only a small per cent of the people are benefited, and spend a lot more cleaning up the rest of the city, which is a mass of filth almost beyond belief. There are thousands of people in the city of Chicago today who suffer the most intense agony for weeks, and what is done about it? I am aware of the fact that some "midget" attempts have been made in cutting weeds, but it seems almost unbelievable that the weeds are not outlawed and every effort made to destroy them. They are not only a great menace to health, but harbor rats and all manner of dirt.

Who has a heart for sufferers of hay fever? No one. Instead it is the butt of cheap jokes, often in the papers. And let me tell you that when the time comes that I have to make a living by making smart cracks about some one's intense suffering, then I am thru. W. L. E.

A REPLY TO A PARKING CHARGE.

I would like to reply to W. F. B., whose article appeared last Sunday. I would like to contradict everything he says.

In the first place I am a woman, not a fellow. I do not own a hot dog stand; I live there. My car is not a jalopy; it is worth just as much to me as his car is to him. The car always is parked off the pavement. The stand is on top of the hill, not half way down. It is a frame building and not a log cabin.

And last, but not least, I haven't one little speck of political pull. M. P.

MERGED SCHOOLS OF TECHNOLOGY TO OPEN DOORS

Illinois Inst. to Have 7,300 Students.

The new Illinois Institute of Technology, recently formed by the merger of Armour Institute of Technology and Lewis institute, will open its doors for the first time tomorrow morning. More than 7,300 students are expected to enroll for the day and evening classes.

Dr. C. A. Tibbals. [Marshall Photo.]

The opening will mark the completion of plans begun two years ago for the creation in Chicago of an educational institution that would have the prime objective of serving industry and the community in all branches of engineering, science, architecture, business administration and the arts.

Many in Engineering.

The enrollment, according to institute officials, will be made up of about 4,300 students in engineering who will attend the south side campus or the Armour college of engineering division, 3300 Federal street. The remaining 3,000 enrollees will take up studies in the arts and sciences at the west side campus or Lewis institute.

Until the time when all educational facilities can be concentrated on one campus, all engineering courses will be held on the Armour college of engineering campus. However, between 60 and 100 freshmen engineering students will take their first year of work ot Lewis institute.

Becomes Engineering Dean.

Dr. C. A. Tibbals, 5541 Everitt avenue, formerly dean of undergraduates at Armour, will become dean of the Armour college of engineering. Dr. C. L. Clarke, formerly co-director of Lewis, will be dean of the Lewis Institute of Arts and Sciences.

New teachers at the institute will be John I. Yellot, Dr. R. A. Budenholzer, A. E. Flanigan, Dr. N. O. Myklestad, Dr. Lee R. Wilcox, Dr. Herbert Busemann, Dr. John De Cicco, Dr. W. R. Kanne, Dr. R. I. Sarbacher, Dr. Saul Winstein, and R. J. Mortland.

ASPIRANTS MAP WAR PLANS IN ASSEMBLY RACE

Vote May Give G. O. P. a Real Majority.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Southwest section candidates for the state legislature last week began mapping battle strategy for the Nov. 5 election which will decide whether the Republican "paper majority" in the house of representatives will be increased to a real working majority. This section offers the G. O. P. chances to gain three house seats.

E. J. Schnackenberg.

For the first time since 1930 the Republicans gained a majority in the house two years ago, when 79 G. O. P. members and 74 Democrats were elected. But because a half dozen Republicans from the river wards were loyal only to the party in power, this edge became known as a "paper majority" which was ineffective in carrying out Republican policies.

Sales tax reduction, parole reform and old age pensions are among the important questions expected to demand action before the lawmakers in Springfield. Therefore, citizens are warned by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, outstanding Republican from the 13th district, not to permit foreign affairs to distract their attention from voting duty.

Home Problems First.

"The international situation is vitally interesting to all of us, but there is a real danger that it may cause some citizens to overlook the important duty of using care and good judgment in selecting officials to run our state and national governments," Schnackenberg said.

"While feeling concern over the fate of democracy abroad, we should take pains to do our work as voters better than ever before. This year we must be careful to elect efficient public servants who will demonstrate the success of democracy in solving our problems."

None of the political leaders are disregarding the many ways in which the war colors the election picture of 1940. Three Chicago members of the house are faced with a ruling by the Illinois attorney general that they must resign either as legislators or as officers of the National Guard. One of them, Representative Pierce Shannon [Dem.], has already resigned as a captain. The other two have not decided.

Contests in Four Areas.

The most interesting legislative districts in the southwest section are the 11th, 13th, 14th, and 41st, where there are contests affecting the political balance of the house. In the 3d, 4th, 7th, and 9th districts the candidates were virtually elected in the April primary, with only three candidates on the ticket for three house seats in each district.

An unusual situation exists in one of the "setup" districts, the 3d, where Representative A. Andrew Torrence, certain of renomination, was slain by a disgruntled former precinct worker the day before primary ballots were cast.

Joseph E. Snowden, attorney who was runnerup in number of votes received in the primary, is fighting in the courts for an order compelling the election board to certify him as the nominee in Torrence's place.

The Republican senatorial committee for the 3d district ordinarily would have the power to fill the vacancy. Assuming that Snowden's appeal will be denied by the Illinois Supreme court, the committee last week named Dudley S. Martin, an able orator and precinct captain in the 2d ward, to Torrence's place on the ticket.

Chairman at Picnic.

Representative Charles J. Jenkins [Rep.] of the same district last week was the leader of an event typical of legislative politics at this early stage of the campaign. He was chairman of a committee which gave a picnic attended by 8,000 persons on the lake front between 31st and 35th streets.

Jenkins reported that recent developments in New Deal "Santa Claus" agencies are driving many Negro voters back to the Republican side. The WPA workers who were recently handed 403's [discharge notices] under the 18 months limitation on WPA employment are resentful, he said.

Food Stamps Resented.

Substitution of federal food stamps for cash food allowances has caused hardship for reliefers, who are likely to register their anger at the polls, he said. When they received cash, they were able to forestall eviction by using a portion of the food money to pay rent, when this item was not provided. Now they are unable to make this adjustment and evictions are increasing, he said.

Following are the candidates for the house in the southwest section, with incumbents denoted by asterisks [*].

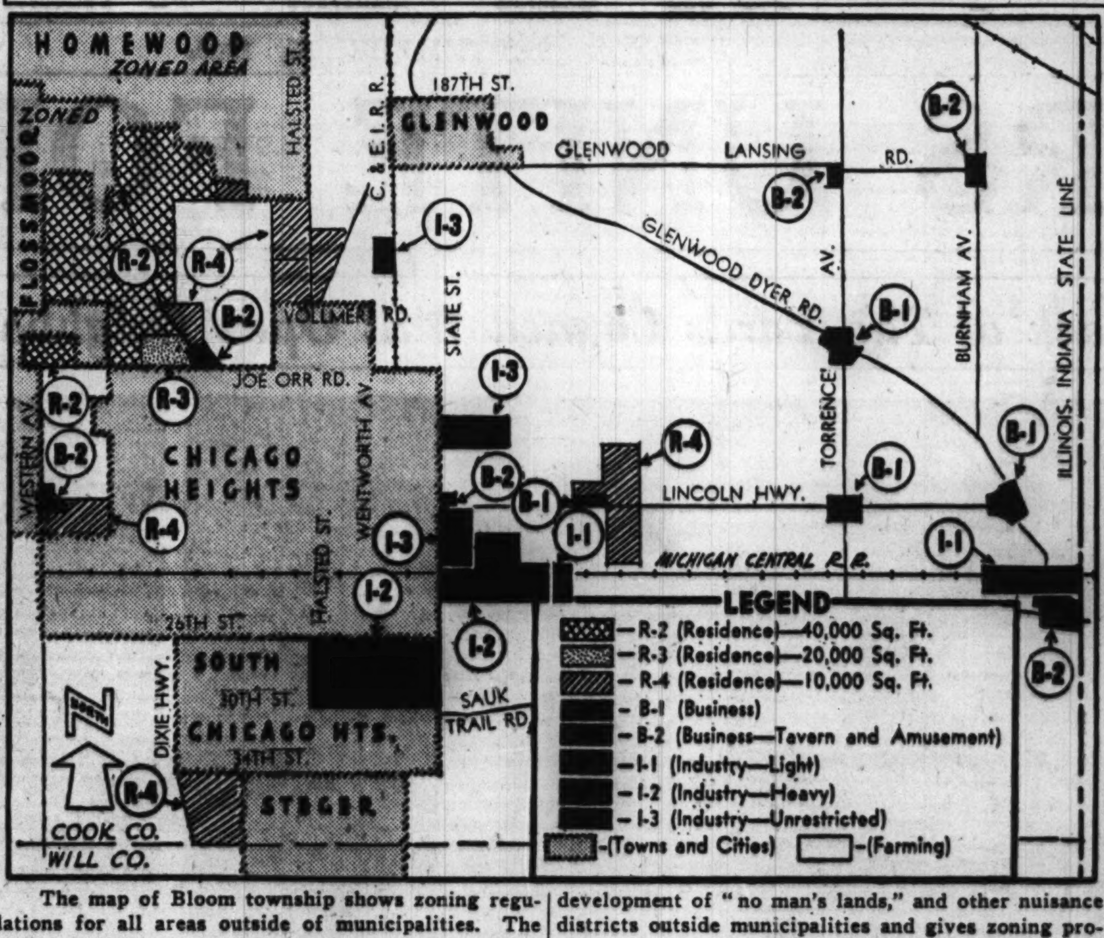
Zoning Regulations for Bloom Township



The map of Bloom township shows zoning regulations for all areas outside of municipalities. The ordinance for county zoning was passed recently by the Cook county board. The law seeks to prevent the development of "no man's lands," and other nuisance districts outside municipalities and gives zoning protection to areas adjacent to cities and villages as well as to farmers and those having country homes.

Learning to Mind Her Knitting

A young lady must roll a skein of yarn into a ball before a young lady can tend to her knitting. Bernice Richter, left, essays the task of making the yarn ball while Carol Herrshner, right, holds the skein. So far, the progress appears headed for tangles and snarls. Bernice and Carol are in fourth grade at Loring school, 10650 Longwood drive, where the 65th term has just begun.

Club's Riches Remain Buried

"Capt. Kidd" Dean Griffith is both a success and a failure at 12 years old. Dean, left, chose the old privateer's method of concealing his club's $2.49 treasury last spring by burying it, he thinks, in the back yard of his home at 9931 South Seeley avenue. He succeeded in burying it well. Now he's forgotten where the burial spot is. So he and his pals are going out on digging parties. Bill Allison, center, 1753 West 100th place, and Bob Rossen, 9930 South Hamilton avenue, lend a hand and a shovel in the hunt for the $2.49!

South Side Congressional Districts

DRAW UP LINES FOR CONGRESS SEAT BATTLES

Has 240,000 Population.

With a population of about 240,000, the 4th is one of the larger districts in the state. Of the 42,542 votes it cast in the 1938 congressional election, Beam received 61,504 as against only 18,962 for the Republican, Dominic M. Janec Jr. Beam's margin was even more decisive in 1936, when he polled 69,931 of the district's record total of 86,522 votes, his G. O. P. rival, Mrs. Irene A. Tomas, getting only 16,591.

In the large 6th district, which includes a good-sized slice of the southwest side, the Republican fight is being waged by Joseph Wagner, Berwyn dairyman who has openly fought the milk marketing schemes of the Roosevelt administration.

Wagner's man-sized job is to wrest the congress seat from Anton F. Maciejewski, Cicero coal dealer whom the Kelly-Nash organization deposited firmly in it two years ago after Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien quit to run for sheriff.

Wagner can count on carrying most of the suburbs, but he faces much tougher sledding in the heavily Democratic west side Chicago wards.

Record Is Democratic.

The 6th has had only two Republican congressmen since its present boundaries were established in 1901. One was the famous William Lorimer, who held the job from 1902 to 1910. The other was John J. Gorman, who won in 1920 and 1924.

Maciejewski beat Robert Isham Randolph two years ago by a vote of 154,818 to 109,031. Two years earlier, when the district cast a record total of 312,211 votes, O'Brien got 204,548 as compared with 107,649 for his G. O. P. challenger, Frederick A. Virkus.

Another tame race is getting off to a slow start in the 11th district, which takes in the ring of counties that hem Cook and Lake against Lake Michigan—Will, Du Page, Kane, and McHenry. The 11th is one of the four districts in the state that has never elected a Democrat to the national lower house.

Say Eakin's Chances Slim.

The arm chair experts are saying that the Democratic nominee, Edgar O. Eakin, Elgin attorney, doesn't stand the ghost of a chance of unseating Congressman Chauncey W. Reed of West Chicago, in spite of his wide circle of friends and supporters.

Reed has been the incumbent since 1934, when he nosed out the Democratic nominee by only 721 votes, but has since boosted the plurality to 45,689.

Russians of the Orthodox faith from all of Chicago and from parishes in Kenosha, Racine, and Milwaukee will go to Argo-Summit next Sunday to take part in the dedication of the new Russian Orthodox St. Panteleimon church at 7549 West 61th place. Planning the ceremonies, which will begin at 10 o'cock and continue thru the day, is the Rev. John Manchuk, pastor of the church. His assistants, shown here before the altar of the new church home, are Harry Homko (left) and William Trent (right). The Rt. Rev. Bishop Leonty of Chicago will celebrate the dedicatory service. PUPPET TROUP TO GIVE SHOW IN OGDEN PARK

South side puppeteers will go to Ogden park, 65th street and Racine avenue, Saturday for a carnival of shows. The little hand operated actors and actresses will perform in "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Betty's Adventure in Dreamland," "In Old Kentucky," and "Back to the Farm."

Programs will be in progress from 10 o'clock in the morning until noon, and from 1:30 o'clock until 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. While performances are going on in Ogden park, duplicate shows will be taking place in Paul Revere park for north side puppet enthusiasts. Both events have been arranged by the park district.

The park district puppeteers are boys and girls from 10 to 15 years of age. Instructors from the park district's artcraft section of the recreation division teach them how to make and manipulate the puppets. Miss Alice Beyer is the supervisor in charge of the work.

SLOVAK LEAGUE OF LAKE COUNTY TO HOLD PICNIC

The main objectives of the league are the promotion of Americanism among Slovaks in the country, and the defense against the "isms" of foreign countries. There are more than 1,000 members of the organization in the Calumet region, the two largest chapters being in Whiting and Indiana Harbor.

Other speakers on the program will be Dr. Peter P. Hletke, former league president; Attorney Joseph Steller, president of the Illinois district; the Rev. John J. Lach, pastor of Immaculate Conception church in Whiting; Joseph Zuffa, president of the Indiana Harbor branch, and Joseph Dernay, president of the Whiting branch.

STARVATION WAR ON RATS IN CITY GAINS IMPETUS

Extermination of Pests to Start Next Week.

Chicago has a population of 157,057 persons who scatter their garbage in alleys because they have no garbage cans, it was estimated last week by Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works.

The total of wards now rated by the commissioner as 100 per cent in garbage can equipment is 21, three more than last week. The drive to place a garbage can at every building in Chicago moved into its last stages last week. The garbage can job, Commissioner Hewitt declared is 74.6 per cent done. Since the campaign started 62,225 owners of buildings have obtained garbage receptacles. Cans have been donated by public spirited citizens, manufacturing companies, and gasoline stations.

Shut Off Food Supply.

"All exterminators tell me," Mr. Hewitt said, "that it is a waste of time to try to exterminate the rats as long as we provide either food or shelter for them. By equipping each building with garbage receptacles we withdraw their food supply, if not their shelter.

"Then, and only then, can we go ahead with our exterminating program. In the wards now rated as 100 per cent—a garbage can for every building—we will begin the exterminating process next week."

South Area Report.

Latest reports from wards on the south side of the city show the superintendents and the new percentages. They follow:

1st ward—Thomas F. McGrath; gain from 84.7 per cent to 91.3 per cent; 1,302 persons still without cans.

2d ward—Morris Laphen; gain from 73.5 per cent to 75.2 per cent; 11,832 persons still without cans.

4th ward—Gerald Hornidge; gain from 99.2 per cent to 100 per cent.

6th ward—M. J. O'Connell; a 99.9 per cent ward; 22 persons still without cans.

9th ward—Edwin Watson; gain from 83.8 per cent to 86.2 per cent; 13,896 persons lacking cans.

10th ward—William Hoger; gain from 93.1 per cent to 95.4 per cent; 2,945 persons lacking cans.

11th ward—James J. Mitchell; change from 82.8 per cent to 84.5 per cent; 10,123 persons without cans.

12th ward—Michael English; gain from 93.1 per cent to 94 per cent; 5,040 persons without cans.

Other Ward Standings.

13th ward—Thomas Carney; change from 82.5 per cent to 89.7 per cent; 10,175 persons without cans.

14th ward—Chris Keane; increase from 78 per cent to 78.7 per cent; 12,417 persons lacking cans.

15th ward—Frank Micek; change from 88.2 per cent to 90.1 per cent; 7,452 persons minus cans.

16th ward—Edward Petlak; change from 97.5 per cent to 97.94 per cent; 1,480 without cans.

17th ward—Rudolph Woerner; gain from 78.5 per cent to 80.29 per cent; 10,656 without cans.

19th ward—Michael O'Malley; gain from 90.4 per cent to 91 per cent; 8,784 without cans.

All other wards are reported 100 per cent.

The downtown college of the University of Chicago is planning a series of 10 public afternoon and evening lectures this fall. They will include the first off-quadrangle presentation of a course in "Great Books of Antiquity" organized by President Robert Hutchins and Mortimer Adler.

The lecture will begin the second week in October and will be delivered at the Art institute on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Discussions of war, fashion, biology, art, law, and philosophy are included.

The "Great Books of Antiquity" series will be offered in two sections, one on alternate Wednesdays starting Oct. 2, and the other on alternate Mondays starting Oct. 7, from 7:30 to 9:30 in the evening. The lectures will continue thru June 2.

Other lectures to be offered are "War in the Era of the Blitzkrieg," "Fashions in the Modern World," "Contemporary English Poetry," "Living Organisms and the Problem of Food Getting," and "Basic Ideas and Problems in Religion; Their Interpretations in World Cultures."

TWINS' MOTHERS READY TO OPEN FALL PROGRAM

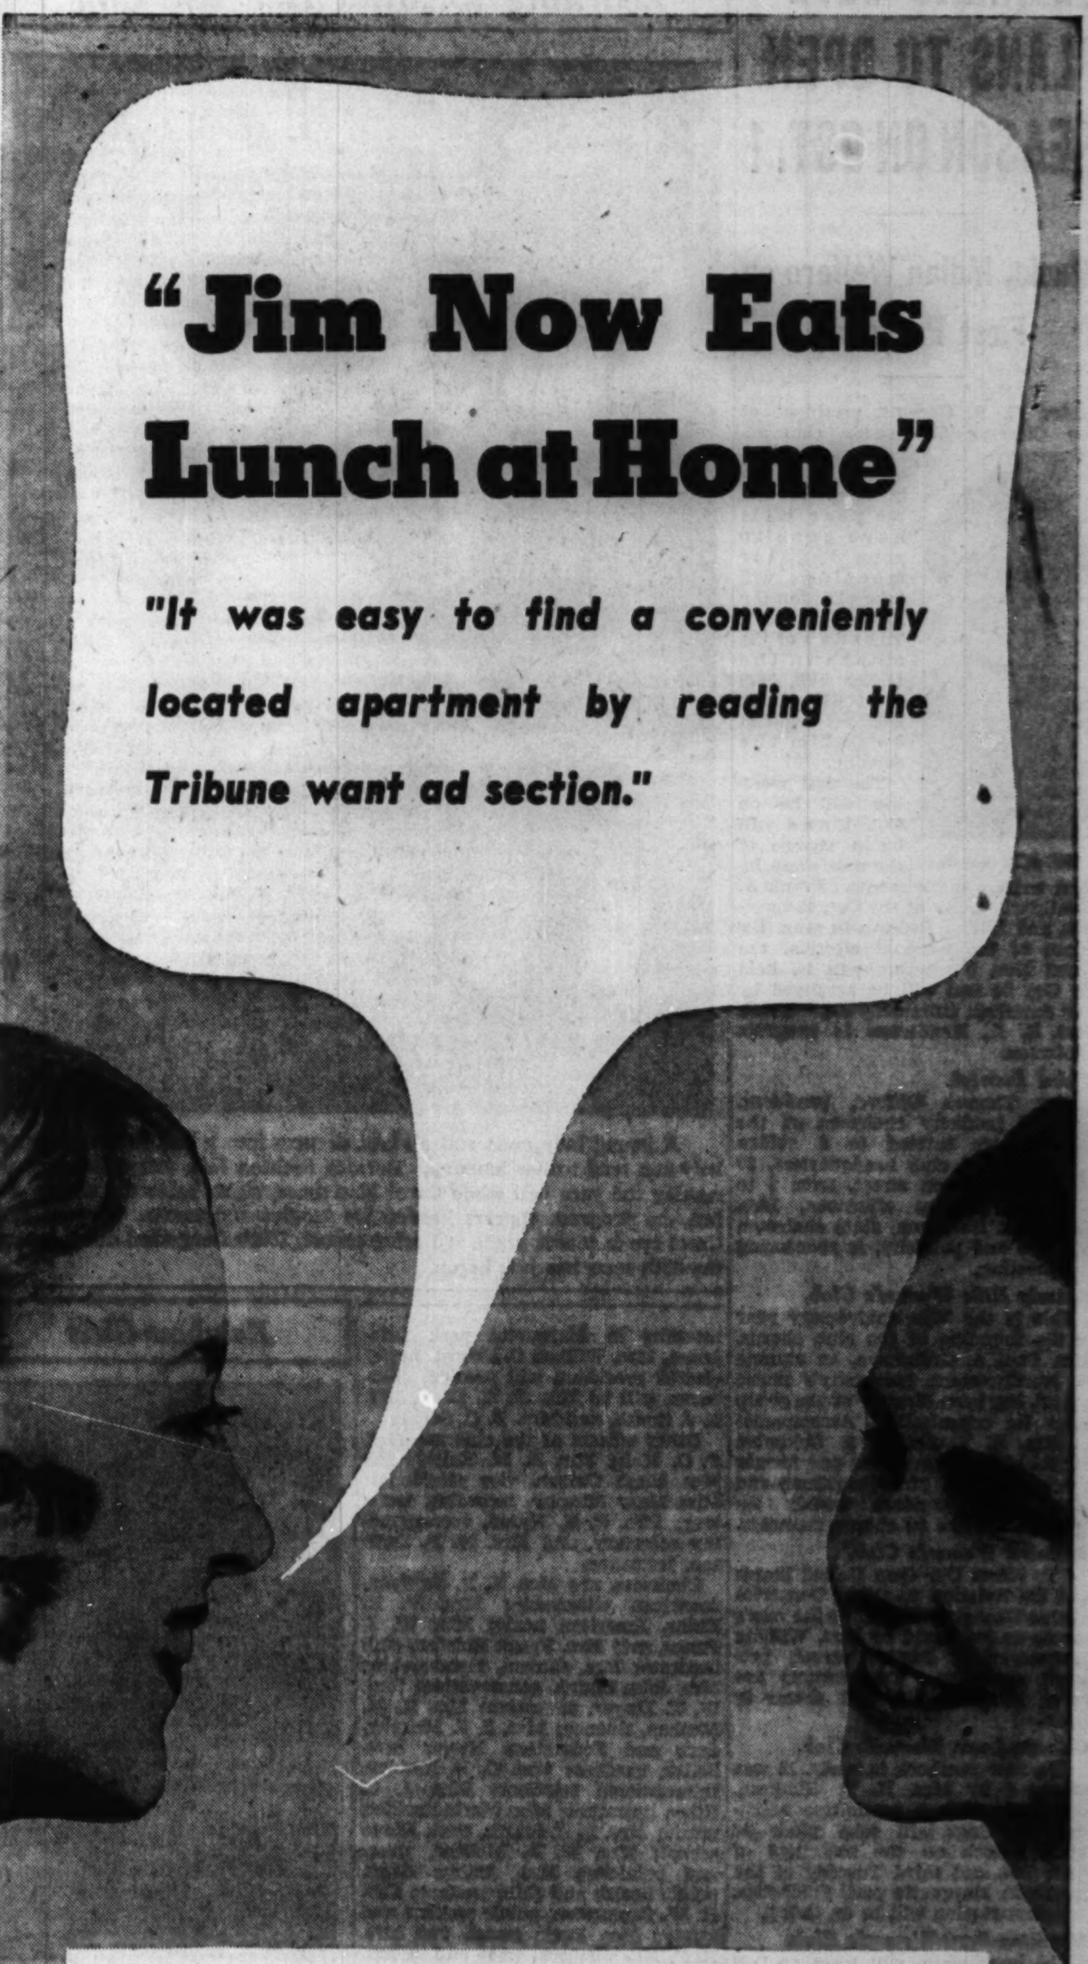
Twins have been meeting for state and national conventions for several years. Their mothers aren't always so well remembered in news items. However, the mothers have followed their sons and daughters in the get-together idea.

The Chicago organization of the International Mothers of Twins is beginning the fall season with a meeting at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the home of the president, Mrs. C. A. Norton, 7747 Aberdeen street. The mothers have a regular program of activities including sewing. Members have completed a layette, twin size, which is to be given to a pair of needy babies.

Among plans for the fall is the membership drive in October. Mrs. T. J. Daley, 8611 May street, is in charge.

Mizpah Masons to Honor Grand Lecturer of Lodge

Bernard J. Henley will be a special guest at a meeting of Mizpah Masonic lodge at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening in the temple at 6400 South Green street. This year is his 10th anniversary as grand lecturer and past master of the Mizpah lodge. The master mason's degree will be conferred by the Grand Lecturers' association.



What should an apartment have to make it the ideal home for your family?

No matter what your requirements are, you are practically certain to find what you want when you use the Tribune want ad columns as your guide. The Tribune prints more apartments-to-rent want advertising than all other Chicago newspapers combined.

The large selection of apartment offers which the Tribune places before you every day also saves your time and energy. By making up a list of the most attractive offers in the want ads, you can do most of your apartment hunting in an easy chair at home.

Turn to the want ads in today's Tribune. The apartment which will suit you best may be among those described.

2-WAY CLASSIFICATION SIMPLIFIES YOUR SEARCH

Tribune rental want ads are listed (1) by locations in city or suburb and (2) by numbers of rooms. Thus, if you want a four room apartment on the south side, simply turn to the columns headed "To Rent—Apartments—South" and then consult the offerings under the sub-heading "Four, Five, Six Rooms and Larger."

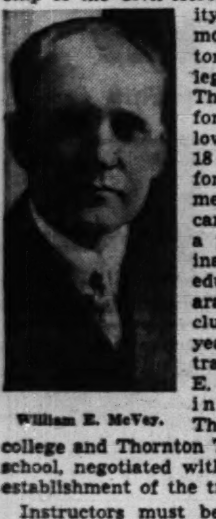
LANDLORDS! RENTAL AGENTS!

Every day of the week the Tribune sells more than 730,000 copies right in metropolitan Chicago. This is from 335,000 to 500,000 more than are sold in Chicago and suburbs by other Chicago newspapers. Low cost Tribune want ads can help you place your offers before Chicago's largest, most responsive audience of apartment prospects.

If your name is in the phone book, you may charge your Tribune want ads if you wish. Phone Superior 0100—Want Ad-Viser. Or ask to have a Tribune representative call on you.

TEN TO RECEIVE JUNIOR COLLEGE FLIGHT TRAINING

Course at Harvey Open to One Girl, Nine Boys.



William E. McVey.

A flying school under the sponsorship of the Civil Aeronautics authority will open tomorrow at Thornton Junior college in Harvey. The permit issued for the school allows 10 students 18 to 26 years old for the first semester. Applicants must pass a physical examination, and their educational preparation must include at least one year of college training. William E. McVey, superintendent of Thornton Junior college and Thornton Township High school, negotiated with the CAA for establishment of the training.

Instructors must be approved by the CAA under the plan. Lieut. H. J. Miller, a reserve officer in the National Guard and now a member of the Thornton faculty in the high school engineering department, will be the ground school teacher. The flying will be in charge of George Petit, flight operator, at the Rubinkam airport, 159th street and Western avenue. This airport adjoins Harvey.

Four Months Course.

The course, which is the preliminary one under the CAA, will be divided into two parts: 72 hours of ground school at the junior college and 35 to 50 hours of flight course at the airport. Each student progresses as rapidly as is individually possible. Trainers say that the course should be completed in four months.

The government allows $50 per student for ground instruction. The flight operator receives $325 per student. He, in turn, furnishes government inspected planes and provides the instruction. He must be certified by the government.

McVey has been receiving applications for the last two weeks. Those who wish to enroll should be at the school tomorrow. Under the quota, 10 per cent of the students may be young women. This translates into one girl for the Thornton course.

Students Are Insured.

The school must carry insurance on all students. This expense and that of the physical examination, are borne by the government. Part of the $50 allowed per student for ground instruction is apportioned for insurance and examinations.

The CAA school at Thornton carries on the national defense coöperation program started there this summer. Thruout the vacation season, 250 mechanics have been learning about new developments in machinery and in defense materials in the Thornton shops. When school reopened the mechanics had to move out of the classrooms in the daytime, but they are continuing their study, attending sessions five nights a week.

De La Salle Mothers' Club to Play Cards Thursday

Mrs. Fred Schmitz is chairman and will be assisted by Mrs. Victor Trauscht. New officers for the year include Mrs. John Harris, president; Mrs. Lewis Lenski, vice president; Mrs. John Foley, recording secretary; Mrs. Thomas Finucane, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Wolf, treasurer.

Thornton Democrats Issue Debate Challenge to G.O.P.

Frank G. Ring, Democratic committeeman of the Thornton Township Regular Democratic organization, has challenged the Republican organization of the township to participate in a debate or series of debates on: Roosevelt vs. Willkie, the Third Term, and the New Deal. These debates would be arranged by agreement between speakers and open to the public. Expenses, according to the suggested plan, would be shared equally by both parties.

CHAMP SOFTBALL TEAMS TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

Champion softball teams in the 16th ward will be crowned by the ward alderman, John S. Boyle, this afternoon at Normal park stadium, 61st street and Racine avenue. There will be championship games in the men's league, the boys' league, and between two of the city's outstanding girls' softball teams.

The girls' contest will begin at 2:30 o'clock. Junior championships begin at 1:15 o'clock; men's championships, 3:30 o'clock. Englewood post Sons of American Legion drum and bugle corps will give an exhibition and drill between games. This will be the same unit which won the state championship at Danville.

Ald. Boyle will award 21 trophies to winners and runners-up at the end of the day. Anthony Ghertz, business manager of the Boyle softball leagues, believes that today's attendance will exceed the 10,000 at last year's championship play.

HOME IN SUBURB EMERGES IN NEW BRIGHTER DRESS

Traces of Mission Oak Era All Discarded.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Very tangible values are evident in the recently modernized home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Casey in Park Ridge. It is a piece of work which has solved a host of problems—the type of problems that confront a host of people. In this lie both its news interest and its remodeling interest.

The architect, W. F. McCaughey, Pickwick building, Park Ridge, inspected the original house carefully from the standpoint of practical renovations and alterations before Mr. and Mrs. Casey decided to buy.

There was no great risk involved structurally, since the house was basically sound. Nor was there any uncertainty as far as the site was concerned. The house stood on a handsome corner lot with spreading elms and hawthorns, ironwoods and maples. There were cherry and pear trees at the back and honeysuckles at the front. It was a site which needed expert landscaping, since nature had been allowed to run riot in masses of shrubs and vines and flowers. But a wealth of possibilities was there.

Beamed Mission Oak.

On other points Mr. and Mrs. Casey were not so sure. Could the house be made over so it would be really satisfying?

It would need a new overcoat. No doubt of that, for its exterior walls were drab and in need of repair. The roof called for added protection against the elements, and inside there were eight very nondescript rooms. The old living room was finished in mission oak with beamed ceiling, and light bulbs at the intersections. The walls were a dreary chocolate brown, the windows were small, and the kitchen and pantry definitely belonged to a past era. Mrs. Casey felt that if ever an interior were afflicted with room-atism, it was the interior of that house.

But then, slowly and surely, things began to happen. The exterior walls were covered with a new overcoat of 10 inch white siding. A new roof, a deep red shade, was laid, and the columns at the front were covered with heavy 2 inch fluting.

Mrs. Casey felt that she did not wish to have the front porch ripped off. It was a large and comfortable porch. [Attractive, too, now that its walls have been painted white and its floor a clear gray. It is well screened and there are plenty of women who will agree with Mrs. Casey.

The original living room was given more light by a picture window on one outside wall. At the far end of the room, on the fireside wall, old book cases were torn out and well balanced windows built. The fireplace was handsomely transformed, the walls of the room carried out in a soft green, and the woodwork and ceiling beams painted white. Radiators were inclosed and the floor carpeted in a deep shade of plum.

Beams Painted White.

The dining room now acknowledges quite as great a change of face. The ceiling beams were painted white, the walls covered with a blue paper stunningly patterned in silver, and in one corner there is a captivating cabinet with a collection of pitchers from all over the world.

Modern lighting was installed thruout the house and the kitchen is a true homemaker's workshop, "a private office," and a thing of beauty.

Some changes in layout were achieved on the second floor which gave a floor plan more suited to the family's needs. All the rooms are light—the same rooms but with a very different spirit. To get the utmost out of available space is one of the aims of modernization as we know it today. This has been done in the present home.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my life I had heard that horsemanship was the sport of kings. It was a bit surprising, therefore, to find that here in the Chicago area it is by no means limited to royalty, nor even to the very wealthy or the well-to-do.

Thanks chiefly to the forest preserves, the Chicago parks, and the sanitary district, public horseback riding facilities are accessible to Chicagoland people of all walks of life. Thanks to the swiftly growing popularity of the sport, the cost of riding has come down well within the means of all but the very poor.

Having learned the fundamentals of riding, I found available to me a wide range of methods of purchasing my riding.

Get What You Pay For.

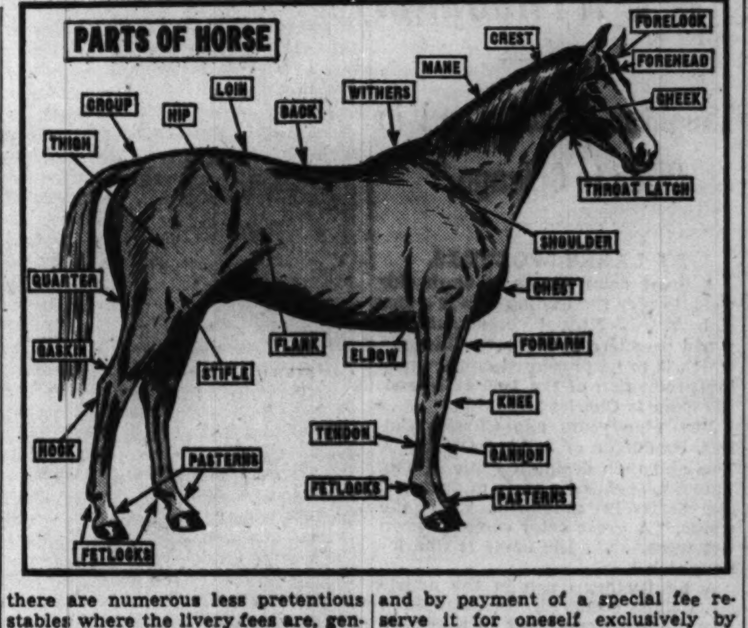
Most stables have livery horses, which are rented out to riders at prices ranging from $1.50 or $2 an hour down to the approximate cost of renting a bicycle. In riding, as in most other commercial transactions, you get just about what you pay for, I found from actual experience.

At the higher priced academies I found such advantages as immaculately clean stables, spacious and comfortable club and restroom facilities, and the companionship of genteel men, women, and youngsters.

Horses there represent the cream of the sport. Attendants are efficient, reliable, and courteous. Saddles, bridles, and other equipment are of highest quality, kept clean and in safe condition. Usually indoor arenas are provided.

Such refinements, of course, cost the stable owner more, and he must pass the financial burden along or go bankrupt.

For those who must figure their recreational budget more carefully there are numerous less pretentious stables where the livery fees are, generally speaking, commensurate with the services and environment provided.



Some Offer Night Rides.

The lower one descends in the price scale the fewer niceties of livery riding he finds and the more he is surrounded by the reckless riders who treat their mounts as callously as automobiles and violate most of the rules of the trail.

Many stable owners offer night rides and Sunday morning breakfast rides at special low rates. These are a boon to those whose employment makes it impossible for them to ride during the day.

Outright ownership of horses is on the increase hereabouts, stablemen report. These private horses usually are boarded, groomed, and exercised at established stables.

In some stables it is possible to select a horse from the livery string, and by payment of a special fee reserve it for oneself exclusively by the month.

Club Riding Grows.

This practice has numerous advantages for the rider. It gives him the mount of his own choice, yet does not involve the responsibilities and initial cost of ownership. The stable furnishes saddle, bridle, and pad, and assumes all care of the mount.

Club riding is another growing practice. Members pay regular fees, in return for which they get generous use of a group of semi-private horses, plus expert instruction without additional cost.

One Chicago area stable owner has elaborated on the club plan to the point where he has graded his riders according to their ability, maintaining a group of horses for each class, and awarding promotions to the better riders. Members of his club are required to take regular riding instruction.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 16.

Autumn flowering perennials should not be transplanted until early spring, but spring flowering kinds can be moved safely during autumn. A perennial border can be made now; spread a layer of decayed manure over the surface of the ground and spade under. The soil should be well drained. Allow the spaded area to settle and in the meantime work up a planting plan and buy the stock. A plan saves money, time, and labor.

Do not use too many kinds, but include some bulbous plants for groups in various sections, the lower plants in front and the tall ones in the rear. Repeat the kinds at intervals in the plan and avoid using those that spread rapidly from underground stems, such as the Oswego tea, false dragonhead, rudbeckias, or golden glow unless they can be kept in bounds.

Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Good weather permitting, there is time to repair the lawn by sowing fresh seed of a high grade mixture. To keep a good, high class lawn requires attention at the proper time. Permanent lawns require no mulching to come safely thru the winter, and the practice of spreading straw or strawy manure over the lawn does more harm than good.

Plant peonies now to enable them to become established before severe weather. Plant in a sunny spot and not too deep. Use good, rich soil, but avoid the use of manure at the roots.

Do not use too many peonies on the small grounds or they will dominate; two or three are plenty for small areas. Siberian and Japanese iris can still be planted. Tulips can be planted up to cold weather.

Wednesday, Sept. 18.

If only one or two trees are to be planted, go to the nursery and select good ones. A tree with a well developed root system, without a crouch, and with a good, well formed head, costs a bit more, but will occupy no more space and will require less care than a poor plant. Do not use too many trees on a restricted area.

If the wisteria failed to flower well, it can be root pruned at this time. Take a sharp spade and cut the roots off about three feet from the plant. Feeding roots will be reduced and flower spurs forced to appear. The plant is a gross feeder and if permitted to grow rampant will produce abundant wood and few flowers.

Thursday, Sept. 19.

Plants that are to be removed indoors should be moved immediately or sudden weather changes may affect them, causing the leaves to turn yellow and fall. Geraniums should be dug before frost and stored in the cool cellar or basement; they will not bloom if potted before spring.

Palms, cacti, and other tender plants should be repotted if the pots have become broken, but cacti are best potted in spring. Buy a good fern, young geranium, sansevieria, aspidistra, small palm, philodendron, or other plant to grow on.

Friday, Sept. 20.

Remember to pot up small plants of pot marigolds, the dwarf asters, lantanas, petunias, bedding begonias, and others, for they will furnish good flowers for a long time. By potting now, they will become well established before cold weather. Watch for insects and spray if any are seen.

Divide the bleeding heart now. Seeds of hardy annuals may be sown now for early spring flowering. Remove cacti to the house before cold weather. Give them a sunny location. Plant the minor bulbous plants as soon as possible. These include the snowdrops, scillas, glory-of-the-snow, and others. They are fine when used in colonies, and are hardy.

Make a habit of syringing at intervals and the plants will keep in good condition.

Saturday, Sept. 21.

When potting, do not overpot by planting a small plant in a pot out of proportion to the size of the root system. Overpotting may result in overwatering. Water newly potted plants sparingly until well established. When transplanting, the soil should be packed closely about all roots. This applies to both outdoor and indoor planting.

Use the fingers and work the soil in and between the roots until the soil is in contact with each one, and continue until the pot is full or within a quarter inch of the top of the pot, depending on the size of the pot. Save all leaves that are not insect infested for the compost pile.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A great actor comes to town this week to play the leading rôle in a special W-G-N-Mutual broadcast—the world première of "Ode to Chicago" which is to be presented as the opening production of the 1940-'41 season. His name is Charles Laughton.

Just nine years ago Charles Collins, conductor of A Line O'Type or Two and then dramatic critic of THE TRIBUNE, prefaced a story of an actor, comparatively unknown, with the words, "A great actor came to town last week. . . . His name is Charles Laughton."

A bit further down in the article Mr. Collins observed, "Mr. Laughton appears to be one actor in a generation, and his arrival is something to celebrate."

That was in December, 1931. Mr. Laughton had come to Chicago without fanfare in "Payment Preferred," a grim melodrama of shabby middle class life, which was no smash hit. In the intervening years Laughton's notable work in the theater, in pictures and on the air have endeared him to the American people. His stature has risen steadily until his return to Chicago to help W-G-N launch the most important season in its history is "something to celebrate."

Unique Radio Creation.

"Ode to Chicago" is a unique radio creation. Employing drama, poetry, an original musical score and sound effects and other devices peculiar to radio, this production crystalizes the story and spirit of Chicago. The show will be aired before an invited audience—a first night audience of social and civic leaders of Chicago—from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening. It will be broadcast over the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

During the broadcast Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the president of W-G-N will speak, setting forth the basic ideals of public service and the comprehensive program plans of W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Charles Laughton has built his phenomenal career as an actor in twelve years. While he showed a propensity for dramatics as a child it was not until 1928 that he got his first stage rôle. He had served in the army during the world war and later was a clerk in Claridge's hotel. It looked for many years as tho his mother's greatest fear that he "would end up on the stage" would not be realized. Finally he landed a small part in "The Government Inspector." Once started he lost no time in making his way into the front rank of London actors.

Marries British Actress.

While playing in "Mr. Prohack" he married Elsa Lanchester, British actress. She played one of the wives in "Henry VIII.," the picture which won the Academy award for Laughton. Miss Lanchester will accompany her husband to Chicago this week.

For the first time in many years Laughton plays a sympathetic rôle in his new picture, "They Knew What They Wanted," in which he is costarred with Carole Lombard. His last rôle of this type was in "Ruggles of Red Gap" in which he made such a hit with his reading of Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address." His interpretation made such a profound impression on the American public that he was prevailed upon several times on Lincoln's birthday to give it on the air. One year he broadcast it by short wave from London for American listeners.

During the filming of "They Knew What They Wanted," everyone on the set began calling Laughton "Bubbles," levity that would not have been in keeping while he was working as the tyrannical Capt. Bligh in "Mutiny on the Bounty" or the dissolute Ginger Ted in "The Beachcomber."

Despises Capt. Bligh.

Actually Laughton dislikes unsympathetic rôles. He despised the part of Capt. Bligh and didn't care for the part of the "Hunchback of Notre Dame." He greatly admires the comedians—particularly Chaplin, and is said to have a desire to play comedy parts.

Some sidelights on Laughton:

He is modest, somewhat nervous in manner; serious, smiles rarely, often answers questions by asking one. He rarely talks about himself. He is said to be fond of parlor tricks and has several hundred to try on guests. His house is filled with gadgets, jig-saw puzzles, trick cigaret holders and such. He is said to dislike "dressing up." He likes to sink into an easy chair and drink tea—made by bringing the pot to the kettle, [not the kettle to the pot] a chore he taught Zasu Pitts in "Ruggles."

"You Americans," he once observed, "make the best coffee and the worst tea in the world."

OPERA FINALE HIGHLIGHT OF SYMPHONIC HOUR

Ruth Slater, Mark Love to Join Marion Claire.

The finale of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," sung by Marion Claire, W-G-N's prima donna, Ruth Slater, young Chicago contralto, and Mark Lve, basso, will highlight the W-G-N Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening.

Opening the hour with the overture to "Egmont," by Beethoven the orchestra also will play the coronation scene and Polonaise from "Boris Godounow," by Moussorgsky, and a polka from the "Gollen Age" ballet, by Shostakovitch. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, in the presentation of the Moussorgsky number.

Miss Claire will present three solos in addition to her part in the Offenbach opera selections. She will sing "Allerseelan," by Richard Strauss, "Floods of Spring," by Sergei Rachmaninoff, and the addio from the third act of "La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini.

The complete program:

Overture to Egmont..........................Beethoven
Orchestra.
[a] Allerseelan ....Richard Strauss
[b] Floods of Spring..........Rachmaninoff
Coronation scene and Polonaise from Boris Godounow..........Moussorgsky
Chorus and orchestra.
Addio from third act of La Boheme...Puccini
Marion Claire and orchestra.
Speech ....
Col. Robert R. McCormick.
Polka from "Golden Age" ballet.... ....Shostakovitch
Tales of Hoffmann..................Offenbach
Marion Claire, Ruth Slater, Mark Love, chorus and orchestra.

The contralto part in Jacques Offenbach's opera fantastique will mark Miss Slater's second appearance as a featured singer on W-G-N. As one of five finalists in the Chicago Opera talent search, she sang in a special audition broadcast over W-G-N last July 8. She so impressed Mr. Weber, musical director of W-G-N, that he decided to present her on the Symphonic Hour.

Miss Slater received most of her musical education at the University of Illinois. After her graduation in 1933, she moved to Chicago where she has appeared in concerts and at oratorio societies. She has been soloist at Temple Sholom for three years. In 1934 she was a member of a winning quartet in the Chicagoland Music Festival.

The Symphonic Hour is under the direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Cecil Smith of the music and drama department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE writes musical commentary for the program.

PHILHARMONIC RADIO SERIES TO RESUME OCT. 13

The 99 year old New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra will resume its Sunday afternoon broadcasts from Carnegie hall, New York, on Oct. 13. The broadcasts will be aired from 2 to 3:30 p. m. over WBBM-CBS for the 11th consecutive season.

John Barbirolli will be regular conductor. Deems Taylor, the composer-critic and author, will be the commentator during the intermissions.

Bruno Walter, who has been associated with the orchestra for several years, and Dmitri Mitropoulos, director of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, will serve as guest conductors during mid-season.

The network will broadcast also, as it has concurrently with the regular performances each year, the Saturday morning Young People's Concerts by the orchestra on Nov. 2, Dec. 14, Jan. 11, Feb. 15, March 22, and April 19. They will be under the direction of Rudolph Ganz.

Of the regular concerts Mr. Barbirolli will conduct two broadcasts from out-of-town points—Nov. 24 at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Dec. 1 at Washington, D. C., during the orchestra's tour of sixteen cities in the United States between Nov. 18 and Dec. 5.

COMPLETE MILLION DOLLAR PARK

DRAW UP LINES FOR CONGRESS SEAT BATTLES

G.O.P. Centers Fight in 3 Districts.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

A return to the bang-up scraps of earlier years loomed last week as principals prepared for the congressional election campaign in the six districts that embrace the south and southwest sides.

Heartened by the increasing G. O. P. strength being reflected in their districts and thruout the nation, the Republican candidates in most of the districts expressed confidence of their ability to carry the election on Nov. 5.

That these predictions are carrying more significance than in previous years is evident from the concern being shown by most of the Democratic incumbents. Plans for active campaigns are being made even by those who have depended entirely on organization support in the immediate past.

All Incumbents in Race.

The districts that include south side territory are the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 6th, and 11th. Only the 11th is held by the Republicans, and it is expected to remain in their custody. There is reason to believe that Democratic occupancy of the 1st, 2d, and 3d districts is much less secure than formerly. The incumbents are seeking reëlection in all six of the southerly districts.

In the predominantly colored 1st district, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, ardent New Dealer, faces a battle from Former Senator William E. King. Mitchell is counting strongly upon the relief vote to maintain him in the office he has held since 1934, but King has a large personal following that may do much to overcome this advantage.

The 1st district has a population of about 140,000, most of it concentrated in the close packed tenements and old mansions of the near south side. A smattering reside in the hotels of the loop and nearby downtown section, which it also embraces.

56,603 Votes in 1938.

Two years ago the district cast 56,603 votes, 30,207 for Mitchell and 26,396 for William L. Dawson, then a Republican but since turned Democrat. In the Presidential election of 1936 the district cast 64,208 ballots, an all-time high, of which Mitchell was given 35,376 and former Congressman Oscar DePriest, the G. O. P. nominee, 28,640.

In the 19 congressional elections since the district was carved out in the last reapportionment in 1901, Democrats triumphed only once before Mitchell was first elected. That was in 1902 when Martin Emerich nosed out Martin B. Madden, who retaliated by winning the next 12 elections.

In the 2d district the struggle is between a congressman and a former congressman. The Republican, former Representative Patrick H. Moynihan, has squared off against Congressman Raymond S. McKeough, faithful New Deal yes man, and there are many who insist Moynihan has better than an even chance to win.

Voted Against Dies.

McKeough has been widely criticized both for his inactivity and for his wooing of radical elements. He was one of five Illinois congressmen who voted against continuation of the Dies inquiry into un-American activities.

His foes are hopeful that the district will return this year to the Republican fold, from which it had never strayed before 1934, the year Moynihan was unseated by McKeough after one term in office.

Two years ago McKeough got 129,620 votes to 108,483 for the Republican, Noble W. Lee. This was a much smaller plurality than he had in 1936, when he polled 163,198 votes while Moynihan was gathering 130,197.

In the 3d district Congressman Edward A. Kelly, Democratic incumbent since 1930, faces a determined rival in the person of Waldemar J. Roehler, former west parks commissioner.

Largest Vote in 1934.

Kelly rolled up his highest plurality in 1934, when he downed his G. O. P. challenger, Frank M. Fulton, 122,109 to 70,329. Two years later he repeated his defeat of Fulton to the tune of 156,425 to 106,300. In 1938 the Republican, Goodwin L. Dosland, cut Kelly's plurality to 27,240, getting 100,357 votes to Kelly's 127,597.

The 4th district race is a one-sided affair, not even the most optimistic G. O. P. supporters seriously claiming a chance for the Republican candidate, Henry F. Schmudde, against Representative Harry P. Beam, incumbent since 1930. Schmudde has practically no political background, while Beam is widely known and generally liked thruout his district.

The 4th has an almost unbroken Democratic history. The only Republican it ever sent to congress was Charles S. Wharton, who slid in in 1904 because of the absorption of

Jackson Park Fishes Could Hardly Be Called Suckers

Fishing is the greatest sport in the world and especially so when there is a chance of winning a prize—that is, if you can find somebody to put the worm on the hook and take off the fish. Cecily Donoghue, 5301 South Parkway, is worrying about getting her fish off the hook because she plans to enter it in the contest that is being sponsored by the park district. Jean Bowman, 7814 Union avenue, and Helen De Jonge, 6625 Lafayette avenue, are pulling hard at their pole hoping it isn't a rubber boot. The park district is offering prizes each week for the largest bass caught in the park lagoons. These girls are trying to tempt the fish in the Jackson park lagoon. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

A Radio Ham Brings Solace to Dying Boy

A young Japanese boy was dying in a strange city and in a strange bed. He was in Chicago in a south side Y. M. C. A. where he had come a few days previously in hopes of finding work. His only wish was that his parents in Honolulu might be notified. The physician who looked down on him compassionately understood his whispered hope, and turned to the clerk who stood in the shadows of the darkened room. "Do you suppose Mrs. Mida could help us?"

Mrs. Lee W. Mida.

The clerk nodded and left the room. A few minutes later he returned and told the boy that he had talked to his parents and they knew of his condition. The boy died a few minutes later, knowing that his parents would care for everything according to their custom.

Mrs. Lee W. Mida, 8211 Crandon, was the woman who brought a last minute peace to the strange boy. She had never seen him but she played her part of mercy in that case as she has in many others.

Known Around World.

Mrs. Mida is a licensed, amateur, short wave operator, and with her set had contacted a friend in Honolulu who in turn had gotten in touch with the boy's parents. Mrs. Mida, who is well known thruout the south side for her radio work, is as well known thruout the world by every "ham." In the ten years that she has been working her set she has contacted thousands of amateurs in other countries, making fast friends, and has used her set for emergency and mercy work as much as she has for her own pleasure.

Mrs: Mida was not always a radio fan, for several years ago she was one of the country's most prominent women golfers. Her home is lined with cups and trophies that testify to her ability. She was first women's western open champion in 1930, and she won the western medal play title in 1923 and 1927. In 1929 she went abroad with the first Curtiss cup team to play against the best in France, Scotland, and England.

About ten years ago Mrs. Mida decided that golf was taking too much of her time and energy and felt that it was time to retire from competition. Between her matches she had become an avid radio listener. Many nights she sat up late logging stations and trying to get short wave broadcasts.

Learns Code as Hobby.

Her interest in radio became so keen she decided to learn code for at that time most of the short wave radio "hams" conversed in code. There were few stations that broadcast in voice to which she could listen. After she had learned the code and discovered the romance in hearing people converse with each other over thousands of miles she decided to get her own short wave transmitter.

With the help of an interested friend she built her first set and applied for her amateur license. She was one of the pioneer women in the field, and at the time she received her license she was one of the few women in the country that held one.

Helps Flood Victims.

On the wall of her room where she has built her set hangs a public service certificate from the American Radio Relay League which honors her for the amateur radio emergency work she did during the Ohio river valley flood in January, 1937. Night after night she spent at her set during that time sending messages for the Red Cross, and taking frantic appeals from the stricken area for medical supplies. She relayed calls for help, and helped alleviate the suffering of those in the flooded area.

Recently she reëncountered an old friend in an unusual spot. For more than eight years she had been friends with another fan named Felix. She first contacted Felix when he was in Guam, and a few years later talked to him regularly when he was in China. Then for a while he dropped off the air and she was unable to find him. One recent night she casually sent his call over the air on the chance that he might be listening. He was. After a few minutes' conversation she asked where he was and he answered, "Little America." She spent an hour that night talking to him. He told her that spring was just beginning and that they were happy over the thought of seeing the sun again after months in the dark.

Irene Wright.

Election Year Note: All About a Cornerstone

BY GAIL COMPTON.

This is the story of the building that grew too fast. Grew so fast it got away from the contractors, the owners, and the cornerstone layers.

Not long ago a contract was let for a new library building to be erected at 91st street and Houston avenue. It was to be a grand building, this South Chicago branch, and the contract said it would cost $83,019.

Now, a building that costs that much, and one that would be so important in the community life, deserved the two honors due any good building. First of all there must be a cornerstone laying ceremony with a speakers' stand, red and white bunting, and officials. Second, there must be a dedication, with a bigger speakers' stand, more bunting, and bigger officials.

Last Call for Dedicators.

The time approached quickly for the laying of the cornerstone. The workmen told the contractor, the contractor told the library, and the library got all set to tell the officials.

Things turned out rather sadly. Carl D. Roden, head librarian of the Chicago public libraries, asked an alderman, but he couldn't come. He asked a drum and bugle corps, and it couldn't come. He worked desperately to get somebody, but not a soul responded to his plea for cornerstone dedicators. They were all out of town.

Then the catastrophe struck. The workmen called the contractor, the contractor called Mr. Roden, and Mr. Roden wearily put down his phone. The cornerstone had been laid and the building was almost up to the first floor level. It was too late. And this all happened in an election year.

Still a Good Library.

The building hasn't suffered from its slight, for it will be an excellent library. It will have shelf space for 20,000 volumes, two special reference rooms, a basement assembly room that can handle 300 people, and an attractive story hour room for children.

The plans call for a one story and basement building of modern design, irregular in outline, with a frontage of 40 feet on 91st street, and a total depth of 122 feet.

When the building is completed in several months there will be dedication ceremonies. Mr. Roden told the contractor so, and the contractor told the workmen so. So when it's done everybody will stand back and not move a finger until the thing is done right. It's the least the building deserves.

Kayak Regatta Scheduled for Today in Lincoln Park

The division of recreation of the Chicago park district has announced another competition among kayak owners. The regatta will be held at Diversey beach in Lincoln park today at 2 o'clock. All owners of kayaks are eligible to take part in the races and novelty events. Prizes will be awarded.

LINDBLOM GRADUATE WINS AWARD IN ELKS SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST

William L. Langbauer, 2049 West 47th street, will receive an honorable mention award won in the annual scholarship contest conducted by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks thru the Elks National Foundation. Presentation of the award will be made in special ceremonies at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Chicago [South] lodge, 6156 Cottage Grove avenue, Langbauer's sponsoring organization. Four scholarships and eight honorable mentions are awarded annually by the Elks Foundation to young men and women in the United States and territorial possessions. The honorable mention award carries a substantial sum of money to apply to college training. Langbauer finished at Lindblom High school.

DOGS PUT THRU REHEARSAL FOR PARK EXHIBITS

National Dog week is getting under way in the city with the slogan "Every Dog Needs a Good Home." The nation-wide movement is seeking to promote better care, training and homes for dogs.

The Chicago park district is helping to observe the week by sponsoring shows in 14 parks. Boys and girls from 8 to 17 years old are eligible to enter pets. Awards will be offered on the following basis: Best informed owner, best groomed, best trick, best behaved dog, and the best pet combination.

In the best pet combination, the judging will be based on the comradeship and understanding between the dog and his owner. Fitness and correctness of the boy or girl to care for and train the dog will also be considered by the judges.

Preliminary shows will be held at the following parks:

HAMILTON—72d street and Hamilton avenue, Sept. 21, 10 a. m., under supervision of James Lackey, park supervisor, P. K. Groves, chief judge, and Dr. Ellinor McGarth, local veterinarian.

JACKSON—63d street and Stony Island avenue, Sept. 21, 2 p. m., under supervision of John Bathum, park supervisor; Mrs. Edith Newhouse, chief judge and Dr. Carl Stephan, local veterinarian.

PALMER—117th street and Indiana avenue, Sept. 25, 4 p. m., under supervision of M. S. Richter, park supervisor; Mrs. R. C. Henre, chief judge; Dr. Robert Gysel, local veterinarian.

RIDGE—96th street and Longwood drive, Sept. 24, 4 p. m., under supervision of Ralph Morgan, park supervisor; John Sweeney, chief judge; Dr. O. P. Sinnerud, local veterinarian.

TULEY—90th street and St. Lawrence avenue, Sept. 21, 2 p. m., under supervision of John H. Morris, park supervisor; Mrs. R. Crosthwaite, chief judge; Dr. Vincent Hensler, local veterinarian.

The final show will be held at Waveland field, Lincoln park, on Saturday, Sept. 28, at 2 p. m.

Ten to Receive Junior College Flight Training

A flying school under the sponsorship of the Civil Aeronautics authority will open tomorrow at Thornton Junior college in Harvey. The permit issued for the school allows 10 students 18 to 26 years old for the first semester. Applicants must pass a physical examination, and their educational preparation must include at least one year of college training. William E. McVey, superintendent of Thornton Junior college and Thornton Township High school, negotiated with the CAA for establishment of the training.

William E. McVey.

Instructors must be approved by the CAA under the plan. Lieut. H. J. Miller, a reserve officer in the National Guard and now a member of the Thornton faculty in the high school engineering department, will be the ground school teacher. The flying will be in charge of George Petit, flight operator, at the Rubinkam airport, 159th street and Western avenue. This airport adjoins Harvey.

Four Months Course.

The course, which is the preliminary one under the CAA, will be divided into two parts: 72 hours of ground school at the junior college and 35 to 50 hours of flight course at the airport. Each student progresses as rapidly as is individually possible. Trainers say that the course should be completed in four months.

The government allows $50 per student for ground instruction. The flight operator receives $325 per student. He, in turn, furnishes government inspected planes and provides the instruction. He must be certified by the government.

McVey has been receiving applications for the last two weeks. Those who wish to enroll should be at the school tomorrow. Under the quota, 10 per cent of the students may be young women. This translates into one girl for the Thornton course.

Students Are Insured.

The school must carry insurance on all students. This expense and that of the physical examination, are borne by the government. Part of the $50 allowed per student for ground instruction is apportioned for insurance and examinations.

The CAA school at Thornton carries on the national defense coöperation program started there this summer. Thruout the vacation season, 250 mechanics have been learning about new developments in machinery and in defense materials in the Thornton shops. When school reopened the mechanics had to move out of the classrooms in the daytime, but they are continuing their study, attending sessions five nights a week.

RITES TO DRAW HOST TODAY TO CALUMET AREA

Marks Rounding Out of Big Project.

More than 50,000 persons are expected to attend the re-dedication ceremonies of Calumet park today. The celebration will mark the completion of three years work, during which $1,000,000 was spent.

The majority of the improvements were effected at the north end of the park where three miles of new road have been built. New playing fields, a disposal plant, and landscaping of much of the grounds are among the many inovations. The work was done with the aid of federal money, and contributions of the park district.

The park now contains 194 acres and is bounded north and south by 95th and 103d streets, and extends from Lake Michigan to the right of way of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad. The new land at the north end of the park where the ceremonies will take place was converted from an old slag heap to its present grassy smoothness.

Will Have Parade.

Ceremonies will begin at 2 o'clock with a parade starting at 106th street and Ewing avenue. The parade will be led by drum and bugle corps and will march to a reviewing stand in front of the administration building.

Grand marshall of the day is Ald. William A. Rowan, 10th ward, who will share speaking honors with Judge George A. Rooney. Also in the reviewing stand will be Henry W. Smith, president of the East Side Chamber of Commerce which has been active in promoting the work at the park.

Honorary marshalls will be Clarence J. Bohling and Thomas McArdle. After the speakers have finished, a motor cavalcade will take part in the cutting of the ribbon at the new roadway, and the parade will then circle the new end of the park.

Established in 1904.

Calumet park was established in 1904 and at that time comprised approximately 50 acres. It was named for the early Calumet city on the site of which part of the park is located.

A vast amount of work was involved in putting the park into its present shape. More than 24,000 cubic yards of black soil were used to cover the slag heap at the north end. Many trees and shrubs were planted. Areas that were inundated during heavy rains were drained, and sewers and water pipes were put it. A new lighting system was set up in the field house and floodlights were erected out of doors for night games.

A running track was built, and more than 18,000 square yards of side walks laid. Nine baseball diamonds and a large macadam parking lot were built. A great deal of landscaping was done around the coast guard station, new comfort stations were erected, and a portable skating shelter built.

Prizes to Be Given.

As part of the ceremonies, more than $200 in prizes will be given to winners of various contests that have been under way for several weeks. Baseball games, horseshoe tournaments, track events, and tennis tournaments will be run off, and the winners honored.

Plans also call for a life saving demonstration by the Jackson Park and East Side coast guards. A boat will be capsized and the coast guard will go to the rescue, illustrating the use of various life saving devices. There will also be a sailing regatta for small boats.

One of the main attractions at the park is the fieldhouse, considered the largest and best in Chicago park district. It has an assembly room that will accomodate 800 persons, four large gymnasiums, 36 dressing booths, a basketball court, banquet hall and kitchen, eight club rooms, and a library.

Sponsors of the ceremonies, and organizations that have been active in forwarding the work in the park are the East Side Women's club, the South East Sportsmen's club, the Calumet Sportsmen's club, and Illiana Post 220 of the American Legion.

PARLIAMENTARY RULES COURSE OFFERED BY I. U.

Calumet Center of Indiana university is offering a course in parliamentary rules this year in response to a demand for information on the subject. Men and women who are connected with organizations have asked for the course in order that they might become familiar with parliamentary procedure. One section of the class will be given at the administration building in East Chicago beginning Tuesday evening, and the other will start Wednesday in the Hammond high school. Classes start at 6:30 o'clock. Richard Parry, extension lecturer in speech, has charge of the classes.

PLEA FOR WEED CUTTING.

Will you permit me to "arise in my large white cravat" and ask a very simple question?

I would like to know just why the south and west sides of the city are one mass of obnoxious weeds. At least 90 per cent of hay fever is brought about by rag weed, and notwithstanding this fact this weed, together with many other varieties, has been permitted to flourish for many years. There are in Chicago today thousands of people on relief; many of these people are able bodied and there is not one reason in the world why they should not be put to work at least four hours a day in clearing this city of the weeds and dirt you find almost everywhere. Why not quit spending millions on the lake front, where only a small per cent of the people are benefited, and spend a lot more cleaning up the rest of the city, which is a mass of filth almost beyond belief. There are thousands of people in the city of Chicago today who suffer the most intense agony for weeks, and what is done about it? I am aware of the fact that some "midget" attempts have been made in cutting weeds, but it seems almost unbelievable that the weeds are not outlawed and every effort made to destroy them. They are not only a great menace to health, but harbor rats and all manner of dirt. W. L. E.

WHAT DOES YOUR LEASE SAY?

I am living in a large apartment building in the South Shore district and would like to know if there isn't a law regarding sanitation of porches, stairways, and garbage cans. I would also like to know if tenants occupying upper apartments are allowed the privilege of shaking oil mops and rugs over bannisters. This is annoying and I would really like to know what can be done about it. I have lived here approximately two years and porches, stairway, and cans have not been washed. Personally, I would say this is a job for the health department.

MRS. M. W. B.

A REPLY TO A PARKING CHARGE.

I would like to reply to W. F. B., whose article appeared last Sunday. I would like to contradict everything he says.

In the first place I am a woman, not a fellow. I do not own a hot dog stand; I live there. My car is not a jalopy; it is worth just as much to me as his car is to him. The car always is parked off the pavement. The stand is on top of the hill, not half way down. It is a frame building and not a log cabin.

And last, but not least, I haven't one little speck of political pull. M. P.

FLOWER EXHIBIT IS SCHEDULED ON SOUTH SHORE

The flower show of the Garden club of South Shore will be held Thursday and Friday in St. John's Methodist church parlors, 74th street and Jeffery avenue.

Committee chairmen who have been appointed are, Mrs. G. J. Bauerschmitt and Mrs. W. C. Burge, transportation; Mrs. Wilbur Fribley, and Mrs. F. W. Juhlstrom, artistic arrangements; Mrs. D. T. Deal, flower distribution; Mrs. F. F. Giezelman, prizes and classifications; Mrs. Theodore Krogh, publicity; Mrs. John Bayliss, judges chairman; Mrs. C. B. Knolte, hospitality; Mrs. Fred Seipp, finance.

Recent Bride

A recent bride was Ruth Hatfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hatfield, 10631 South Seeley avenue. She was married to Irvin A. Bussee Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Bussee, Riverside.

G.O.P. MAPS PLAN TO STRENGTHEN ASSEMBLY LEAD

Two Seats Are at Stake in South Area.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

South side candidates for the state legislature last week began mapping battle strategy for the Nov. 5 election which will decide whether the Republican "paper majority" in the house of representatives will be increased to a real working majority. The south section of Chicago offers the G. O. P. chances to gain two house seats.

E. J. Schnackenberg.

For the first time since 1930 the Republicans gained a majority in the house two years ago, when 79 G. O. P. members and 74 Democrats were elected. But because half a dozen Republicans from the river wards were loyal only to the party in power, this edge became known as a "paper majority" which was ineffective in carrying out Republican policies.

Sales Tax and Pensions.

Sales tax reduction, parole reform, and old age pensions are among the important questions expected to demand action before the lawmakers in Springfield. Therefore, citizens are warned by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg [Republican] of the 13th district not to let foreign affairs distract their attention from voting duty.

"The international situation is vitally interesting to all of us, but there is real danger that it may cause some citizens to overlook the important duty of using care and good judgment in selecting officials to run our state and national governments," Schnackenberg said.

None of the political leaders are disregarding the many ways in which the war colors the election picture of 1940. The Illinois attorney general has ruled that legislators who are members of the National Guard must resign from one position. On the south side this ruling concerns Representative William J. Warfield, commander of the 8th regiment [colored], a candidate for reëlection in the 5th or Hyde Park district.

Withholds His Decision.

Denying a report from Springfield that he has announced he will resign from the legislature, Col. Warfield said he has not made his decision.

"My regiment has not been called into active service," he said. "If it is called up, I may not pass the physical examination. Certainly I will not resign either post until I know my exact situation. I still am a candidate for reëlection."

Two of the four legislative districts on the south side are "setups"—the 1st and 3d. In these districts the voters on Nov. 5 will merely take ratifying action because there will be a total of four Republican and two Democratic candidates for the six house seats at stake.

An unusual situation exists in the 3d, where Representative A. Andrew Torrence, certain of renomination, was slain by a disgruntled former precinct worker the day before primary ballots were cast.

Representative Charles J. Jenkins [R.] last week was the leader of an event typical of legislative politics at this stage of the campaign. He was chairman of a committee which gave a picnic attended by 8,000 persons on the lake front between 31st and 35th street.

Sees Votes from WPA.

Jenkins reported that recent developments in New Deal "Santa Claus" agencies are driving many voters back to the Republican side. Those WPA workers who were handed 403s [discharge notices] under the 18 months' limitation on WPA employment are resentful, he said.

Joseph E. Snowden, attorney, who was runner-up in number of primary votes, is fighting in the courts for an order compelling the election board to certify him as the nominee in Torrence's place. He contends that a dead man could not be a candidate.

Ordinarily the Republican senatorial committee for the 3d district would have power to fill the vacancy. Assuming that Snowden's appeal will be denied by the Illinois Supreme court, the committee last week proceeded to name Dudley S. Martin, an able orator and precinct captain in the 2d ward, to Torrence's place on the ticket. Martin is a former state central committeeman.

Resent Food Stamps.

Substitution of federal food stamps for cash food allowances has caused hardship for reliefers, who are likely to register their anger at the polling places, he said. When they received cash they were able to forestall eviction by using a portion of the food money to pay rent when this item was not covered by relief allowances. Now they are unable to do this and evictions are increasing, he said.

Following are the candidates in the south side districts, with incumbents denoted by asterisks [*]. In contest districts, where there are four candidates, the three top vote getters will win house seats with pay of $5,000 a biennium:

DISTRICT 1.

[Parts of wards 1, 2, and 11.]

REPUBLICAN—*Charles J. Jenkins, 4127 Prairie, and Dudley S. Martin or Joseph E. Snowden [depending upon court decision].

DISTRICT 5.

DISTRICT 13.

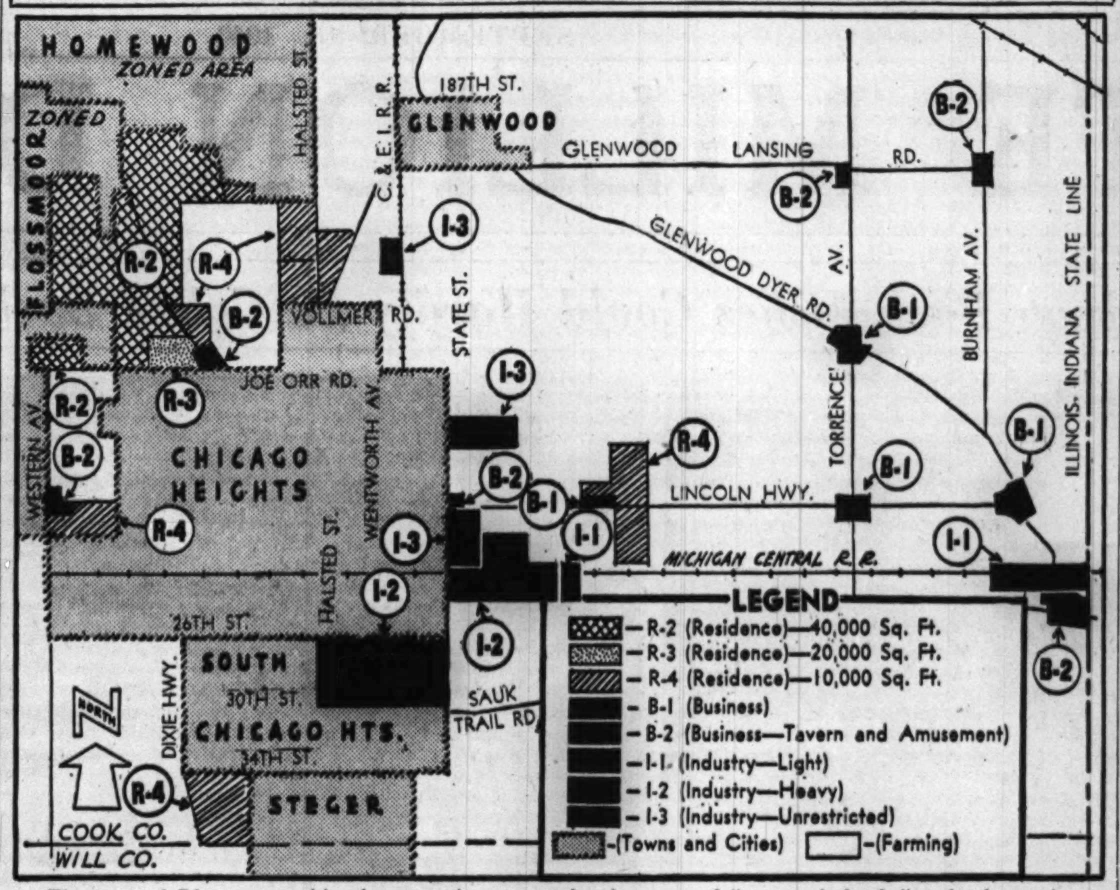
State senators, who have four year terms, are not up for reëlection in south side districts this year.

Republican Women.

The South Side Republican Woman's club will meet at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at 413 West Englewood avenue. Mrs. W. G. Suthers and Mrs. T. K. Renaker will speak.

Zoning Regulations for Bloom Township



The map of Bloom township shows zoning regulations for all areas outside of municipalities. The ordinance for county zoning was passed recently by the Cook county board. The law seeks to prevent the development of "no man's lands," and other nuisance districts outside municipalities and gives zoning protection to areas adjacent to cities and villages as well as to farmers and those having country homes.

STARVATION WAR ON RATS IN CITY GAINS IMPETUS

Extermination of Pests to Start Next Week.

Chicago has a population of 157,057 persons who scatter their garbage in alleys because they have no garbage cans, it was estimated last week by Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works.

The total of wards now rated by the commissioner as 100 per cent in garbage can equipment is 21, three more than last week. The drive to place a garbage can at every building in Chicago moved into its last stages last week. The garbage can job, Commissioner Hewitt declared is 74.6 per cent done. Since the campaign started 62,225 owners of buildings have obtained garbage receptacles. Cans have been donated by public spirited citizens, manufacturing companies, and gasoline stations.

Shut Off Food Supply.

"All exterminators tell me," Mr. Hewitt said, "that it is a waste of time to try to exterminate the rats as long as we provide either food or shelter for them. By equipping each building with garbage receptacles we withdraw their food supply, if not their shelter.

"Then, and only then, can we go ahead with our exterminating program. In the wards now rated as 100 per cent—a garbage can for every building—we will begin the exterminating process next week."

South Area Report.

Latest reports from wards on the south side of the city show the superintendents and the new percentages. They follow:

1st ward—Thomas F. McGrath; gain from 84.7 per cent to 91.3 per cent; 1,302 persons still without cans.

2d ward—Morris Laphen; gain from 73.5 per cent to 75.2 per cent; 11,832 persons still without cans.

4th ward—Gerald Hornidge; gain from 99.2 per cent to 100 per cent.

6th ward—M. J. O'Connell; a 99.9 per cent ward; 22 persons still without cans.

9th ward—Edwin Watson; gain from 83.8 per cent to 86.2 per cent; 13,896 persons lacking cans.

10th ward—William Hoger; gain from 93.1 per cent to 95.4 per cent; 2,945 persons lacking cans.

11th ward—James J. Mitchell; change from 82.8 per cent to 84.5 per cent; 10,123 persons without cans.

12th ward—Michael English; gain from 93.1 per cent to 94 per cent; 5,040 persons without cans.

Other Ward Standings.

13th ward—Thomas Carney; change from 82.5 per cent to 89.7 per cent; 10,175 persons without cans.

14th ward—Chris Keane; increase from 78 per cent to 78.7 per cent; 12,417 persons lacking cans.

15th ward—Frank Micek; change from 88.2 per cent to 90.1 per cent; 7,452 persons minus cans.

OPERA FINALE HIGHLIGHT OF SYMPHONIC HOUR

Ruth Slater, Mark Love to Join Marion Claire.

The finale of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," sung by Marion Claire, W-G-N's prima donna, Ruth Slater, young Chicago contralto, and Mark Lve, basso, will highlight the W-G-N Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening.

Opening the hour with the overture to "Egmont," by Beethoven the orchestra also will play the coronation scene and Polonaise from "Boris Godounow," by Moussorgsky, and a polka from the "Gollen Age" ballet, by Shostakovitch. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, in the presentation of the Moussorgsky number.

Miss Claire will present three solos in addition to her part in the Offenbach opera selections. She will sing "Allerseelan," by Richard Strauss, "Floods of Spring," by Sergei Rachmaninoff, and the addio from the third act of "La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini.

The complete program:

- Overture to Egmont .... Beethoven
  Orchestra.
- [a] Allerseelan .... Richard Strauss
- [b] Floods of Spring .... Rachmaninoff
- Coronation scene and Polonaise from Boris Godounow .... Moussorgsky
  Chorus and orchestra.
- Addio from third act of La Boheme... Puccini
  Marion Claire and orchestra.
- Speech ....
  Col. Robert R. McCormick.
- Polka from "Golden Age" ballet.... .... Shostakovitch
- Tales of Hoffmann .... Offenbach
  Marion Claire, Ruth Slater, Mark Love, chorus and orchestra.

The contralto part in Jacques Offenbach's opera fantastique will mark Miss Slater's second appearance as a featured singer on W-G-N. As one of five finalists in the Chicago Opera talent search, she sang in a special audition broadcast over W-G-N last July 8. She so impressed Mr. Weber, musical director of W-G-N, that he decided to present her on the Symphonic Hour.

Miss Slater received most of her musical education at the University of Illinois. After her graduation in 1933, she moved to Chicago where she has appeared in concerts and at oratorio societies. She has been soloist at Temple Sholom for three years. In 1934 she was a member of a winning quartet in the Chicagoland Music Festival.

The Symphonic Hour is under the direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Cecil Smith of the music and drama department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE writes musical commentary for the program.

PHILHARMONIC RADIO SERIES TO RESUME OCT. 13

The 99 year old New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra will resume its Sunday afternoon broadcasts from Carnegie hall, New York, on Oct. 13. The broadcasts will be aired from 2 to 3:30 p. m. over WBBM-CBS for the 11th consecutive season.

John Barbirolli will be regular conductor. Deems Taylor, the composer-critic and author, will be the commentator during the intermissions.

Bruno Walter, who has been associated with the orchestra for several years, and Dmitri Mitropoulos, director of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, will serve as guest conductors during mid-season.

The network will broadcast also, as it has concurrently with the regular performances each year, the Saturday morning Young People's Concerts by the orchestra on Nov. 2, Dec. 14, Jan. 11, Feb. 15, March 22, and April 19. They will be under the direction of Rudolph Ganz.

Of the regular concerts Mr. Barbirolli will conduct two broadcasts from out-of-town points—Nov. 24 at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Dec. 1 at Washington, D. C., during the orchestra's tour of sixteen cities in the United States between Nov. 18 and Dec. 5.

'DAY IN VIENNA' WILL HIGHLIGHT MELODY PAGEANT

Miss Witwer, Baggiore Are Soloists.

A special arrangement of "Day in Vienna," by Adolph Hoffmann to be sung by Kathryn Witwer, soprano, and Attilio Baggiore, tenor, will be featured on the Pageant of Melody from 9:15 to 10 p. m. next Wednesday. Offering classical and light classical music by the concert orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber, the program will be presented over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

For her solo, Miss Witwer will sing "O No, I Pray, Do Not Depart," by Sergei Rachmaninoff. Baggiore will present "Bird Song at Eventide," by Eric Coates, noted English composer.

The orchestra will open the program with Von Suppe's "Beautiful Galathea." Following Miss Witwer's solo, the orchestra will present Edvard Grieg's "Wedding Day at Trollhagen."

Camille Saint-Saëns' "Samson et Delilah" and Achron's "Hebrew Melody" also will be played by the orchestra. The W-G-N chorus will join the orchestra in the presentation of the selection from Saint-Saëns.

Music ranging in tempo from hot rhumba to southern spirituals will be featured from 7 to 7:30 p. m. next Friday when Harold Stokes presents the Friday Night Show. This musical variety program will be broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Stokes will introduce "The Four Top Notes," a new singing combination, in a presentation of "Breezin' Along with the Breeze." Kathleen Karns, Bee Arden, Ray Charles, and Norman Luboff make up this mixed quartet.

Patti Clayton, featured soloist, will present two numbers—"The Nearness of You" and "Love Turns Winter to Spring." Miss Clayton, a W-G-N singing discovery, is making her first appearance as regular soloist on the Friday Night Show.

Curt Massey, romantic baritone, also will present two solos. He will sing "Only Forever," from "Rhythm on the River," and "I'm Comin'. Virginia."

The chorus and the W-G-N dance orchestra will open the program with "Hallelujah" and also will present the evening finale, "Who," from "Sunny."

A GREAT ACTOR TO HELP LAUNCH W-G-N PROGRAM

Laughton Takes Lead in "Ode to Chicago."

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A great actor comes to town this week to play the leading rôle in a special W-G-N-Mutual broadcast—the world première of "Ode to Chicago" which is to be presented as the opening production of the 1940-'41 season. His name is Charles Laughton.

Just nine years ago Charles Collins, conductor of A Line O'Type or Two and then dramatic critic of THE TRIBUNE, prefaced a story of an actor, comparatively unknown, with the words, "A great actor came to town last week. . . . His name is Charles Laughton."

A bit further down in the article Mr. Collins observed, "Mr. Laughton appears to be one actor in a generation, and his arrival is something to celebrate."

That was in December, 1931. Mr. Laughton had come to Chicago without fanfare in "Payment Preferred," a grim melodrama of shabby middle class life, which was no smash hit. In the intervening years Laughton's notable work in the theater, in pictures and on the air have endeared him to the American people. His stature has risen steadily until his return to Chicago to help W-G-N launch the most important season in its history is "something to celebrate."

Unique Radio Creation.

"Ode to Chicago" is a unique radio creation. Employing drama, poetry, an original musical score and sound effects and other devices peculiar to radio, this production crystalizes the story and spirit of Chicago. The show will be aired before an invited audience—a first night audience of social and civic leaders of Chicago—from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening. It will be broadcast over the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

During the broadcast Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the president of W-G-N will speak, setting forth the basic ideals of public service and the comprehensive program plans of W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Charles Laughton has built his phenomenal career as an actor in twelve years. While he showed a propensity for dramatics as a child it was not until 1928 that he got his first stage rôle. He had served in the army during the world war and later was a clerk in Claridge's hotel. It looked for many years as tho his mother's greatest fear that he "would end up on the stage" would not be realized. Finally he landed a small part in "The Government Inspector." Once started he lost no time in making his way into the front rank of London actors.

Marries British Actress.

While playing in "Mr. Prohack" he married Elsa Lanchester, British actress. She played one of the wives in "Henry VIII.," the picture which won the Academy award for Laughton. Miss Lanchester will accompany her husband to Chicago this week.

For the first time in many years Laughton plays a sympathetic rôle in his new picture, "They Knew What They Wanted," in which he is co-starred with Carole Lombard. His last rôle of this type was in "Ruggles of Red Gap" in which he made such a hit with his reading of Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address." His interpretation made such a profound impression on the American public that he was prevailed upon several times on Lincoln's birthday to give it on the air. One year he broadcast it by short wave from London for American listeners.

During the filming of "They Knew What They Wanted," everyone on the set began calling Laughton "Bubbles," levity that would not have been in keeping while he was working as the tyrannical Capt. Bligh in "Mutiny on the Bounty" or the dissolute Ginger Ted in "The Beachcomber."

Despises Capt. Bligh.

Actually Laughton dislikes unsympathetic rôles. He despised the part of Capt. Bligh and didn't care for the part of the "Hunchback of Notre Dame." He greatly admires the comedians—particularly Chaplin, and is said to have a desire to play comedy parts.

Some sidelights on Laughton:

He is modest, somewhat nervous in manner; serious, smiles rarely, often answers questions by asking one. He rarely talks about himself. He is said to be fond of parlor tricks and has several hundred to try on guests. His house is filled with gadgets, jig-saw puzzles, trick cigaret holders and such. He is said to dislike "dressing up." He likes to sink into an easy chair and drink tea—made by bringing the pot to the kettle, [not the kettle to the pot] a chore he taught Zasu Pitts in "Ruggles."

"You Americans," he once observed, "make the best coffee and the worst tea in the world."

Guest on W-G-N

Charles Laughton, the distinguished British actor, as he appears in the new R-K-O picture, "They Knew What They Wanted." Laughton will come from Hollywood to play the leading part in "Ode to Chicago," a special musical dramatic program which will introduce W-G-N's fall season from 7:15 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

Agriculture and Defense, Topic of Farm-Home Hour

A discussion of the skilled workers among the six million farm families in the United States engaged in agricultural production will be heard in the first of a series of eight weekly broadcasts on the relationship of agriculture to national defense, during the National Farm and Home hour at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow over WMAQ.

DRAW UP LINES FOR CONGRESS SEAT BATTLES

Has 240,000 Population.

With a population of about 240,000, the 4th is one of the larger districts in the state. Of the 42,542 votes it cast in the 1938 congressional election, Beam received 61,504 as against only 18,962 for the Republican, Dominic M. Janec Jr. Beam's margin was even more decisive in 1936, when he polled 69,931 of the district's record total of 86,522 votes, his G. O. P. rival, Mrs. Irene A. Tomas, getting only 16,591.

In the large 6th district, which includes a good-sized slice of the southwest side, the Republican fight is being waged by Joseph Wagner, Berwyn dairyman who has openly fought the milk marketing schemes of the Roosevelt administration.

Wagner's man-sized job is to wrest the congress seat from Anton F. Maciejewski, Cicero coal dealer whom the Kelly-Nash organization deposited firmly in it two years ago after Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien quit to run for sheriff.

Wagner can count on carrying most of the suburbs, but he faces much tougher sledding in the heavily Democratic west side Chicago wards.

Record Is Democratic.

The 6th has had only two Republican congressmen since its present boundaries were established in 1901. One was the famous William Lorimer, who held the job from 1902 to 1910. The other was John J. Gorman, who won in 1920 and 1924.

Maciejewski beat Robert Isham Randolph two years ago by a vote of 154,818 to 109,031. Two years earlier, when the district cast a record total of 312,211 votes, O'Brien got 204,548 as compared with 107,649 for his G. O. P. challenger, Frederick A. Virkus.

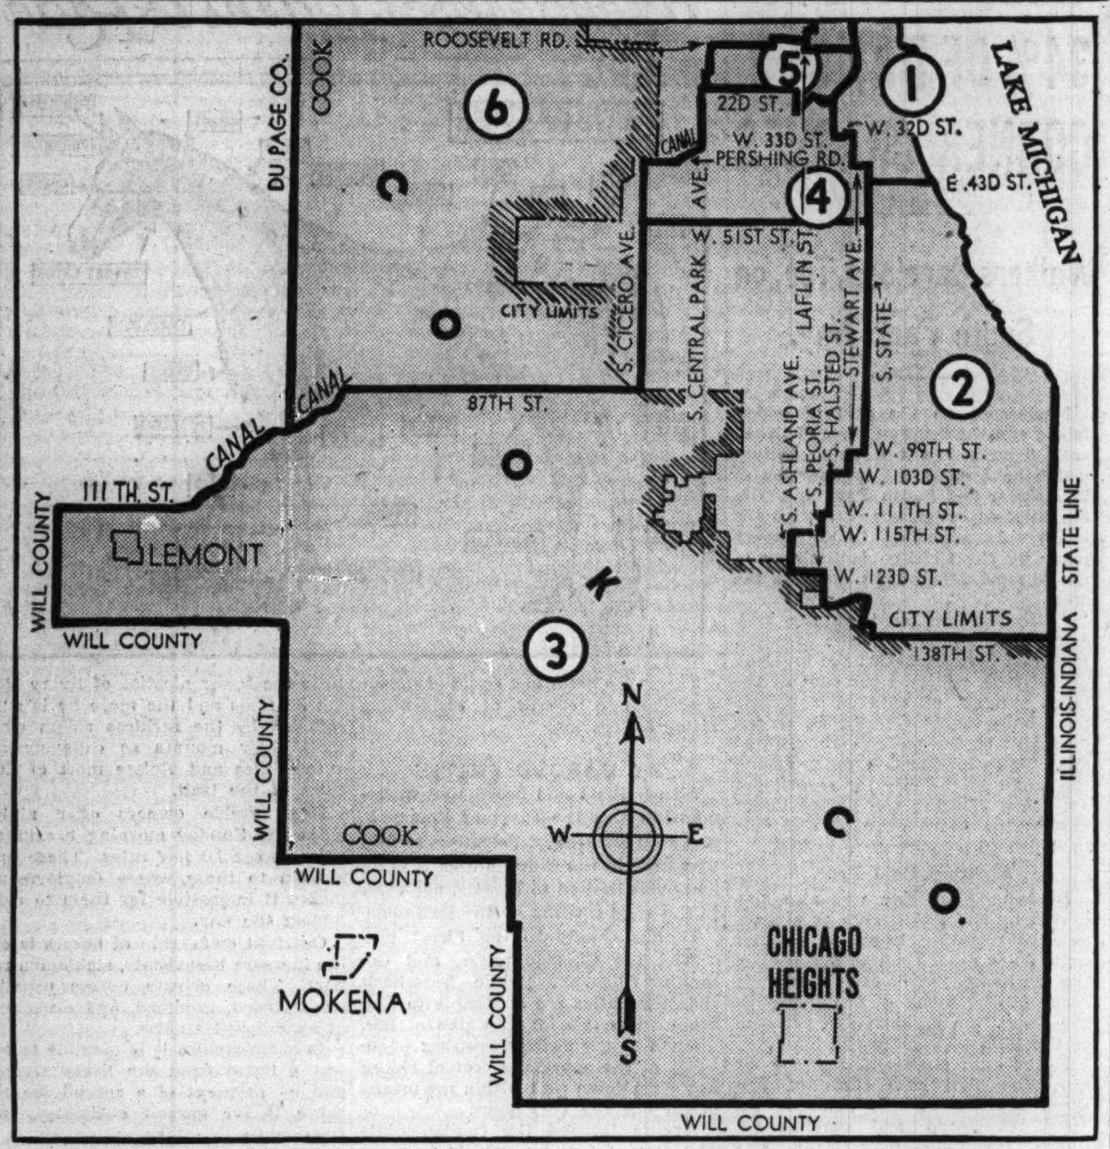
Another tame race is getting off to a slow start in the 11th district, which takes in the ring of counties that hem Cook and Lake against Lake Michigan—Will, Du Page, Kane, and McHenry. The 11th is one of the four districts in the state that has never elected a Democrat to the national lower house.

Say Eakin's Chances Slim.

The arm chair experts are saying that the Democratic nominee, Edgar O. Eakin, Elgin attorney, doesn't stand the ghost of a chance of unseating Congressman Chauncey W. Reed of West Chicago, in spite of his wide circle of friends and supporters.

Reed has been the incumbent since 1934, when he nosed out the Democratic nominee by only 721 votes, but has since boosted the plurality to 45,689.

South Side Congressional Districts



This map shows the boundaries of the south and southwest side congressional districts in which election campaigns got under way last week. The 11th district is composed of the four counties that border Cook and Lake counties on the west and south. These four are Will, Du Page, Kane, and McHenry.

HOME IN SUBURB EMERGES IN NEW BRIGHTER DRESS

Traces of Mission Oak Era All Discarded.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Very tangible values are evident in the recently modernized home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Casey in Park Ridge. It is a piece of work which has solved a host of problems—the type of problems that confront a host of people. In this lie both its news interest and its remodeling interest.

The architect, W. F. McCaughey, Pickwick building, Park Ridge, inspected the original house carefully from the standpoint of practical renovations and alterations before Mr. and Mrs. Casey decided to buy.

There was no great risk involved structurally, since the house was basically sound. Nor was there any uncertainty as far as the site was concerned. The house stood on a handsome corner lot with spreading elms and hawthorns, ironwoods and maples. There were cherry and pear trees at the back and honeysuckles at the front. It was a site which needed expert landscaping, since nature had been allowed to run riot in masses of shrubs and vines and flowers. But a wealth of possibilities was there.

Beamed Mission Oak.

On other points Mr. and Mrs. Casey were not so sure. Could the house be made over so it would be really satisfying?

It would need a new overcoat. No doubt of that, for its exterior walls were drab and in need of repair. The roof called for added protection against the elements, and inside there were eight very nondescript rooms. The old living room was finished in mission oak with beamed ceiling, and light bulbs at the intersections. The walls were a dreary chocolate brown, the windows were small, and the kitchen and pantry definitely belonged to a past era. Mrs. Casey felt that if ever an interior were afflicted with room-atism, it was the interior of that house.

But then, slowly and surely, things began to happen. The exterior walls were covered with a new overcoat of 10 inch white siding. A new roof, a deep red shade, was laid, and the columns at the front were covered with heavy 2 inch fluting.

Mrs. Casey felt that she did not wish to have the front porch ripped off. It was a large and comfortable porch. Attractive, too, now that its walls have been painted white and its floor a clear gray. It is well screened and there are plenty of women who will agree with Mrs. Casey.

The original living room was given more light by a picture window on one outside wall. At the far end of the room, on the fireside wall, old book cases were torn out and well balanced windows built. The fireplace was handsomely transformed, the walls of the room carried out in a soft green, and the woodwork and ceiling beams painted white. Radiators were inclosed and the floor carpeted in a deep shade of plum.

Beams Painted White.

The dining room now acknowledges quite as great a change of face. The ceiling beams were painted white, the walls covered with a blue paper stunningly patterned in silver, and in one corner there is a captivating cabinet with a collection of pitchers from all over the world.

Modern lighting was installed thruout the house and the kitchen is a true homemaker's workshop, "a private office," and a thing of beauty.

Some changes in layout were achieved on the second floor which gave a floor plan more suited to the family's needs. All the rooms are light—the same rooms but with a very different spirit. To get the utmost out of available space is one of the aims of modernization as we know it today. This has been done in the present home.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 16.

Autumn flowering perennials should not be transplanted until early spring, but spring flowering kinds can be moved safely during autumn. A perennial border can be made now; spread a layer of decayed manure over the surface of the ground and spade under. The soil should be well drained. Allow the spaded area to settle and in the meantime work up a planting plan and buy the stock. A plan saves money, time, and labor.

Do not use too many kinds, but include some bulbous plants for groups in various sections, the lower plants in front and the tall ones in the rear. Repeat the kinds at intervals in the plan and avoid using those that spread rapidly from underground stems, such as the Oswego tea, false dragonhead, rudbeckias, or golden glow unless they can be kept in bounds.

Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Good weather permitting, there is time to repair the lawn by sowing fresh seed of a high grade mixture. To keep a good, high class lawn requires attention at the proper time. Permanent lawns require no mulching to come safely thru the winter, and the practice of spreading straw or strawy manure over the lawn does more harm than good.

Plant peonies now to enable them to become established before severe weather. Plant in a sunny spot and not too deep. Use good, rich soil, but avoid the use of manure at the roots.

Wednesday, Sept. 18.

If only one or two trees are to be planted, go to the nursery and select good ones. A tree with a well developed root system, without a crouch, and with a good, well formed head, costs a bit more, but will occupy no more space and will require less care than a poor plant. Do not use too many trees on a restricted area.

If the wisteria failed to flower well, it can be root pruned at this time. Take a sharp spade and cut the roots off about three feet from the plant.

Thursday, Sept. 19.

Plants that are to be removed indoors should be moved immediately or sudden weather changes may affect them, causing the leaves to turn yellow and fall. Geraniums should be dug before frost and stored in the cool cellar or basement; they will not bloom if potted before spring.

Palms, cacti, and other tender plants should be repotted if the pots have become broken, but cacti are best potted in spring. Buy a good fern, young geranium, sansevieria, aspidistra, small palm, philodendron, or other plant to grow on.

Friday, Sept. 20.

Remember to pot up small plants of pot marigolds, the dwarf asters, lantanas, petunias, bedding begonias, and others, for they will furnish good flowers for a long time. By potting now, they will become well established before cold weather. Watch for insects and spray if any are seen.

Divide the bleeding heart now. Seeds of hardy annuals may be sown now for early spring flowering. Remove cacti to the house before cold weather. Give them a sunny location. Plant the minor bulbous plants as soon as possible. These include the snowdrops, scillas, glory-of-the-snow, and others. They are fine when used in colonies, and are hardy.

Make a habit of syringing at intervals and the plants will keep in good condition.

Saturday, Sept. 21.

When potting, do not overpot by planting a small plant in a pot out of proportion to the size of the root system. Overpotting may result in overwatering. Water newly potted plants sparingly until well established. When transplanting, the soil should be packed closely about all roots. This applies to both outdoor and indoor planting.

UNITS OF POLISH CIVILIAN RELIEF TO REVIEW WORK

Group to Elect Officers at Dinner Sunday.

Members of the 105 units of the Polish Civilian War Relief of Chicago will hold an all day meeting next Sunday which will open with high mass at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, 1039 West 32d street. The war relief work of Chicago's more than 400,000 citizens of Polish extraction during the last year will be reviewed.

Mrs. Armella Mix. [Lincoln Photo.]

There will be an afternoon program at the relief headquarters, 1309 North Ashland avenue, had a dinner and evening meeting will be held, at which new officers will be elected and members of the American Red Cross and the Polish unit will speak.

Raise $26,000 Fund.

The 8,000 active workers in the 105 units have raised $26,000 in the last year. This fund has been referred to the Chicago Red Cross chapter to purchase material and distribute it among the members to be made into garments for the people in Poland and for the Polish refugees in Rumania and other countries. Since Sept. 26, 1939, the Chicago Polish groups have completed 40,000 garment and rolled 25,000 hospital bandages.

On that day last September, when Poland was invaded, the Polish Civilian War Relief unit had its inception in Chicago. Its slogan was "Help Save the Polish Nation," and Msgr. Thomas Bona and Mrs. Armella Mix were the foremost members of the group organizing the relief unit.

Thru the churches, clubs, and other groups within the city, the individual units of the relief organization were formed. On Sept. 26, the unit was formally organized with headquarters in the Polish Women's Alliance building, 1309 North Ashland avenue. The space was donated to the group by Mrs. Honorata B. Wotowska, president of the Polish Women's Alliance.

Leaders in Work.

Msgr. Thomas Bona is the honorary chairman of the Polish Relief organization and Mrs. Armella Mix is chairman. Other officers are: Arthur Korzeneski, Mrs. Angela B. Gorny, Mrs. Angeline Milasiewicz, Mrs. Josephine Rzewski, Mrs. Valerie Grotowski, vice chairmen; Miss Marie Kruppa, recording secretary; Miss Jewel B. Palewicz, assistant secretary; S. Charles Bubacz, financial secretary; Mrs. Maria E. Brzezicki, Miss Helene Perlinski, assistant financial secretaries.

John Nering, treasurer; Miss Adella Lagodzinska, Mrs. Joseph A. Slupkowski, assistant treasurers; Mrs. Eleanore Deka, membership chairman; Miss Bernice Eichler, Miss Tess Biegalski, publicity committee; Miss Pearl Suchomski, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Victoria Schlaeger, assistant corresponding secretary.

TEA SCHEDULED BY RODFEI ZEDEK WOMEN'S GROUP

The Rodfei Zedek sisterhood will open the season with a tea tomorrow for the new president, Mrs. Maurice Goldblatt. The tea is to be held at the community house, 1022 East 54th place. Mrs. Florence Bourke Ellis will be the guest entertainer.

The second meeting will be held Oct. 21, and will be entertained by a trio. On Nov. 18, Dr. Morton A. Burman, rabbi of Temple Isaiah Israel, will be the guest speaker. Another scheduled speaker will be Dr. Louis Binstock, rabbi of Temple Sholom. The sisterhood will present a three act play on Dec. 1.

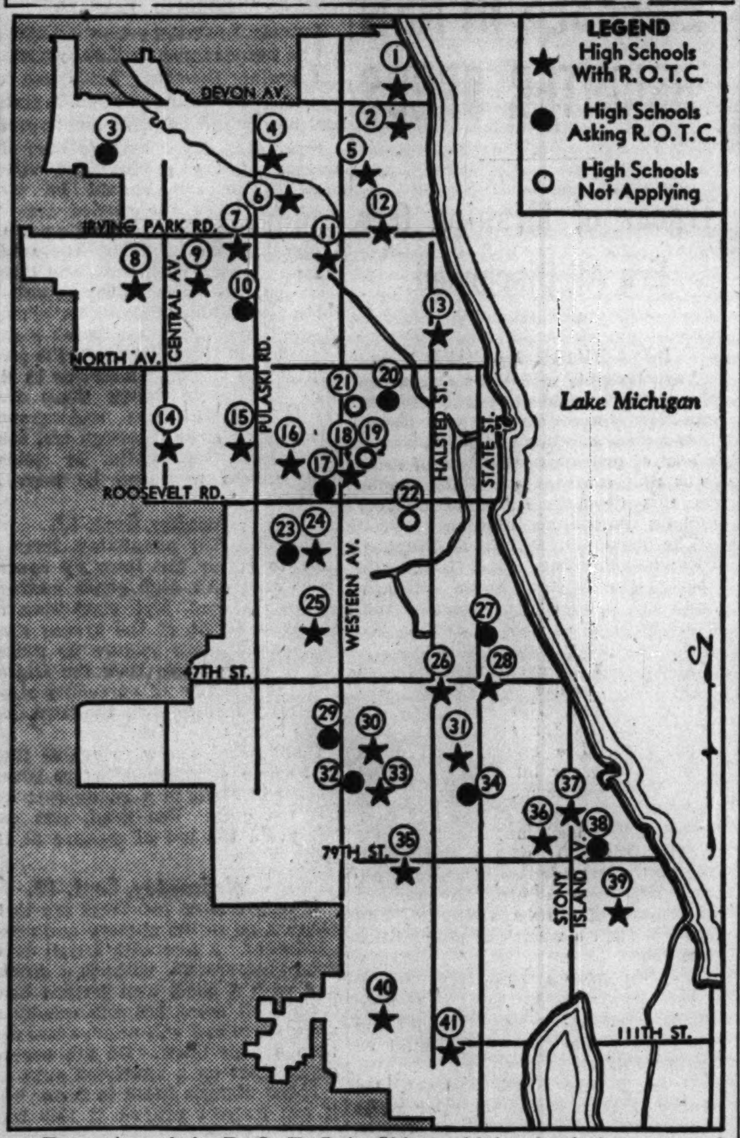
The Sisterhood of Congregation Am Echod, 815 East 81st street, will hold a fur fashion show at the temple on Sept. 25. Chairman of the event is Mrs. Abe Mormolstein, and co-chairmen will be Mrs. Morris Wolfson, Mrs. Morris Aranoff, Mrs. Abe Orlinsky, Mrs. Peter Lerner, Mrs. Moris Geiderman, Mrs. Benjamin Newmark, Mrs. Harry Lukes, Mrs. David Berg, Mrs. Harry Egherman, Mrs. Louis Friedman, Mrs. Irving Amstadter, Mrs. Edward Wilens, Mrs. Abe Frooman, Mrs. Harry Cohen, and Mrs. Manny Wolf.

Sunday morning services at the South Side Hebrew congregation, 74th street and Chappel avenue, will be conducted by Rabbi Morris Teller and Cantor Joseph Giblichman. Rabbi Teller will give the charge to a Bar Mitzvah celebrant.

Plan Chicken Dinner.

The Altar and Rosary society of St. Mary's Catholic church, Plainfield, has selected Oct. 6 to serve the annual chicken dinner.

R. O. T. C. Status of High Schools



Expansion of the R. O. T. C. in Chicago high schools is at a standstill because no funds are available from the war department, Maj. Frank L. Beals, assistant superintendent of schools, announced last week. This map locates public high schools eligible for units, two Catholic high schools, one of which already has a unit, and designates the R. O. T. C. status. The schools by number are:

1. Sullivan, 6631 Bosworth avenue.
2. Senn, 5900 Glenwood avenue.

WORK IS BEGUN IN BEAUTIFYING OF 95TH STREET

Work has been started on beautifying and landscaping 95th street from Stony Island to Colfax avenues. The city contract was awarded to the Central Teaming and Construction company. The work is expected to take approximately 65 days.

Work will include placing and fixing of sewers, putting in fill where needed, and new curbs. The company also will beautify the embankment of the Rock Island railroad nearby, landscaping it with trees and shrubs. What was once a dump and car cleaning spot for the railroad will be made attractive with lawns. The work will cost an estimated $45,000.

TAXIS FIGURE IN 34% OF DANGER CORNER CRASHES

Walkers Careless, Too, on South Park Way.

Negligence on the part of pedestrians and the large number of jitney taxi drivers are the chief factors which have made the intersection of 51st street and South Park way the fourth most dangerous corner on the south side, according to the survey made by the Chicago Motor club of the 20 most dangerous corners in the area.

"Fifty-five per cent of the accidents at this point between January, 1939, and May 19, 1940, have involved pedestrians, while 34 per cent of the total number of cars in collisions have been taxis," Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out. "This intersection ranks among the worst in the city for severity of accidents. During the period under observation there were 38 accidents in which 40 persons were injured."

Lighting Held Poor.

Inadequate lighting was also suggested by the motor club as a probable contributing cause of disaster here, since more than 76 per cent of the accidents have been found to occur during hours of darkness. Of the pedestrian accidents, 85 per cent of the total took place at night.

Motor club engineers say the abnormally high proportion of personal injuries at this point is the result of speed and carelessness. Those involving pedestrians are usually the fault of the walker because he often forgets that the motorist is unable to see him at night as easily as he can see a car. Also his judgment of speed and distance is frequently poor.

Direction No Factor.

The collisions in the period studied were fairly evenly distributed over the four corners so far as direction of travel was concerned, with southbound traffic claiming a few more accidents than the others.

The motor club recommends that police enforce speeed limits rigidly, not only at this intersection but also thruout the length of South Park way, paying particular heed to the jitney drivers. They should also prohibit dodging in and out of traffic and running amber lights.

Pedestrians should also do their part to prevent their own injury by crossing streets only on the green light, and only at the corner. At night they should use extra precaution.

Kahn Club Aids to Start Plans for Fashion Show

The south side auxiliary of the Dorothy Kahn Club for Crippled Children will hold its first meeting of the year today at the Shoreland hotel, 5454 South Shore drive. Miss De Vera Wolfson, president, will preside. Plans for a fashion show to be held in November will be discussed.

Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my life I had heard that horsemanship was the sport of kings. It was a bit surprising, therefore, to find that here in the Chicago area it is by no means limited to royalty, nor even to the very wealthy or the well-to-do.

Thanks chiefly to the forest preserves, the Chicago parks, and the sanitary district, public horseback riding facilities are accessible to Chicagoland people of all walks of life. Thanks to the swiftly growing popularity of the sport, the cost of riding has come down well within the means of all but the very poor.

Having learned the fundamentals of riding, I found available to me a wide range of methods of purchasing my riding.

Get What You Pay For.

Most stables have livery horses, which are rented out to riders at prices ranging from $1.50 or $2 an hour down to the approximate cost of renting a bicycle. In riding, as in most other commercial transactions, you get just about what you pay for, I found from actual experience.

At the higher priced academies I found such advantages as immaculately clean stables, spacious and comfortable club and restroom facilities, and the companionship of genteel men, women, and youngsters.

Horses there represent the cream of the sport. Attendants are efficient, reliable, and courteous. Saddles, bridles, and other equipment are of highest quality, kept clean and in safe condition. Usually indoor arenas are provided.

Such refinements, of course, cost the stable owner more, and he must pass the financial burden along or go bankrupt.

For those who must figure their recreational budget more carefully there are numerous less pretentious stables where the livery fees are, generally speaking, commensurate with the services and environment provided.

Some Offer Night Rides.

The lower one descends in the price scale the fewer niceties of livery riding he finds and the more he is surrounded by the reckless riders who treat their mounts as callously as automobiles and violate most of the rules of the trail.

Many stable owners offer night rides and Sunday morning breakfast rides at special low rates. These are a boon to those whose employment makes it impossible for them to ride during the day.

Outright ownership of horses is on the increase hereabouts, stablemen report. These private horses usually are boarded, groomed, and exercised at established stables.

In some stables it is possible to select a horse from the livery string, and by payment of a special fee reserve it for oneself exclusively by the month.

Club Riding Grows.

This practice has numerous advantages for the rider. It gives him the mount of his own choice, yet does not involve the responsibilities and initial cost of ownership. The stable furnishes saddle, bridle, and pad, and assumes all care of the mount.

Club riding is another growing practice. Members pay regular fees, in return for which they get generous use of a group of semi-private horses, plus expert instruction without additional cost.

One Chicago area stable owner has elaborated on the club plan to the point where he has graded his riders according to their ability, maintaining a group of horses for each class, and awarding promotions to the better riders. Members of his club are required to take regular riding instruction.

5 Millions Paid Calumet Unemployed in Insurance

Gary, East Chicago, and Hammond field offices of the Indiana Unemployment Compensation division have paid out more than $5,000,000 in unemployment insurance benefits during the 29 months since payments started, officials announced yesterday. Up to the first of September the Gary office had paid claimants $2,094,570, East Chicago, $1,719,440, and Hammond $1,190,642.

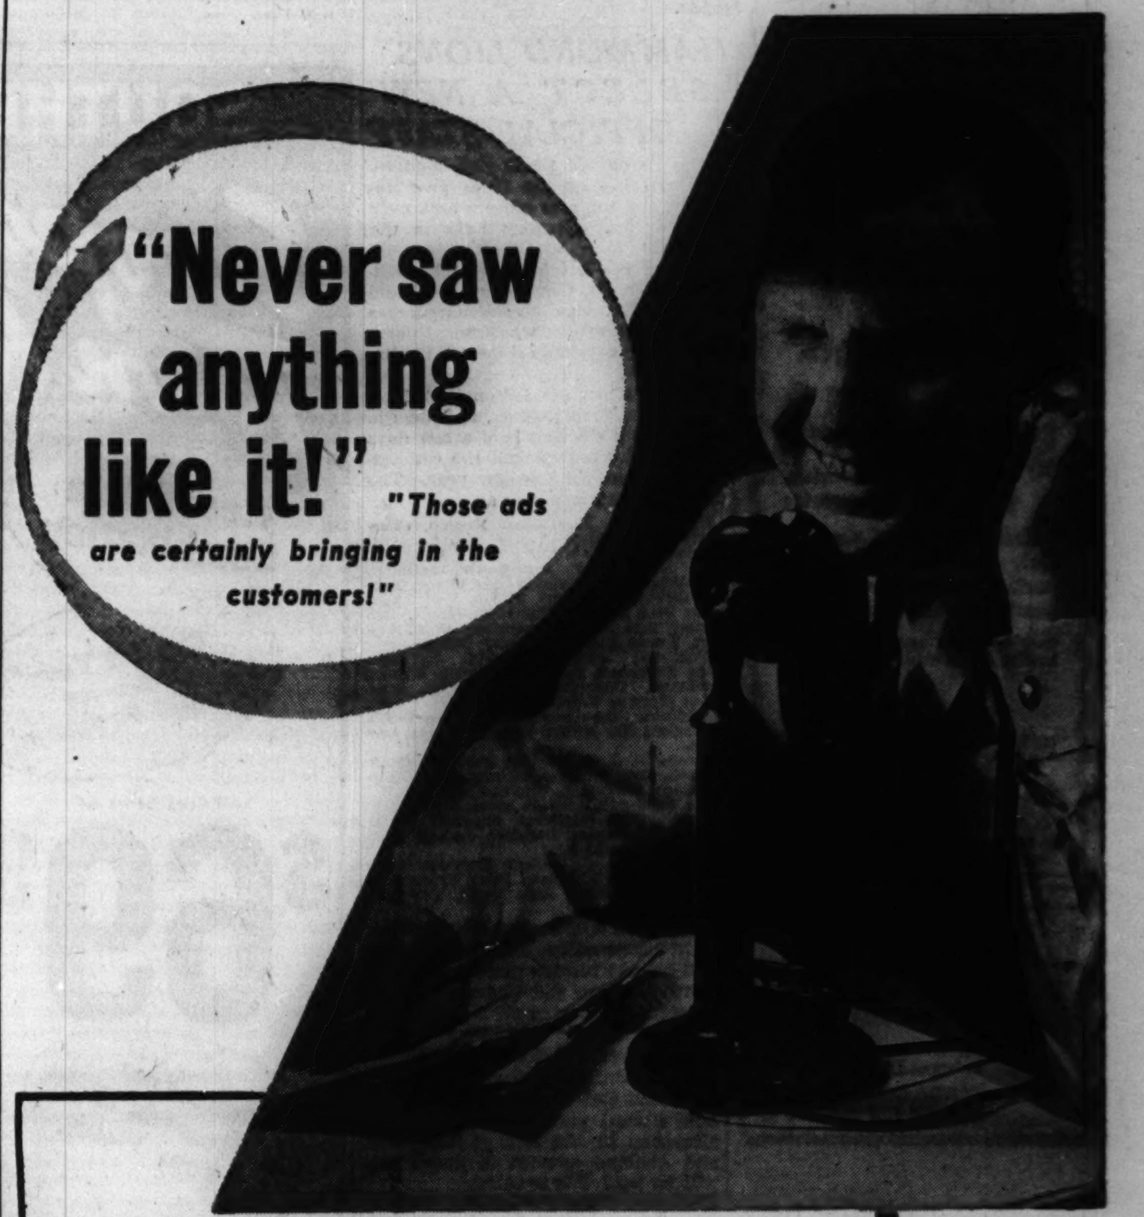
"Never saw anything like it!" "Those ads are certainly bringing in the customers!"



Are you selling all the people right in your own neighborhood who might trade with you?

For more than 12 years, large and small businesses located in many neighborhoods and suburbs of Chicago have proved conclusively that there is no better way to build sales and profits than by running a consistent schedule of low-cost advertising in the Sunday Tribune Metropolitan sections.

During 1939, a total of 745 neighborhood enterprises used this advertising plan to get a greater share of the patronage of the families who can best trade with them.

One or more of these five sections — North, Northwest, West, Southwest, and South — are edited for and read exclusively by the families in your trading area.

For more information about this time and result-tested plan for increasing your sales, call SUPerior 0100 — Metropolitan section advertising.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
SEPTEMBER 15, 1940.

Right: Mrs. William B. Baggaley and her baby son, William Jr., both found "looking for the birdie" a pleasure, apparently. She is a member of the group of south side women that contributes to and works for La Rabida Jackson Park sanitarium.

Below: Dale Pirie, daughter of the former Daisiana Smith and John T. Pirie Jr., looks much as her mother did when she was a little girl. Dale was all dressed up with a hat and a handbag when the photographer snapped her as she was watching a recent sporting event in Lake Forest.

Below: Gloria Gregory's dog is only a make-believe one, but it looks so real that the photographer expected it to bark any moment. Gloria is a daughter of Mrs. Gerard Fogarty of Evanston, who is interested in the work being done by the Cradle society.

One does not have to be very old to register excitement at a polo game, as evidenced by this picture of two Lake Forest children, Corinne McLaughlin and Debbie Williams. Polo has been played at the Onwentsia club almost every Sunday afternoon during the summer, but the season closed this week.

Mrs. Fred W. Fairman Jr. and her little daughter, Leilani, were among the many who enjoyed a benefit party for the Lake Bluff Orphanage given at Mrs. T. Philip Swift's home in Lake Forest. The Fairmans and Leilani spent part of the summer at Castle Park, Mich.

New York Full of Distinguished War Refugees

By Cousin Eve.

NEW YORK

It was a real wrench to leave the easy life at Hot Springs for the hard pan of a large town. The Homestead was getting more fashionable every minute. Lady Ava Astor Ribblesdale of London had just come with all her halo of social prestige, and the autumn crowd was showing up. Of these regulars, the T. Suffern Tailers arrived from Newport and cocktail parties were getting so big o'nights they could hardly be compressed into the small clubroom off the lounge.

Every day more red leaves were trimming the trees, and people with children vanished overnight and the horsey contingent was already strong. In the brilliant weather, large parties were riding the winding mountain trails. And they were beginning to speak of the dog show.

Travelers from Hot Springs to New York have a special sleeping car, which dumps you in New York early for a full day of that popular sport—fall shopping.

One can say now that the earliest hats are quite, quite goofy. As for the earliest frocks—one doesn't trust one's self to speak of them as yet—but one thinks respectfully of last year's Paris things, at least.

At noon I went to Marochka Chatfield-Taylor's studio in Madison avenue to get her to go lunching with me. But she already had lunched and anyway was full of her chosen carrière, dress designing, and her work table was a mass of fascinating colors. But the thing that was exciting this ménage was Otis Chatfield-Taylor's forthcoming theatrical venture. He didn't write it, but is staging a play by Eleanor Chilton that is said by critics to be in the knockout class. A première of the piece, "Father of the Furies," was given 10 days ago at Rye Beach, N. H., in the "Little Theater" group of that old north shore resort. Ruth Logan, the former Mrs. Waldo Logan of Chicago, played the lead very cleverly, they said.

"Why don't you lunch at "the Heavenly Hamburgers?" asked Marochka, who is the most up-to-the-minute girl I know. "It's just across the street and wonderful!" said she, pointing out the window at the green and gray striped awning. Why not indeed, seeing that this lunch counter is the rage of the moment in New York?

"It's a narrow, shingly clean place, with a long counter and stools for 20. Behind was a sort of dais like a shoe shine palace where a dozen more might sit in state. In the window, in snowy chef's caps, two Negroes were broiling and toasting meat and crisp rolls. Others served the counter where sat perched on stools the most "dressy" crowd I've seen in many a day. A long mirror reflected the flash of jewels, the sheen of long bobs, the tanned skins of the patrons.

The plates piled high were wooden, the napkins paper. Some excellent coffee came in blue mugs [the walls are pale blue and silver]. The menu is a short one. Deep-dish apple pie, chocolate cake, heavenly hamburgers, and green corn run the entire gamut. The toasted meat sandwiches were marvelous, and with them were fat slices of Bermuda onions—you could take them or leave them. Next to me were a couple of tall foreigners, undoubtedly refugees. They seemed not to have eaten or slept for many a long day. The wife wore rings most gorgeous, pearls altogether marine, and an air of unhorsed splendor, absolutely pathetic. The husband looked as if a steamroller had passed over him, so deep was his state of dejection. They spoke a language unknown to me, Hungarian maybe, and I felt pity for them from the bottom of my heart—paying two bits for a 15 cent hamburger.

The next excitement was Comte Serge Fleury, who clippered in after two whole months in France, and had been rusticating a few days on Long Island. He was in town to meet the new French ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye—and one took a lesson in how to pronounce that name that looks so simple. It's pronounced Enree-Aye—with just a tiny aspiration on the last H. Count Fleury said this name ought to go well in America—he'd heard little but hey, hey! in the Hamptons—every one was saying it these days!

His saga of adventures including Bordeaux, Vichy, and six weeks in his own Avenue Foch house in Paris were remarkable. He found Bordeaux a seething mass of government, aristocracy, and any one who had the price. A million people were milling, mostly in the Grande place. He encountered Princess Martha Bibesco, ambassadors aplenty, and the haughty young duchess de la Rochefoucauld—more haughty than ever. She is so haughty that she really doesn't speak with anybody, said the diplomat, remembering the old Boston legend of a Cabot only speaking to a Lowell and a Lowell only speaking with God.

Bordeaux was bombed in the night, and these fashionable evacuees from Paris were highly indignant at the audacity of the Germans: "The idea of bombing us!" said they. Paris, Count Fleury said, was extraordinary. His own house with its Spanish maitre d'hôtel was in good order and with a little effort he found plenty of food. The only trouble with life was the enormous walks—no taxis, no gas for his own car. The Ritz was amazing. Two German soldiers with brass hats and bayonets were on guard both at the Place Vendome and the Rue Cambon entrances, and the grand old hostelry was presumably full of the tops from Berlin. However, they did not disturb any of the venerable French people who have lived there forever, such as Baron de Tagny and a half dozen others. M. Olivier, the famous millionaire head waiter, was gone, and loitering around the Ritz corridors was "verboten." As loitering has always been the chief charm of the Ritz, and what one really went there to do, there didn't seem much reason to be going there any more. As for the politeness of the Berliners, said Count Fleury, not only were they very nice to him, but he never saw so much politeness to the square inch in his life as he saw in that hotel—it was an atmosphere of clicking heels and military salutes.

Nobody has written more charming words of the Place Vendome than Serge himself, indeed of all France in his last little volume of essays, "Terre de France." I asked after Baron Bernard of the protocol and heard that he was snug as a bug in a rug at Vichy; indeed you'd hardly believe there had been a war so sound were all the men at the Quai d'Orsay one asked news of. The count is going to make a tour of lectures this winter in the United States, and not the least interesting part of his experiences was Portugal on the return. Seems the Hotel de l'Avisse at Lisbon is the place to go, and Serge ran into the famous James Hagen Hyde there, and the two men went on a junket to the celebrated Portuguese Riviera, beloved and built up by the British. The Hotel de l'Avisse was really overrunning with the fashion and rank of Europe in its last stand before either sailing or clippering home. Quite extraordinary was the jam there of people who hadn't wanted to go when the going was good.

I asked Serge how he liked the Clipper. "Just like being in a bus," said he. His fellow passengers were M. and Mme. Jean Mathis. He is the noted French auto man—from taxi driver to multimillionaire was his stride. Mme. Mathis has the best rubies in Europe, and is as always, a fine, large woman. Mrs. Arthur Woolley-Hart of London was the next refugee, at least she had dashed in from Southampton to patronize a war charity for the British. This fair golden haired beauty, who was once married to the young Count von Bernstorff, son of the former ambassador at Washington, had just recaptured her American citizenship. She was born in Jersey City. Some years ago her present husband, who is a London capitalist, bought Tucker's Island for her, the remote beautiful Bermuda residence of Cornelius Crane, who had tired of the place and wanted to sell. Vivienne said that the Eric Loders, her neighbors of the Riviera in the hilly country back of Cannes, were also at Southampton. Mrs. Loder is the former Lady Mortimer Davis.

While New York in September is fairly quiet, it is far from dull this year. Airplanes go ripping thru the heavens in bias formations and today a huge blimp went soaring across the skies.

One night I went dining in the Rainbow room of Rockefeller Center with a man who had just flown to California and back . the stratosphere. That, he said, was nice and quick, and four miles or so up in the air.

It seemed to me four miles up to the Rainbow Room. It was a clear night, and we saw the bright lights of greater New York like a magic carpet in all directions far below. Yellow chrysanthemums banked the windows of this high dance tower, and the orchestra treated us to rumbas and more rumbas, and a floor show of delightful Spanish dancers, Fernandez and Moro. Also the best torch singer I ever saw or heard, Mlle. Zio. The girl really had something besides a voice.

A sign "No Kissing" wouldn't be amiss in the Rainbow Room these autumn days. You don't mind seeing amorous old swains in Paris when you go to the out-of-the-way places like l'Escargot to eat snails, or Café de Madrid on a race night, or Montmartre on any night. But when one attends a proper show run by John D. Rockefeller Jr. in the heart of New York one maintains that one likes plenty of decorum from the patrons as well.

Dining at the Plaza one night with Mrs. Paul Healy, who should we meet up with but Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Y. Benet, long time residents of Paris. But they live in Washington now, and were homing in from Bar Harbor. Charming people, and they know absolutely everybody. Mrs. Benet is made on the lines of a great American hostess. But Lawrence Benet, with his white imperial, which for the benefit of the young I will say is a beard à la Napoleon II., his decorations, and his old world manner, looks like a French diplomat en vacances. A long residence in France does something to people, after all. With the Benets were an attractive couple, Benjamin I. Connor, judge of the International Court at Cairo, Egypt, and Mrs. Connor, more refugees. They were just fresh out of Egypt, having escaped on the very last trip of an American boat. I asked how Gibraltar looked as they came by in the bright staring blue of a Mediterranean day. He said that the entire straits were so full of British war vessels that you could hardly see the water for ships. As for the Rock—it seemed to be there in person, the same old British lion, a bit somnolent maybe, but there undamaged.

Judge Connor thought he had a life job at Cairo on the International Court. They had a nice house, dragomans, plenty of servants and retainers, and the Pyramids under their nose, so to speak, for they were at Gigeli. And now the genial judge doesn't know what he has, if anything, on account of the Italians, who are harrying the British in Alexandria with bombs. The Connors ran with their dogs and a few sundries, leaving their household possessions behind, and joined the army of refugees going to America.

Mrs. Connor is striking—tall, redhaired, and very amusing. They had lived in Paris before Egypt, and we reviewed the American colony—the Raymond McCunes, now in California; Arthur Moulton and the exciting ladies he marries; Herman Gade, who hasn't peeped since the German invasion. He's a Norwegian now anyway, and I don't know what that'll do for him with the Germans, if anything.

Francis Waddington is in this country, in Boston to be exact. This son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waddington, whose personality you find passing thru the pages of his mother's fascinating memoirs, had to abandon his château near Compiegne because the Germans were headed right for it and are occupying the lovely old place now. Francis, who is about the handsomest Frenchman in and out of Paris, is an officer in the French army and has joined his American relatives in this country. He is a very old friend of Adelaide Taylor Whitman. I was reading a book by Mme. Waddington this summer called "Château Life in France." It dealt with their Norman neighbors when she was a young bride out of Boston.

Henry Waddington was a distinguished diplomat and held the Russian and British posts and many others in his time. Another memoir of Mme. Waddington describes their life in St. Petersburg, the most brilliant court in Europe. They were there at the coronation of the last czar, Nicholas II., and went to Moscow for the ceremonies along with the imperial court and specially invited guests. The author tells with great gusto of the coronation rites and, when all the complicated ritual was over, of the czar's splendid dinner at the Kremlin. Her costume was made in Paris for this supreme occasion and when one of her slippers pinched unendurably she pushed it off. Suddenly the signal to rise was given and Mme. Waddington had to march in the procession with one shoe on and one left under the banquet table.

It was in New York that one had news of a forthcoming ballet with our own Chicago Grand Opera, opening in November. For two years we've had Catherine Littlefield of Philadelphia and, now that she is dated until the end of the New York fair, exquisite creature that she is, we have another star. Lucia Chase was the third daughter of Mrs. Irving Chase of New York and Palm Beach and in due time was married to Thomas Ewing and settled down to family life—in spite of her love for feature dancing. She was good at it. When Tom Ewing died untimely, leaving her a large fortune and much loneliness of spirit, she reverted to her professional dancing. So as Lucia Chase, Mrs. Tom Ewing has achieved fame and will be seen with Chicago Grand Opera.

WED ON SEPT. 7

Mrs. Edward I. Schumm Jr. is the former Miss Frances Mallaney, daughter of Mrs. Marguerite Mallaney of Kankakee. Her marriage to Mr. Schumm of Chicago took place at 10 o'clock on Sept. 7 at the Maternity of the Blessed Virgin church in Kankakee, and was followed by a breakfast at the Hotel Kankakee.

This handsome, large coffee table of mahogany has an amazing top. It's burnproof. A lighted cigaret won't hurt the surface, at all.

New Tables Add Beauty and Comfort

"What's Wrong with Your Room?" a booklet by Edith Weigle, giving simple solutions to complicated problems of furniture arrangement is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. For 3 cents; by mail, 5 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

Tables can do so much for any living room in the way of beauty as well as the way of convenience and comfort that they are of perennial interest to the homemaker.

And if you think that tables are just tables and that the same old styles are manufactured year after year you haven't paid a visit to your furniture dealer's lately. Take the matter of curio tables, or vitrines, for example. Popular in 18th century France and England and used to some degree during the Victorian era in our own country, they have been in disuse for a long time, but, all of a sudden, they are blossoming out again in simplified forms and they are proving so interesting and useful that many styles are now available.

The smartest ones are made like small four legged or pedestal tables, with tops and sides of glass. A little door at the front opens so you can place your treasures inside on exhibition. A collection of porcelain birds, or of old Chelsea figures, or of tiny boxes, or china animals are just a few of the many items one can display in a curio table.

Then, a brand new invention is the handsome coffee table with top of small squares of mahogany, like a checkerboard, that is absolutely burnproof. We couldn't believe this until we tried it out ourself, for the wood looks like any beautiful piece of mahogany. It has not been given an unusual finish of any sort.

You can lay a lighted cigaret on this coffee table, shown in the picture today, and, believe it or not, it will not leave a burned spot. The clever invention that turns the trick is beneath the veneer. You can't see it, but it works all right!

Still another beautiful new-old table is the small silver stand. Made about chair-arm height, its top is a Sheffield silver tray which is removable. Serve after dinner coffee or liquors on this charming affair. And what a welcome wedding present it makes!

Tea tables have been revived and many women prefer them to the low coffee table, placing them in front of the fireplace and drawing up a pair of love seats, or comfortable lounge chairs nearby.

A popular chair-side table for the 18th century type of living room is a reproduction of the mahogany library steps that Sheraton used to make. These are now used to hold books and smoking things and a lamp. The steps are usually inlaid with leather.

For that difficult to decorate corner, why not a tier table? It will fill the space nicely and will hold flowers and books or any sort of small objets d'art. Another excellent place for a tier table is between two windows in a bedroom or dining room where it will make a delightful picture if trailing ivy and potted plants are arranged on its shelves.

The Pembroke table, a mahogany drop leaf with a center drawer, was first designed in the 18th century and has never gone out of style since. It makes a good lamp table, or couch table, and its leaves, when extended, offer additional space for games or refreshments.

Most popular end table for the average living room is the magazine and book table with its convenient shelves. The top is generally used for a lamp. This model can be had in light, natural finishes as well as in dark mahogany.

And before deciding on any table for your home we suggest you visit the model homes shown in Chicago stores, for all of them have just been completely refurnished and redecorated.

Charities and Parties Occupy City's Society

By Judith Cass.

Mid-September finds the city's fashionables in a buzz of activity. Practically every one is at home from long or short summer vacations; every one is rushing around collecting a fall wardrobe; working for one or more charities; going to debut parties, and planning some sort of novel party for a favorite debutante, probably a godchild, for one of the duties of a godmother seems to be to entertain for her godchild when the young lady steps into adult society.

Far away countries that are in need of relief are occupying the attention of many, altho local charities are not suffering as a result of this. Internationally minded philanthropists are not helping Europe or Asia at the expense of national organizations that need assistance; the generous ones are just adding foreign charities to their local ones and adjusting their budgets to meet the emergency.

Two of the city's important social clubs are not opened yet after being closed for the summer, but cleaners and decorators are busy in both of them and before long the Casino and the Arts club will join the Racquet, the Saddle and Cycle, and the Tavern as popular meeting places for the city's smartest. No changes are being made in the decorative schemes of either the Arts or the Casino, so they will be old friends when once again we lunch, tea, and dine in them. The Casino will open its doors on Monday, Sept. 23, and the Arts club will be ready for use on Oct. 1.

The Racquet, the Saddle and Cycle, and the Tavern have been open and busy all summer. In fact, the last named two are gayer and more in use during the warm weather months than during any other season of the year. The Racquet will be the setting tomorrow for a youthful and beauteous gathering, for the mannequin committee of St. Luke's hospital fashion show has invited the buds to appear at tea time and be classified according to height, weight, coloring, etc.

It's a difficult thing for the young things just stepping into formal society to attend this particular tea each fall, for they know that they are being examined by critical eyes and whether they will be invited to be mannequins or flower and program girls depends upon the impression they make tomorrow. Every normal girl would like to be pretty and a perfect 34. Later she may discover that wit and charm are more important than picture book beauty, but, at 17, that seems to be the most desirable thing in the world. So, pity the poor little debs who tomorrow at 4 o'clock will appear at the Racquet club to have tea with Mrs. Huntington B. Henry, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, Mrs. John W. Gary and others of the fashion show committee. The show this year is to be given on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, Oct. 15, in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

On Tuesday at the Ambassador hotel there is to be a luncheon for the patronesses of the Decorators British War Relief Shop, which will open the following Monday, Sept. 23, and run thru Saturday, Oct. 5. It is not to be a rummage shop, but a place where choice articles will be on sale. They are being contributed to the decorators and architects of Chicago and vicinity, who are sponsoring the shop, by many who want to give one article each to help those who have lost everything. A similar sale in New York netted $27,000. Miss Mabel Schamberg is chairman of the committee planning Chicago's shop, and among those working with her are John C. Murphy, Walter Frazier, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. Ernst C. von Ammon, Charles J. Watson, Miss Helen Little, Miss Catharine Rawson, and Miss Lorraine Yerkes.

Mary Magdalene Rediger to Be Bride Sept. 20

The marriage of Miss Mary Magdalene Rediger, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Rediger of 1300 West 72d street, and E. Sanford Wagner of 1619 West 77th street is to take place at 8 o'clock on Friday at the Southwest Gospel tabernacle. After a wedding trip, Mr. Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Wagner of Eureka, Ill., and his bride will be at home at 1300 West 72d street.

The Word "Roux."

The word "roux" means to blend fat and flour together and then use it for thickening soups, gravies, stews, and sauces.

If any handy painter around the home wants to make his paint mildew resistant, here's how: When you open paint can, pour off a little paint, to the proportion of one pint to a gallon of paint. Replace this with ½ pint of turpentine, stir this well and when mixed, add an ounce of powdered calomel to each gallon of paint.

Indian Summer Detains Colony at Bar Harbor

Resort activity of a social and sports tenor will continue at this coastal resort for some time with a large group of the cottage colony planning to remain until well into Indian summer.

BAR HARBOR, ME.

Social entertaining continues along an informal scale, and is marked by picnics in the less populated environs of Bar Harbor.

A recent highlight sports event was the annual swimming carnival of the Bar Harbor club, with many of the late season colonists turning out for the affair, which was featured by swimming and diving events. The Potter Palmers figured largely in the event—Mr. Palmer and Edward C. Thayer of Philadelphia being the judges, Mrs. Palmer presented the prizes, and little Potter Palmer IV. came in for his share of the honors by winning several trophies for his swimming prowess. The event was marked by the presence of two other members of the Palmer family—Miss Pauline Palmer, who is becoming quite a star at the game, took to the tennis courts following the swimming competition, and Gordon Palmer was in the gallery.

Mrs. Harold A. Howard of Chicago and Moseley Hall, Bar Harbor, was fêted at a dinner party given by Mrs. John T. Dorrance of Philadelphia this week. Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Tallmadge, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne, Mrs. Cecil Barret, Mrs. Richard Van Wyck, and Mrs. Stanley Marshall Rinehart, who is more popularly known as the novelist, Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Mrs. Harold A. Howard is departing for Chicago next week, where she will pass the winter months. Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer are planning to remain until the first week in October at Hare Forest, their beautiful estate overlooking Frenchmen's bay. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burrall Pike will be at Greenway court, their Bar Harbor estate, until the first part of October.

Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and her house guests, Mrs. William McCormick Blair, Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps, Mrs. George Dean, and Peter Phelps, leave for Chicago Tuesday. Having sold Baymeath, her estate here, recently, Mrs. Bowen is planning to lease a smaller summer residence next season.

Col. and Mrs. George T. Langhorne were dinner hosts this week at Overwoods, their Seal Harbor residence on County road. Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson won second honors in the weekly putting tournament of the Kebo Valley Golf club last week.

Art Institute Guard Pens an October Poem

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Chicago Art institute has an exceptional body of men in its guards. One of them we have spoken of often before in these columns; he is a musician and poet and a great lover of beauty. His name is Hiram Powers Dilworth and his latest bit of verse [inspired by Inness] pays tribute to his favorite month, October.

"With what fair calendar is told
The story of the sun's decline!
The year hath washed its leaf with gold,
Hath heaped its corn and pressed its wine—
And that it is so brief [I guess]
Is why it hath this loveliness!"

Mr. Dilworth adds: "Art instructs by pleasing. How true this is of Inness, for who paints autumn quite as beautifully as he?"

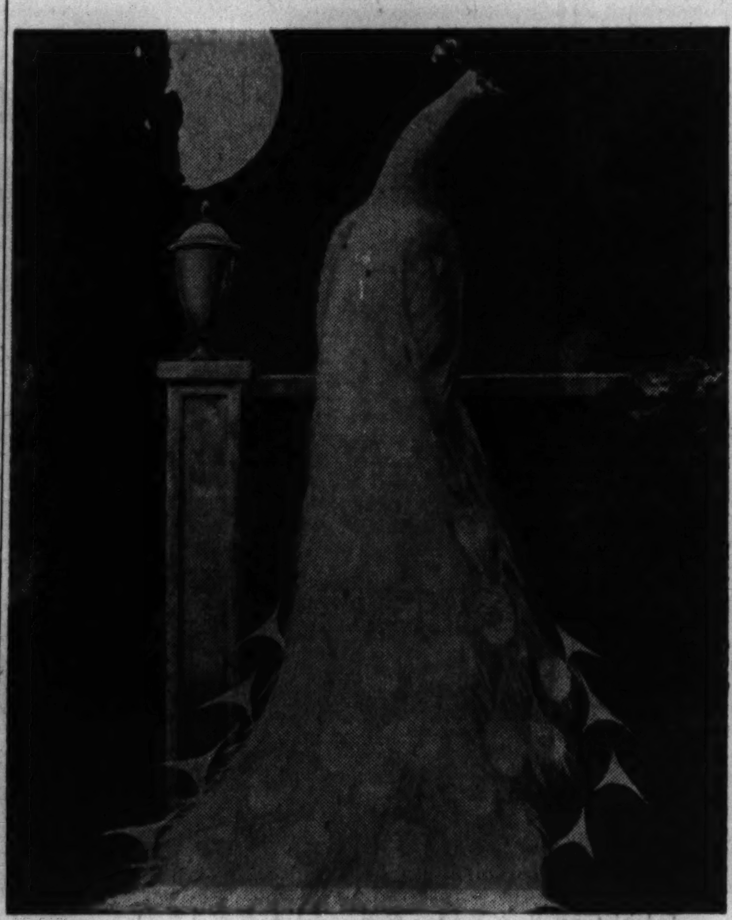
John F. Nichols writes: "Your writeup of the WPA art project was so good I feel that I must write and thank you for it.

"I know whereof you speak as I was on the project for 18 months. Radicalism thru and thru is what made the project so objectionable to me. There were many good conservative paintings turned in to the easel division. These were done by good honest artists who are trying to be painters, not Reds, but these were always [very] well shelved and subsequently forgotten by the easel supervisor, who was busy looking after his favorites. These favorites, of course, were radicals and their work is absolutely out of the question when real art is thought of. However, their kind of atrocious murdering of the king's English [in paint], void of all beauty, form, structure or color, was what was ALWAYS chosen for exhibits. A conservative painting seldom had that luck. The poorest picture from an art lover's standpoint was the project's idea of the best!

"I worked on mosaic work for three months last year with John Stephan, as his assistant. The project never sent one of its photographers out to the job; nor did our work receive any attention or even the most casual comment. You see, it was NOT radical. I did become affiliated with the 'union' when first employed on the project, but I withdrew when I discovered that it was only one more Red organization.

"It is good to be OFF the project now and able to paint freely again! And not to have to curry favor nor feel of small importance. I am painting now as I like and it's great!"

Any one who has followed the WPA art exhibits will recognize the truth of the comment about the scarcity of conservative pictures put on view. Another member of the project told us that the conservative pictures, few in number as they are, were generally sent to the more obscure sort of public institutions where they were decently buried in either attic or basement. At all events, it is not the conservative work done on its pay roll of which the WPA boasts; follow the exhibts yourself and see.



"THE WHITE PEACOCK"

Benjamin J. Beck is a well known Chicago painter who exhibits at the Chicago Galleries and with the All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts. He is particularly noted for the beauty of his paintings of swans; his "Gulls" was an outstanding canvas at the Lake Shore Athletic club last season in an exhibit sponsored by the All Illinois.

Bruce Thompson, Chicago painter, writes: "What interested me especially in your article was the statement about the organized effort to belittle American art. I had suspected that. Having spent a good many years in the advertising business, promotional work as well as the art division, I thought I saw earmarks of propaganda against, particularly, the ideals of American art; and also propaganda of the paid type favorable to a certain relatively small group of contemporary artists, painters of 'social protest' pictures.

"If this organized effort could be uncovered further, with names, sources of revenue, etc., it would be a newspaper job worth doing—or so it seems to me."

The superb example of Winslow Homer, "The Herring Net," is the masterpiece of the month for September at the Art institute.

William Earl Singer, Chicago painter, has left town for a two or three month stay in California, in connection with the exhibit of his portrait of Gertrude Lawrence in the Palace of Fine Arts at the San Francisco fair. The portrait was shown in Chicago at the recent Navy pier exhibition. Mr. Singer will divide his time between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Four of his pictures, by the way, are included in the summer shows at the Art institute.

The Hoosier Art gallery, 211 West Wacker drive, having been closed part of the summer, has reopened with an exhibit of various pictures by a group of artist members. Mrs. C. B. King, executive chairman, who was away from the gallery last winter, is again in charge. Mrs. Charles Roth of Oak Park will assist her. Mrs. Arthur B. Wright, former president of the Daughters of Indiana, has been elected vice chairman of the Hoosier Salon Patrons association. Mrs. Edward C. Twells, who was in charge of the Hoosier gallery last winter, will spend this winter in California. The gallery hours are from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, except Sundays.

From Gloucester, Mass., a card from the portrait and figure painter, Salla, tells of much work on a group of water colors which probably will be shown here this winter.

Irene Castle purchased a painting recently at the American Negro exposition at the Coliseum. It is "Beggars in Spain" by Albert Alexander Smith, a New York painter.

Frozen Desserts.

When adding fruit or berries to frozen mixtures, see that the fruit is well crushed, mashed, or put thru a coarse sieve or food chopper. Large pieces of fruit would freeze in the mixture and not be palatable. Do not add the fruit until the mixture starts to freeze.

Smart Dress for Autumn Is a Respecter of Trends

By Bettina Bedwell.

With or without the bows, this autumn frock is a respecter of trends. It goes in for shirring in the bodice and fullness in the skirt's front panel. What's more, it keeps the sleeves to fashionable bracelet length and leaves the neckline collarless as a background for costume jewelry. Around the slim waistline is a crushed belt of the fabric.

This is the sort of dress that is proving its worth as a social entity. For teas, matinées, informal receptions, evenings with a best beau and other social occasions it is grade A. The original is created in soft, supple crêpe in the color of autumn leaves turning.

We would like to suggest that only "drapable" fabrics be used. Express your fondness for heavier materials in some other dress, or in a suit. All colors of the fall fashion spectrum are "naturals" for this autumn superspecial dress.

Style No. 5365 is designed for sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Salon Patterns, 119 West 19th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! On the House

By Louise Bargelt.

From now on the family will spend more time indoors. There are sight saving units on the market to provide eye saving indirect light for every room in the house. Nicely designed and low cost fixtures, some as low as $2.25, require no wiring but come ready to install as easily as a lamp. Available in two forms, clip on and adapter base. Also in different finishes to prove adaptable to different decorative schemes.

Another development to give better light to a room is a new glass with a faintly bluish tint. For the windows of a room which gets a great deal of direct sunlight, this glass cuts down glare and softens light tho it does not reduce light nor color it. Indeed, it claims to improve vision and lessen eye strain.

Something quite different is a large size wall board for the walls and ceiling of your new or remodeled home. VERY INEXPENSIVE, it comes in panels ranging in size from 4x6 feet to 8x14 feet. One panel can cover an entire wall. Panels come ready to receive a finish coat which has a faint stipple like plaster.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

There's something about a sailor dress or suit that appeals to youngsters. Since there is no reason under the autumn sun why one of their first school outfits shouldn't be a sailor costume, we're presenting this two-in-one pattern for the children's pleasure today. Mothers will like this design, too, since it's easy to make. The one pattern creates both the dress and suit. If two different sizes are required, it will be necessary to order two patterns, but if your youngsters are of a size, the one pattern will do.

The little dress has a V neckline trimmed with the traditional sailor collar. The diminutive bodice buttons down the front, and the skirt flares widely. Braid trims the collar, snug cuffs on full sleeves, and the hemline. The same conditions apply to the boy's suit, except that the trousers are left plain, whereas the skirt uses braid. On both costumes the nautical emblems may be used, either on the sleeves, the natural place for them, or on the blouse. The pattern for the applique designs is included at no extra cost.

Style No. 3464 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10. Size 8 requires 2⅛ yards of 39 inch material, ⅛ yard of contrasting, 7½ yards of braid, for girl's dress; 2¼ yards of 35 inch fabric; ½ yard of contrasting, 4½ yards of braid for boy's suit.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central annex, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

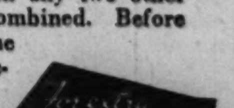
How you can make your apparel budget buy more

Will your new dress have the popular "long, lean look?" Will it have lots of pockets, bishop's sleeves or a blouse top? Of what importance is the 32-inch length in fur coats? You can get more fashion and value for every dollar you spend when you have adequate information about what the stores are offering. You get more news of fashions and values when you read the Chicago Tribune because the Tribune prints more women's apparel advertising than any two other Chicago newspapers combined. Before you shop today, read the ads in the various sections of today's Chicago Tribune.



Make 'Good' Attractive to Young Child

"Reading for Pleasure in the Teens" is one of a number of leaflets on books graded to age. Send a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"Eat it. It's a healthful food."

"Try it. It's so good, just delicious."

Which kind of persuasion would be most likely to make you take a taste? And which would be most likely to tempt a child or an older boy or girl?

Some wise person [or wit] has said: "It's important for us to make 'good' attractive." "Good" IS attractive, but people often present it as dull and uninteresting. The quotation about making "good" attractive would be a good motto for mothers to adopt.

If you were concerned with influencing the reading taste of your son or daughter, and applied the same test to books, which would win out? "This book is wholesome and a classic. I want you to read it, son," or something like "This is one of the best books of adventure I ever read. Want to try it?"

To many high school children, as well as grownups, summer is synonymous with, "Now I'll have time to read." It isn't a bad time for you to notice what your children are reading, and to do some thinking about it. Did you do so during vacation?

Children of certain ages often pick up the idea that good reading must be dull reading. Some of the best books that have been written are red-blooded, human, absorbing, and when they are put in the way of boys and girls are read with zestful enjoyment. Among these are books of adventure, mystery, historical romance, and straight romance.

One of the reasons why children [perhaps I should say boys and girls] do read trash is because they follow the line of least resistance. It's a quite human thing to do, even when you're grown up, to follow the line of least resistance.

The line of least resistance for many children is trash. There are such hordes of trashy magazines, trashy books, that it is not surprising when boys and girls who have no help at home or at school in choosing good reading should read what lies at hand, perhaps on a newsstand, or in the hands of some boy or girl chum, or even at home. What's the answer?

I don't say it's easy to guide the reading of growing boys and girls, altho it is a simple matter to guide the reading of the younger children. There are excellent lists for these earlier years. The children's rooms in the libraries have, as a rule, good selections. The younger children have no preconceived ideas of what they want to read, so they read what you bring in or suggest. And they're not old enough to notice the worthless, semiadult stuff that lies all around.

But it's not as simple as this with the older boys and girls. In the first place, most of us don't keep even with their reading then as we do when they're little. In the second place, many parents don't know how to go about helping them in their choice. Even if parents get hold of lists they find them bewildering. There are so many new books and so many kinds of books to choose from.

But parents need to make the attempt. We're all sure that we want to expose our children to other fine things—beauty in their surroundings, mannerliness, good nature, well spoken English. We think it necessary to do something about it all, if we want to get good results. We should carry the same idea out in regard to books. If we want our children to form good taste in reading as in other things, they should have it before them or within reach.

Children like good things, and it's as easy for them to acquire good taste in books as it is to acquire bad taste, only some opportunity should be provided for the formation of that good taste.

One of the best sorts of opportunity is a home library. If you are a book loving family and have rows and rows of books, if some member of it is always bringing in a good book or magazine, then the line of least resistance is along the line of good reading. Good taste is in the atmosphere.

If this kind of opportunity doesn't lie at hand, the next thing to do is for some one to create it by seeing that well written books for boys and girls get into the house somehow.

One mother whose daughter calmly acknowledged that she liked what her mother called trash, did two things. First, she sat down and tried to remember the books she had liked best at that age. Then she went to the library and enlisted the help of the head librarian. She asked the librarian to rack her brains and name some stirring classic of love and adventure. Of course, you know that the legitimate craving of the teens is for tales of love and adventure. She made up a list. Then she took about four of the most promising home. She asked her daughter to be sporting enough to give them a trial. She kept on doing this, and after a while the tide turned. The daughter came to find the good books fully as interesting or exciting as the others.

In this matter of helping children to form good taste in reading during their teens, teachers can have a powerful influence. Naturally, this influence isn't exerted by the old method of dissection and discussion. This "pulling apart" way of studying fine literature has made countless children hate good reading. A better way is to make available to the children good books, both old and new, that will grip their interest. Many alert English teachers who really care have done it, and it's a fine thing to do.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

With the end of the summer months, fear of the coming winter is apparent in much of the mail which comes to this department. The poor are trying to build a defense against the cold weather ahead, to make their shabby quarters as snug and warm as possible.

Heating equipment is of first importance, and many families are faced with the problem of replacing stoves which no longer will give service. This is particularly difficult for families struggling to exist on meager incomes, which will barely supply necessities, and simply cannot be spread to include the sum necessary for the purchase of a new stove.

A case worker from an agency on the south side presents the case of Mrs. B.

"Five years ago she was forced to separate from her husband because of cruelty and nonsupport, and since then has had a bitter time supporting and caring for her three children. She works every day, but her wages are not sufficient to supply all the needs of the family. Because the children are underweight and in poor health, the agency occasionally supplements with milk and medical care for the youngsters.

"The stove which Mrs. B. bought secondhand four years ago now is so worn that it will have to be replaced, an expenditure which the present income cannot provide. A heating stove, preferably the oil type, since the children are at home after school and divide the work of the management of the home between the three of them, would be very much appreciated."

If any reader has an available stove, the worker will arrange transportation.

From a needy mother on the north side of the city:

"Dear Miss Brown: Again I am knocking at your door. This time my request is for a coal heater and a warm winter coat, size 48. Perhaps some of your readers have these items stored away and, if they are of no further use to them, would pass them along. We just about got thru last winter with the old coal heater. Now it's falling apart and is beyond repair. My coat, which I have worn for many years, just cannot be mended any more."

• • •

Mrs. A. has a slightly unusual request, but one that is important to her livelihood, and which we hope can be filled.

"Dear Miss Brown: I hardly dare ask this favor of you, but as I've been putting it off for some time and hoping that I wouldn't have to call on you, without success, here it is.

"Do you suppose that any reader who is remodeling a basement, or who has no further use for stationary laundry tubs, would let me have them? My neighbor said he'd pick them up for me for a small fee, and it would be a great help to me. My husband is on WPA and we have three children to support on his wages.

"In order to help out, I do washing every other week for two families in the neighborhood. It doesn't pay much, but it helps. I now do it all in my kitchen, but my husband has dug out a bit in the basement, and put in a cement floor. Of course, we must do only so much at a time, as his wages can't possibly be stretched. I know if I could find some tubs he could put them in for me, and the work would be a lot easier on me and on the family.

"My most grateful thanks to you for whatever you may be able to do for us. Mrs. A."

This address is on the northwest side of the city.

A young mother with a baby in her arms is a lovely sight—sometimes. Too often it is a pathetic picture of a tired, bedraggled young woman who is "letting herself go." It is so easy for her to let her hair straggle. With all the washing to be done, her hands often are rough and red. Frequently, out of sheer fatigue, she omits her makeup. There are tired lines in her face from getting up at night and keeping on the go all day.

Any old dress or wrapper will do. Of course, she is all apologies when an unexpected caller descends on her. When her husband comes home and catches her in worried disarray, she doesn't even apologize.

The baby's schedule comes first, of course, but the young mother should have a schedule for herself, too. O, we admit it may not always be easy to follow, but with a little discipline she can keep herself pretty and dainty, and acquire a serenity that will make a better mother of her.

Her schedule should include beauty care, rest and an opportunity to go out.

Her hair may be cut and styled in a simple, becoming fashion that reduces its care to a minimum. While the baby is asleep, she should set aside five minutes to give her tresses a good brushing. At least every other week she should apportion time to visit a beauty parlor. An hour or so will keep her well groomed and give her spirits a lift. Much as she hates to leave the baby, she will handle him and her task much more efficiently when she returns. A manicure, a shampoo and wave and, perhaps, the relaxing pleasure of a facial or a massage, will make a new mother of her.

If her budget makes this difficult, she should at least have a good permanent that she can set herself. Curlers easily may be worn during her morning round of work.

The baby's washing may be a help in her beauty care. Before she plunges her hands into hot suds, let her cream them and put on rubber gloves. At this time, too, she can cream her face and let the warm moisture steam the oils into her skin.

During one of the baby's nap periods she should set aside time for a rest for herself. She should lie flat on her abdomen without a pillow and relax completely. It also is restful to lie on the back with a tiny pillow under the small of the back instead of the head. Of course, there are a thousand and one things to do, but she will do them much more quickly if she relaxes from tension for a short interlude.

As for exercise, if she does her own housework and cares for her baby, she no doubt thinks she has quite enough, but after childbirth her muscles are relaxed. Her health and her figure both will benefit if she sets aside time for a simple daily routine. Walking on all fours and crawling on hands and knees are beneficial. Here are a few exercises good for toning up the abdominal muscles.

1. Kneel with hips in straight line from knees upward and the head bowed down to rest on folded arms. Hold this position and contract abdominal muscles forcibly. Repeat five times and relax.

2. Lie on back, knees bent, feet on floor, arms at sides. Raise hips and fling arms back over head. Return to first position. Rest after six times and then repeat again.

Above all, the young mother should try to avoid the "driven" slump. Deep breathing exercises will relax her, aid her posture and her calm.

She may even practice deep breathing while she is pushing the baby carriage, breathing in while she takes seven steps and out while she takes seven steps. If seven seems too long, let her try five at first. Five minutes a day should be devoted to standing in front of an open window, breathing in and raising the arms above the head slowly, counting seven on the intake and seven for exhaling and lowering the arms.

When there is only the baby to see her, there doesn't seem much point in bothering with makeup, but lipstick and a dash of powder may be applied in a few seconds and will be splendid for her morale. It will keep her from growing so lax that she welcomes her husband with a pale, weary looking face.

Even tho she only takes off one dress and puts on another, dressing up for her husband will rest her and please him. Even on a limited budget the young mother can have attractive clothes. There are so many charming, inexpensive wash frocks. House coats and simple hostess gowns are delightful and easy to slip on. The baby himself will enjoy his mother more if she wears something pretty and gay.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey

Dear Penny:

I don't know why I'm so generous where you are concerned, letting you in on my most precious secrets, such as this flannel skirt that is the most exciting thing in my trunk, to date.

It has plaits that lie flat and give that new slim look. I've made mine in the "shortie" length, of men's wear gray flannel that tailors beautifully and keeps plaits as if they were "built-in." I put the regular length requirements into the design, too, because I think you'll probably want the skirt in both lengths. Of course, we're all going in for the short skirts, just above the knee, which are too snappy for words with knee length socks. Some of "the girls" are knitting their own socks to match sweaters, and that's what I'm going to do as soon as I finish that size 40 sweater I'm making for "him."

My shirt is white, washable silk crêpe with long sleeves for that well known, desirable glamor. Red socks and belt complete this costume that even my conservative, critical brother thinks is neat.

Well, must get back to my knitting, but before I sign off, for size 16 you'll need 2 yards of 39 inch material for the "shortie" skirt, or 3 yards if you make it in regulation length. The shirt requires 1⅞ yards of 39 inch fabric for short sleeved version, or 2¼ with long ones. No. T-8688 comes in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20.

How should group introductions be handled? The answer to this question and to many other problems of introduction which often puzzle the hostess, are given in "The Etiquet of Introductions," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn and Tribune Tower. Price 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

The prominence of a young New York society girl as a night club singer has caused some wonderment among persons who are in touch with this department because of the title Jr. which she affixes to her name. The young woman is Cobina Wright Jr., as you may have guessed.

And you also have guessed that it is unusual for a girl to use the title junior. The purpose of a man's using it is to distinguish him from his father of the same name. Between mother and daughter, however, that same problem doesn't exist, not socially, at least. The daughter is Miss Mary Smith; the mother, Mrs. John Smith. There's no need for distinguishing between those two, because there is no reason why they should be confused. And there are many instances of daughters being named after their mothers, but they do not employ the title Jr.

The answer to the puzzle is this: In the instance of Cobina Wright Jr. [and that is the only example we can bring to mind] it is solely of professional importance. Cobina Wright, the mother, also was a professional singer. And Cobina Wright, the daughter, quite naturally wishes to have her professional career not confused with that of her mother.

Service Men's Wives Are Favored at Hospital

Preference is being given to wives of service men at Queen Charlotte's Maternity hospital in London, England. The hospital reports that in the first world war more than 5,000 babies were born to service men's wives. Many of those babies are in war service today.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

ESCORTED TOURS

Folks, Meet the Beasts in Kruger Park!

By Mason Warner.

KRUGER PARK, TRANSVAAL, SOUTH AFRICA.

We arrived at Nelspruit, the railway station for the park, at 8 a. m. Our guide and motor car, obtained thru the government tourist bureau, were awaiting us. We started immediately for Pretorius Kop, the gateway to Kruger, 58 miles away.

Our guide was a trim figure of a man, 35 years old, an ex-soldier and an ex-game warden. He proved a good companion the four days we cruised the park, and never lost patience with his tenderfoot party, tho I fear he often had occasion to do so.

We began to see things long before we reached the preserve. There is no fence around it, and its denizens wander in and out at will. Five miles from Pretorius Kop we came upon herds of zebras and wildebeests crossing the road. Alongside the road was a row of hummocs about two feet high. The zebras and the gnus jumped the hummocs just like horses.

A dozen wildebeests were performing clownish capers, jumping up in the air, shaking their heads emphatically, tossing their short manes, bunting and butting each other.

"Flies and insects get into their nostrils," volunteered our guide. "They cavort and leap about like that to rid themselves of the pests."

He added: "Zebras and wildebeests herd together, seeking each other's protection. The wildebeest has a keen scent to warn of lions, but the hair over his eyes interferes with his vision. The zebra can see well, and his hearing is all right, too."

We were less than a mile from the camp when we saw our first impalas, hundreds of them, gracefully bounding and leaping about. Their jumps are high and broad; it is recorded that they do 26 feet easily.

We saw so much wild game the first two hours in the park that it was impossible, in our excited condition, to take photographs or make notes while trying to watch both sides of the road. I had a camera in one hand and a notebook in the other; my daughter was doing the best she could under the same handicap. Unfortunately, those crowded first two hours were the zenith of our sightseeing. Not again did we see such numbers and diversity of wild and free animals.

In among the impalas were two giraffes, apparently mother and young. The older one was a huge animal, towering up to the tree tops. They gazed at the car questioningly for a brief period, then meandered away with their awkward gait.

The kudu antelope is a noble animal. We saw several bulls with spiralled horns that must have been five feet tall. There were so many species of antelope that we could not learn to distinguish them all, tho our guide tried to teach us. He pointed out to us waterbuck, sable antelopes, elands, reedbucks, and the tsessebe, said to be the fleetest and hardiest of all. The sable antelope stands its ground when cornered by man or beast and is a resolute and courageous fighter.

Of course, these different types were far apart, and there were long stretches of road with nothing to be seen. There were warthogs in the distance, too far to be photographed, but with their ugly visages plainly discernible. We sighted a leopard stalking silently alongside the road. He was as big as an ordinary circus lion. All the beasts seemed unusually large.

There were groups of animals, pairs, and single ones, every half mile in that morning drive. Zebras, giraffes, and wildebeests outnumbered all others. The dainty little steinbocks, duikers, and klipspringers stood no higher than a short man's knee, their tiny legs no larger than a lady's finger. These gazelles were always alone, and so shy they could not be photographed, as they bounded away at the approach of the car.

Bird life is represented by ostriches, secretary birds, guinea hens, paus, hammerheads, butcher birds, turkey buzzards, and vultures. The last named do the scavenger work for Africa. At one place we noticed queer looking, ropelike links across the road. On close inspection they proved to be caterpillars that hook on to one another and form chains many feet long.

Visitors to Kruger park help one another. Passing cars exchange reports as to game seen and its whereabouts. We were in lion country, but had sighted none. We met a car parked across a dry river bed, and the occupants pointed to the left. After straining our eyes we discovered a family of five lions lying in the shelter of an open faced grotto. We were so close—within 300 feet—that we could see their ears and tails flick, but they did not move away. One of the cubs get up and walked about, but stayed close to the group. We drove on, keyed up for more.

When lions are standing or lying in the road the driver generally drives up up to them very slowly in order to give them time to realize the situation. At the last moment, often when the car is only a yard or two distant, they move out of the way, but without haste or nervousness. Facetious tourists say there are so many visitors that the lions are dreadfully bored with the sight of cars.

After we had been cruising about for half an hour we saw two cars parked about 100 feet ahead of us, facing our car. The persons in one car signaled to look to our left. Our driver proceeded slowly, and suddenly whispered: "There they are!"

I had been straining my eyes ever since we started, looking off both sides of the road.

"Where?" I asked.

"Right in front of the car," he answered.

I looked again and there, not 10 feet away, lay a sleepy eyed, tawny maned lion.

I was in the front seat beside the driver, and my daughter was in the rear seat. I focused my motion picture camera on the lion. Suddenly I heard the rear door slam. Our guide had reached backward and closed it. He earnestly cautioned: "You must not open the car door under any circumstances. See there."

A little nonplussed, my daughter looked down beside the car. There, not 6 feet from her, was a wicked looking lioness, slowly walking up to her mate. She was hardly discernible, because her coloring was so like the surroundings. If daughter had leaned out of the car the lioness might have leaped and struck her. She assured the guide she would not open the door of the car again.

The occupants of the three cars enjoyed the spectacle until the lions, perhaps tired of being stared at, moved off into the tall grass.

The Voice of the Traveler

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcome. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

THE FEEL OF THE NORTH.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 30.—To the Travel ditor: I want to tell you how much I enjoyed Anson Brawn's story, headed, "Life Is Casual in Wisconsin's North Woods," in last Sunday's TRIBUNE. It most effectively captured the smell and feel of the north. I shall hope for more like it. CHESTER P. HOLWAY.

A SHUT-IN'S HAPPINESS.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—To the Travel Editor: Please inform your readers that Mrs. Elizabeth Logue, to whom so many sent letters, has succumbed to injuries resulting from a fall. She was virtually without relatives, and was more grateful than I can express for the friends she gained thru your printing her name and thru the work of the Lena Barr Morse Travel club. These contacts gave her a great deal of unexpected happiness.

[MRS.] HELEN M. PLOSILA.

RACIAL GROUPS.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—To the Travel Editor: "Travelers' Guide" sounds like a name which should be dependable, but Sunday's TRIBUNE seems to have the answer to the question, "How many people are there in Hawaii, and what are the nationalities of the largest groups?", rather mixed up.

May I give you the correct answer?

Japanese, 155,042; Haole [Caucasion], 107,381; Hawaiian and part Hawaiian, 63,858; Filipino, 52,430; Chinese, 28,601; Korean, 6,738.

The above estimated population is as of June 30, 1939. Thanks, and Aloha!

MARGE LALLY.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

Chicago, Sept. 9.—To the Travel Editor: In last Sunday's TRIBUNE Mason Warner wrote that Africa's Kruger park, with an area of 880,000 square miles, was as large as Massachusetts. He must have an exalted idea of the size of that state!

WILLIAM A. EATON.

[Editor's Note: The misstatement was due to a typographical error. Kruger park has an area of approximately 8,000 square miles.]

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Travelers and other Tribune readers are invited to send cards and letters to those unable to share in the wonders of travel. These requests were received last week:

Michigan Ready for Tours Thru Flaming Forests

Newaygo, Mich., Sept. 14.—This, the original Color Tour town, and half a dozen other western Michigan communities are making plans to welcome the annual autumn paint job on the forest clad hills. Trails are being marked out and made ready for the visitation of thousands of tourists who return for a look at Michigan's "flaming forests."

Newaygo county's tour takes the visitor along the valley of the Muskegon river, skirts the Big Prairie desert, and down thru the "Little Switzerland" region.

Barry county is among the newest to exploit the fall panorama of color, with three marked tours thru the hilly lakes country and the Yankee Springs National park.

Kiwanians sponsor the tour along the shores of Manistee lake, thru the Chittenden Forest nursery, and along the shores of Lake Michigan.

The road commissions in the Grand Traverse region, consisting of Antrim, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, and Kalkaska counties, have marked the routes for the benefit of the late fall visitors.

Cadillac will mark tours thru the Manistee National forest, which lies at its back door. Ludington will do likewise thru its Dunes state park, and Baldwin will make use of the national forest in marking its trails.

Gov. Heil to Meet Resort Operators

Rhinelander, Wis., Sept. 14.—Gov. Julius Heil will be guest of honor here Sept. 19, when an effort is to be made to improve conditions in the tourist trade, Wisconsin's second largest industry.

The occasion is the 10th annual meeting of the Heart of the Lakes Tourist bureau. More than a thousand persons are expected to attend.

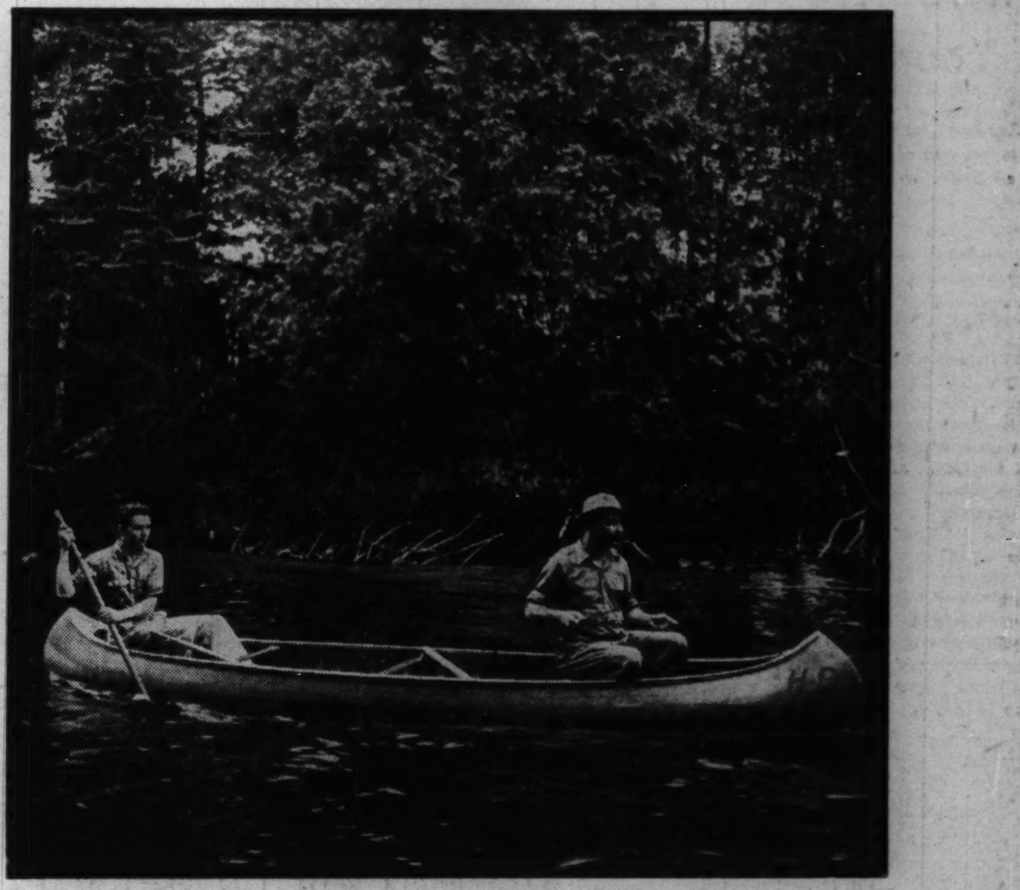
Representatives of the resort trade will suggest procedure to alleviate discrimination and legislation to improve the state's financial condition.

School for Refugees.

One of the famous resorts in Quebec province, the estate of Baron D'Empain in the Laurentian mountains, may become a school for refugee children from England and France.

Thomson Heads Traffic Officers

MURRAY BAY, Que., Sept. 14.—Robert Thomson, passenger traffic manager of the Chicago and North Western railway, was elected president of the American Association of Passenger Traffic Officers at the annual meeting, held here and en route to this resort by steamship on the St. Lawrence river. A native of Scotland, Mr. Thomson began his railroad career in 1890 with the Grand Trunk railway in Chicago.



ONE OF THE HAUNTS OF THE CANOEISTS

The Au Sable river trip down from Grayling, Mich., proved to be one of the favorite attractions for visitors to that vicinity this season. The average jaunt was about 25 miles.

Mammoth Cave Breaks a Record

Mammoth Cave, Ky., Sept. 14.—A 20 per cent increase in the number of visitors making trips into Mammoth cave was recorded in August, figures released today by Martin L. Charlet, cave manager, indicate.

In August of last year 14,541 persons took one or more of the six routes available. This year the number jumped to 17,562.

These figures do not include the all time record breaking day of Sept. 1, when there were nearly 3,800 visitors. On that day the entire personnel of guides, trailers, and surface management was taxed to take care of the crowds. At noon about 2,000 persons were underground at one time, weaving their way thru some of the 23 or 24 miles of underground trails.

Tennessee's Roads Withstand Storm

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 14.—Tennessee's main highways were not damaged by recent rains and floods in some of the streams in the mountains of the eastern part of the state. This was announced today by the highway department.

A few of the secondary roads were washed out in places, but these have all been repaired.

The rains did not damage any of the roads leading to the Great Smoky mountains.

The Great Smokies

• Six thousand square miles in the heart of America have remained a living picture of what this land was like 100 years ago. Mountains wooded to their peaks, peaceful valleys, many still unexplored—this is the Great Smoky Mountain region. Here the vacationer is amazed to hear everyday speech in the accents of Shakespeare, ballads and folktales in the style of 1600 England. You will see the Little Tennessee, Sapphire Valley, Lake Santeelah, Little Switzerland, Clingman's Dome and the giant trees of the Joyce Kilmer Memorial Forest. In season a riot of dogwood, azalea, mountain laurel, and rhododendron, this area contains a greater variety of flora than any other equal area in the world. One of the spectacles of nature is the blooming of the rare Bellwood tree, practically extinct elsewhere. The Smoky Mountains offer a unique vacation. • Consult the advertisments in the Travelers' Guide today, or let the Chicago Tribune Travel Bureau help you plan a Smoky Mountain vacation. This department of the Tribune Public Service Office can supply you with information about steamship, railroad, bus, and plane travel, cost of transportation and accommodations en route for trips and tours to any part of the world which interests you. 'All-Day Singin' in the Ozarks of Arkansas

By Pearl Anoe.

EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK.

When only God and the Indians knew the Ozark country, along came Daniel Boone to find the land of promise. After him, widening the trail, came the land hungry pioneers from Kentucky, Virginia, and Tennessee. They were men and women unafraid of the wilderness, the danger, struggle, and hardships ahead.

This is not the story of those pioneers, but of their descendants, men and women as hardy, strong, and full of hope and faith as were those settlers of the Ozarks. Mingled with the blood of the early English, Scotch, and French may be some Cherokee strain in these hill people who face life today with a stoical courage.

Many things, true and untrue, have been written of the Ozark people. It is true that strangers are met with a ready smile and a cheery greeting, but the hill folk exact the same treatment in return. They are as proud as old time kings—and as loyal to their own niche in the great world. To them home and family are life's corner stones. God is real because they live so close to nature.

At intervals they meet for a homecoming or "all day singin'." On such a Sunday I met for the first time these genuine folk in the country eight miles from this resort—a town no artist can paint and do justice to its beauty.

Between sudden showers on a cool summer day we zigzagged over slippery, unpaved, sandy roads which wound in and out around high cliffs, wooded hills, and shining rivers. And then we were stopping in a grove of great trees, stepping over a little, singing stream into the yard of the old schoolhouse, a stone's throw from the log schoolhouse which has given place to the newer one. The dinner was over—a dinner no city folk will find except at these all day singin's.

The "sing" was in progress inside the one room building as we walked quietly up the old steps and sat down in a long seat before desks worn with age and usage. A few curious eyes turned toward us, but the hill folk, for the most part, kept their faces turned toward the front desks and the platform where the school teacher swung his lithe, slender body to the music of words and song.

His eyes were alight with a strange intensity—with pride and love for his people. Girls with rouge and lipstick mingled with those who had not yet adopted the modern beauty patterns. Men with starched shirts sat close to men with open neck blue shirts. Women with hats and those with tight curls—hatless—bent forward with rapt faces, watching their children stand before friends and neighbors, singing their oft-practiced songs or speaking little prose poems. Banjo and guitar twanged to the lusty singing of trios and quartets.

I realized new why the stars of hillbilly singing whom I had interviewed in Chicago were tops in their chosen field. Those voices I heard Sunday in that little frame schoolhouse will, some of them, cheer the hearts of millions in the years to come. It is in these hills the talent scouts find their "golden voices."

Ministers from country churches mingled loud "amens" with the speeches from Sunday school teachers, school teachers, and pupils. Voices rang out in the chorus of old church hymns when led by the lanky, intense young teacher, as he twanged first upon the table with his tuning fork, then held it to his ear to find the right pitch.

Babies cried and young mothers slipped out the open door to quiet them. Young men stood straight and tall just inside the door. Some day some of these youths will come back to these hills to visit. Others will stay on the home place, plowing, reaping, and marrying, to carry on the ideals and ideas of the hill folk.

Thru the open window the pine-laden air stirred the leaves of the trees and the lush grasses and flowers below them. The bees hummed drowsily—in tune with the tuning fork held by the teacher.

There was no fear of war, no worry lines in the foreheads of these people. If war should come they would shoulder the burden as their forefathers had done in other wars. But on this day of days they were thinking only of their children, the youngsters growing up, needing clothes and education, needing to know God and the good old church songs.

After the "singin'" was over they came toward us to extend hard hands of greeting.

Life is not simple in the Arkansas Ozarks. There are no great factories in the small towns or the country. A living must be wrested from the ground, the hills, and in towns thru small businesses and faith in God and their neighbors. Merchants give credit. If misfortune befalls a neighbor, ready hands reach out to assist him. Most of the hill folk try to live so that they will gather 'round the "Singin' Master" in that happy day when they can catch the right pitch from "Him" and sing lustily because they then will be free from the problems they faced during the years in the Ozarks.

All this—and more—is learned from attending one of these all day singin's in a country schoolhouse in the hills of Arkansas.

Springs of pure water run from, and thru, these hills; hundreds of varieties of birds and plants grow in them. They are almost tropical in summer as they look down upon the rivers which flow slowly after the spring storms are over—rivers lying between valleys and farm lands rich with fields and gardens. These towns and farms are self-supporting. They have bred a race of people some of whom have become known thruout the world, and others of whom have stayed in the hills to keep the home fires burning for the work of rearing future generations of strong, fearless hill folk—men and women who find their first "schoolin'" in the one room schools in the heart of the Ozark country.

If, as we are told, Irish potatoes did not originate in Ireland, and turkeys are not natives of Turkey, and Spanish shawls are not made in Spain, and Panama hats are not manufactured in Panama, where do—or did—they come from? I am especially interested in the Panama hat matter. —L. F.

Potatoes came originally from Peru. Turkeys are indigenous to the North American continent and were first domesticated by the Aztecs of Mexico. Shawls which we used to call Spanish are made near Canton, China. Panama hats come from Ecuador.

The finest of the Panama hats are made near the villages of Monte Christi, Cuenca, Jipijapa, and San Pablo. For the explanation of why they are so called, we must go back to the time of the gold rush to California and the building of the Panama canal. At that time prospectors and officers of the canal bought the headgear in Panama and therefore the name "Panama hats" became current.

The palm which furnishes the straw grows abundantly in Ecuador. This palm [carludovica palmata], is generally known as toquilla and is used not only in the manufacture of hats, but also for making cigaret cases, hand bags, hammocks, etc.

Francisco Delgado, a native of Monte Christi, is credited with making the first Panama hat about 300 years ago. Now the entire population of the province of Manavi, from 6 year olds up, is hard at work for the trade which brings to Ecuador about a million dollars per year.

The myth still persists that Panama hats are woven under water, but this is not true. The finest hats, however, are woven between midnight and daylight, the coolest hours of the 24. The great markets are found at Cuenca and Guayaquil. The hat which takes six months to make may bring as high as $100. Others, of coarser texture, are made by the younger workers in from two to six weeks and sell wholesale for $5 or $6 a dozen.

New Naval Base May Become a Winter Resort

The Island of St. Lucia—one of America's new naval bases—which lies about midway in the outer string of the Caribbees, is little known to the average traveler today, altho at one time it was an important strategic point of the new world and for several centuries was fought for by various world powers. Within a period of 150 years it was held seven times by the English and seven times by the French.

There is no other spot which, for its size, has played so striking a part in the history of the British army and navy. Nelson was there in June, 1805, on his flagship the Victory, while pursuing the French fleet—a chase which ended in the battle of Trafalgar, the destruction of the French fleet, and the death of Nelson.

According to one of the early French governors, "It was the intention of Napoleon to make St. Lucia the French capital of the Antilles and the Gibraltar of the Gulf of Mexico."

In the last century the British were reported to have spent more than $5,000,000 in the fortification of Castres harbor. These fortifications are said to be connected by underground galleries, as at Gibraltar. The British garrison was withdrawn from the island in 1905, but for a long time afterward it continued to play an important rôle as a coaling station for the British fleet in the West Indies.

• • •

St. Lucia is regarded as one of the most entrancing islands of the Caribbean. Masses of mountains rise sheer from the water, their summits bathed in perpetual mist. Impenetrable forests alternate with fertile plains, deep ravines with frowning precipices and beautiful bays and coves. Everywhere there is luxuriant vegetation.

Charles Kingsley once said: "Among all these beautiful islands, St. Lucia is, I think, the most beautiful. What a land! What a climate!"

It was discovered by Columbus on St. Lucy's day in October, 1502. It is 27 miles long by 14 wide, with an area of 233 square miles. It is of volcanic formation and consists of a long mountain ridge rising 3,000 feet.

The crater of the active volcano, Soufriere, with boiling sulphur pools and hot springs, is 2,500 feet above the sea.

The rainfall averages 100 inches, and only one-third of the island is cultivated. The population, which contains traces of French, Spanish, and English blood, numbers 52,000 and is mostly black. The common language is a patois not too easily understood.

The harbor of Castres, at the northwestern end of the island, is the half submerged crater of an extinct volcano. This sheltered basin, 1½ miles long, offers a deep and safe anchorage of 19 fathoms. Ships drawing 27 feet can come alongside the coaling docks.

Martinique, which belongs to France, lies 20 miles to the north, while the British island of St. Vincent is 25 miles to the south.

With landing fields for planes and with adequate hotel accommodations, St. Lucia could become, within a few years, a fashionable winter resort. There are miles of perfect beaches and excellent fishing and boating, while the mineral springs, boiling up around the base of the volcano, offer opportunities for bathing. The island produces all the fruits, flowers, and products of the tropics.

A Successful Season Closes at Watch Hill

By Charles F. Hammond.

WATCH HILL, R. I.

In the season now coming to a close at Watch Hill, the summer colony has given a large part of its time to patriotic work and war relief. The Red Cross flag flew over the Memorial building of the Women's Improvement society where garments and surgical dressings were accumulated to an impressive total before their shipment to headquarters.

The Red Cross also benefited by a golf tournament at the Misquamicut Golf club, and an all day féte which netted $2,000; British War Relief got $300 from an exhibition by Joe Kirkwood, trick golf shot expert; a fashion show producing $900 was promoted by Mrs. J. Russell Forgan for "Bundles for Britain," and a movie resulted in a substantial sum for the American Merchant Marine Library association, to provide the seamen with books and magazines.

The war came close enough when two refugees from Lisbon arrived to tell the thrilling stories of their escape from France. They were the Princess Lobcowicz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme, former Chicagoans, and Erwin Watts of New York, whose exploits as an ambulance driver for the Friends of France had reached Watch Hill long before France collapsed. Mr. Watts was able to aid the princess, who had three young children with her, her husband serving in the French army but lost to his family. The princess and Watts attended the dedication of a memorial on Watch Hill's pretty bay shore erected by Mrs. Ridley Watts as a tribute to her late husband, for many years a prominent resident of Watch Hill.

Mrs. Louise deKoven Phelps was as usual the leading spirit in the golf program at the Misquamicut Golf club. She easily retained her championship title in the women's tournament, but lost an invitation match to Mrs. H. A. Waterworth of Philadelphia. Mrs. Phelps also distinguished herself by lowering the course record for women to 76. Watch Hill golfers joined in congratulating Miss Frances Griscom on the 40th anniversary of her winning the national championship. Miss Griscom, a Philadelphian, has by no means quit the game, but often turns in a card around 90 and takes the measure of many younger opponents.

Chicago had a leading hand in the success of the Hill's annual amateur show which followed up last year's "Whee, the People" with another hilarious Yale undergraduate play called "Again, the People." Phil Peck of Lake Forest, who will be at the head of Yale's dramatics this fall, was a tower of strength, aided by his classmates, George Nichols, son of Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr., and Wally Herrick of New York. With the help of a bevy of pretty girls, including Joan and Sissy Forgan, and a husky bunch of underclassmen they put on a good show that all Watch Hill turned out to see.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard were greatly missed as soon as they had gone. They only spent half the summer at Watch Hill, but while here they were very popular. Mr. Hibbard is always expected to bring novelty into a situation and he seldom fails, whether on the golf course or at a social gathering.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift were especially welcome back at the Hill from which they had been away some five seasons or more. Mrs. Swift enjoyed the new setup that has made Watch Hill brighter and livelier since the hurricane of Sept. 21, 1938—they call it the "big blow" at parties when reminiscences are started.

The revival of the famous old Ocean House—in its time one of New England's most distinctive hotels with a social standing as well as a good cusine—is a source of much gratification to the Watch Hill summer colony. It looked dark last year when the public still had notions that Watch Hill had passed away in that big blow, but this year everything is changed. War abroad may have helped, but the house count rose to old time proportions. Especially popular were the "champagne hour" dancing contests when the Watch Hill young people strove to excel in the latest dance steps to win a bottle of champagne. A distinguished visitor all season was the Finnish portrait painter, C. Bennett Linder, who is said to be the only artist to get Henry Ford before his easel and later got all the Fords young and old because he won the favor of the manufacturer.

For a candid shot, one might pick out the dance at the Beach club when Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt, the President's son and his wife, were down from Nahant as guests of the George X. McLanaghans.

Watch Hill has few rivals among resorts in the matter of religion, its Union chapel celebrating its 65th year at the service of Sept. 6. A. Clifford Shinkle of Cincinnati, O., is president of the society which provides Watch Hill with the best preachers and music for 10 Sundays during the summer.

Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr. is keeping her house, Sunnycroft, open until the end of the month so that her son, Frank Nichols, can recuperate from his recent serious illness. Oren E. Taft also is staying late, but the Swifts sent their trunks off early this week.

Almost the last assembly of the colonists was at the rummage sale which the women of the Hill stage at the end of every season to provide funds for their Improvement society. Each woman goes thru her wardrobe of the gay days and donates various garments to the cause. The aggregate of the day's sale sometimes hits $900.

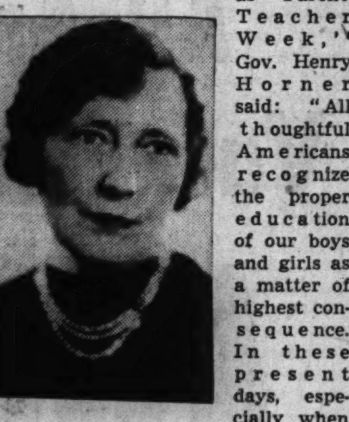
A rather clannish resort, Watch Hill counts on getting together again next June without fail.

MARRIED IN JUNE

Mrs. Frederick J. Lesemann Jr. was Miss Elizabeth Patterson until her marriage to Dr. Lesemann. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Patterson of 4936 Kimbark avenue. The wedding took place in June. [Koehne Photo.]

Youth and the World Will Be Subject of P.-T.-A.

In an annual proclamation, wherein he set aside the first week of October as "Parent-Teacher Week," Gov. Henry Horner said: "All thoughtful Americans recognize the proper education of our boys and girls as a matter of highest consequence. In these present days, especially when our people are one in their purpose to strengthen our democracy for its future problems, we are interested in all that affects the training of our youth."



Mrs. F. Russell Lyon.

Members of the high school conference of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers have picked "Youth in Today's World" as the theme of their all day meeting on Sept. 23 in the Tower ballroom of the Stevens hotel. The exceptional child, juvenile protection, technical high schools, recreation, health, and parent education are among the topics to be discussed.

The board of managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will consider the contribution to national defense which can be made by P.-T. A. groups at its fall meeting from Friday thru Sunday.

Chicago D. A. R. to Have Program on Citizenship

All men and women who have become citizens or who have reached voting age since September, 1939, are invited to take part in a citizenship program to be sponsored next month by the Chicago chapters of the national society, Daughters of the American Revolution, jointly with the Illinois Citizenship conference. The program will be held Oct. 20 on the near north side. These new citizens are invited to send their names to Mrs. T. R. Hemmens, 2508 East 76th street. Certificates of citizenship are to be presented at the exercises.

Miss Florence Deneen. [Underwood & Underwood.]

John D. Black, former president of the Chicago and Illinois Bar associations, will address the Chicago chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at a meeting Thursday afternoon, Sept. 19, at the Stevens hotel. Mr. Black will discuss "The Constitution." The Stevens hotel chorus will sing. Miss Florence Deneen, sister of the late Senator Charles S. Deneen, is new regent of the chapter.

Garden Club Pays Tribute to Mrs. Gibbs

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Upon completion of 25 years as president of the Richmond Garden club, which she founded, Mrs. W. Rockwood Gibbs [Rebecca M. C. Whitehead] was honored this week with a luncheon given by Mrs. Merle D. Graves in her log cabin at Gravesleigh. Mrs. Gibbs, who has been a garden club president longer than any one else in the country, received telegrams of congratulations from Mrs. Samuel Seabury, president of the Garden Club of America, Mrs. Bernhard Hoffmann [Irene Botsford], president of the Berkshire Garden Center, and from officers of the Massachusetts Federated Garden clubs and the Berkshire Horticultural organizations.

The honored guest was presented with a silver mounted gavel, a bouquet of roses, and a corsage of orchids. She gave old members of the club tiny silver loving cups and the younger group received silver match boxes. In speaking of Mrs. Gibbs' quarter century of service, Mrs. Samuel Gilbert Colt [Frances Crane], vice president, said: "Her executive ability, her knowledge of horticulture, and her unlimited generosity in giving her thought and time to the management of the club have been the real reason for its success."

Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice is to give a garden party at Mount Hope farm, Williamstown, on Tuesday, Sept. 24, in compliment to the Williamstown Garden club, of which she is a member. Mrs. Prentice also is enrolled in the Richmond club.

Mrs. Gibbs was in charge of the tea tables and Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Holloway of Glencoe, Ill., presided at a gaily decorated booth at Wednesday's fair held in Stockbridge town hall as an Ascension Farm school benefit.

Following a summer sojourn at Nantucket, Mrs. Mahlon Ogden West is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. McPherson at Court Hill, Pittsfield, while en route to her home on Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Salisbury have returned to Lake Forest from Pittsfield where they were staying with his mother, Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury.

Mrs. William H. Day of Dubuque, Ia., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wait Talcott of Rockford at Rollaway Hill, North Egremont. With Mr. and Mrs. George O. Forbes of Rockford, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett, and Dr. Albert Britt they were among the guests at a beefsteak picnic which Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey T. Barnes gave at Greystone's, North Egremont.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Aug. 20, 1892.

Dear Julia: Knowing that you and Mrs. D. Ogden Mills are calling acquaintances, I feel I must tell you about the visit of her son-in-law and her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, to Illinois. They came, of course, in the interest of his candidacy for the Vice Presidency and were first in Springfield at a large Republican gathering, then came up to Chicago, where Will met Mr. Reid at a reception in the Union League club, following a luncheon given by H. H. Kohlsaat of the Inter Ocean, one of our Republican morning papers.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid.

Will was not invited to the luncheon—that was confined to members of the "fourth estate"—but he was at the reception later. The luncheon guests, Will says, were Robert W. Patterson of THE TRIBUNE, William Penn Nixon of the Inter Ocean, Carter H. Harrison of the Times, Eugene Field, humorous columnist of the News Record; John R. Wilson of the Evening Journal, J. R. Dunlop of the Mail, Harry Wilkinson of the Globe, William Rapp of the Staats Zeitung, Richard Michaelis of the Freie Presse, and Joseph Bruecker of the National Zeitung.

Said Will: "How I should have enjoyed being at that luncheon! Not a dull moment would there have been!" But of course he was not eligible. All these newspapermen are able; familiar with political history and the present situation. All were gratified that one of the great political parties has chosen as a candidate for President a representative of the press.

Mr. Reid seemed to enjoy meeting his brethren of the quill. They said his talk concerned our approaching World's Fair. He complimented Chicago on her enterprise, saying that France's recent exposition was not nearly so advanced eight months before its opening as is our today.

Feeling sure Mr. Reid would know of you, Will mentioned your name, as he was introduced, and he said Mr. Reid warmed to him at once. saying that his wife was a member of some hospital board in which you were interested. I knew, tho Will didn't remember, that it is St. Luke's of New York. You and young Mrs. Reid would be spiritually akin, I know, for she is serious minded and loves to work in church and philanthropic projects. That has been a very happy marriage, hasn't it, in spite of the disparity in their ages? He must be about 20 years older than she, but her parents, I remember you told me, brought her up in an atmosphere of responsibility for her great wealth.

Mr. Reid's career has been typically American. I was interested to hear that the Reids are going to Cedarville, O., where his aged mother still lives. How she will rejoice if he is elected! I never had known before that he was born on a farm, tho I did know he was a graduate of Miami university. His success in journalism is a sort of epic, beginning with his Cincinnati Gazette war correspondence, when he made his headquarters in Washington, covering political as well as military affairs. His Shiloh and Gettysburg dispatches are said to have been regarded by officers who took part in those battles as full of color and vigor, besides being accurate and comprehensive, says Will.

Think of a young man of 35 becoming successor to Horace Greeley, and guiding the destiny of the greatest paper in America! Will says he has kept the position not only by his ability, but by capacity for work. Eighteen hours a day was not at all unusual for him and he had a bedroom in the tower of the Tribune, not having time to go home.

One of the newspapermen, coming out from the luncheon room, showed Will a quip from the New York Commercial Advertiser, which they had enjoyed. I don't know that it was used at the luncheon, but it would have been appropriate. You know, perhaps, that colleges nowadays have what they call "cries" or "yells," which they shout at athletic events to encourage their players.

It is rather a juvenile notion, but has caught the fancy of collegians. Alfred E. Pearsall of New York, according to the paper, has invented this "cry" for the Press club of that city, copying the spirit of the college "yell," which is made up of senseless syllables, ending with the name of the college. I have copied it for you, from Will's copy:

Period, comma, colon, dash;
Sometimes pi and sometimes hash;
Headline, paragraph, column, space;
Editors' shears and printers' case;
Dash, dash! Cash, cash!
Woo up, way up! PRESS CLUB.

Now it is late and I will close. I wish I might have met your lovely Mrs. Reid, but I shall be more interested in her in future. Your loving friend.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Whitelaw Reid [1837-1912] had a meteoric rise from obscurity to eminence. Minister to France in 1888, he returned to America in 1892 and was nominated for Vice President on the Republican ticket. The ticket failed of election in this campaign, but he continued his interest in politics and in 1905 Theodore Roosevelt appointed him ambassador to Great Britain, his ambassadorship being quietly useful, but uneventful. Taking Dorchester house, he and Mrs. Reid entertained on an unexampled scale. His last years were spent in America.

College Yells.

Can any reader tell when and where the college yell originated? In Martha's letter is recorded mention of the custom, evidently rather new, for it is called a "cry." We shall be interested to hear from those who love to recall the past. Do you recall when you first heard a college yell? What was it?

Four Score and Ten.

Mrs. Ferdinand W. Peck, who has had a large part in Chicago's social life, celebrated her 92d birthday on Sept. 2. Mrs. Peck lives at 2238 Lincoln Park west.

Chicagoland Youths, with Pencil and Originality, Boost Candidates

Youthful designers of the Chicagoland area, all in their teens, followed the lead of one Chicago girl and sketched their ideas of campaign hats, dresses and accessories which might be worn by women campaigning for the candidates in this election year. Sketched on this page are twelve of the designs, drawn from the unsolicited originals submitted by youngsters during the last few weeks. Most of the models are hats, but there are two dresses and a group of accessories, too. Miss Morrison's article describes the designs and tells something about each of the youthful fashion artists. All the youngsters are style-minded and want to be either designers or fashion artists when they reach adult years. These models are their way of helping their candidates to win the election.

Teen-Aged Designers Submit Their Ideas for Campaign Attire

By MARY MORRISON

JEAN SEIM, a Chicagoan who is only 13 years old, started something among her contemporaries. On August 2 the TRIBUNE published, in color, a sketch Jean made of a hat for women Willkie boosters to wear. It wasn't long before other youthful designers submitted similar ideas. On simple school note paper, outlined in black pencil and lavishly embellished with red, white and blue crayon, the sketches arrived, suggesting hats, dresses and accessories which the teen-aged creators ardently desire shall be worn by women working for the success of the candidates.

For this page our artist has accurately drawn the models from the originals, which indicate the youngsters have a fair idea of fashion trends. Most of these teen-aged creators are girls, but at least one boy is represented among the contributors.

All of the letters submitted with the color sketches mention the writers' desire to be artists and designers "when they grow up."

The national colors, stars and stripes, and party symbols are the devices used by the youthful artists to express their political partisanship. In some instances the designers suggested materials which might be effectively employed in turning the designs into actual models to be worn. In all cases it is evident that the children are fashion-minded, and that, to say the least, they are refreshingly original.

Top panel, across the page: Sylvia Galfield's campaign hat, a pillbox chapeau trimmed with stars, stripes and party symbol. Sylvia is 13 years old, is "an ardent admirer of Wendell Willkie," and hopes to be able to take a commercial art course. Next is a woman's hat designed by Carolyn Doyle, who is 15. She wishes all women would wear campaign hats to help her favorite candidate. The pompadour-revealing, skull-hugging turban is the work of Gertrude Bukow, who describes the chapeau as her "ideal hat every Democratic woman should wear." Atop the crown is a combination of stars, stripes and party symbols. Gertrude is 16. The G. O. P. hat shown next is 13 year old June Wahl's idea. She believes women will like a "party hat" that is "streamlined and becoming." This "dough-boy" style hat has a crown consisting of the symbolic elephant.

The dress design at the left in a center panel uses Willkie's initial to form the neckline, waistline and pockets. This frock is the design of June Train, who cannot conceive of a campaign hat without a complementary dress. The hat design below is the work of Gertrude Bukow. Next, a costume reminiscent of a drum majorette's, by La Rayne Pease, 13, who tops the outfit with a tall hat inscribed with the party symbol. Sketched to the right is a shallow hat trimmed with a star at the tip of the crown. Across the brim is the candidate's name, and the ribbon band forms a streamer. The creator is Elaine Birmingham, who is 13. For children is the "beanie" hat done by Carolyn Doyle, with stars, stripes and party symbol pendants.

The bottom panel begins with a frilly frock in American colors. The mannequin wears a campaign bandeau, a handkerchief representing the same idea, and carries a party balloon. The designer is Wilma Gergely, who is only 14 and writes: "I do wish to become an artist." A mere man enters the field with the glove, handbag and shoe. He is Leroy Gregory Kaye, who is 14 and hopes his effort will help to put Willkie in the White House.

Last is the trim frock with party symbol belt, star-bedecked collar, and matching off-the-face hat designed by Antoinette Horak, who signs her sketch with a professional flourish, "Toni." She is 16 and has ambition: Her goal is to be a professional artist

Drama Critic Recalls a Visit to Traveling Tent Show

Melodrama By Itinerant Cast Is Well Acted

By Cecil Smith.

By the time these words turn into black type I expect to be staring dreamily at the Golden Gate and the Pacific ocean beyond, or perhaps diving into a platter of fresh caught deep sea fish down at San Francisco's Fisherman's wharf. A belated vacation period has arrived, and for a couple of weeks the local drama will have to get along without one of its most persistent admirers.

It is plain, therefore, that nothing you read in this column today can be particularly topical or up-to-the-minute. For just this moment I have preserved in memory—for three weeks past—the history of a special and out of the way experience that could be told any time.

One Saturday in August I climbed on to the train called the Exposition Flyer. The temptation to stay right on that train until it reached Oakland pier was almost irresistible, but I brought my sleeping moral faculties into reluctant play, and managed to force myself off at Galesburg. For a traveling theatrical company, playing in an old fashioned tent, was in the midst of a three weeks' engagement on the outskirts of Galesburg.

Perhaps tent shows are old stuff to my more sophisticated readers, but this particular city boy had never seen one. I had, on one occasion when I was 18 years old, attended a concert given in a tent by the Redpath Chautauqua in Wheatland, Wyo., but that was hardly the same thing. And anyhow that memory had been fairly completely "screened," as the Freudians say, because the hotel was right next to the railroad station and I was frightened, apparently beyond complete recovery, by a Colorado and Southern train which seemingly came right to my bedside and blew its whistle at 3:42 a. m.

All of which is merely a preamble to the confession that I was fully prepared to attend my first tent show like an open mouthed yokel, and in fact did so. When I asked a taxi driver if he knew where to find the Gifford Players he said, O, yes, he knew where they were, but he was surprised that the people of Galesburg went for that sort of thing. His tone of voice implied, rather unflatteringly, that the appreciation of theatrical entertainment was innately beyond the grasp of the Galesburg populace. Perhaps the Galesburg chamber of commerce ought to reprimand him.

He found the tent easily enough, about a mile out from the center of the city. It was pitched in a large open lot, with a sawdust walk leading to its mysterious portal, and a string of bare electric bulbs illuminating its tan façade. Some 20 cars were parked in the lot alongside the tent, and farther back could be seen the trucks and trailers belonging to the itinerant performers.

I paid 30 cents to the box office lady, and was told that I could have a reserved seat if I cared to pay an extra 10 cents to a gentlemen inside. Having come 160 miles to see the show I felt that I had earned the right to see it luxuriously, and shelled out the dime.

Most of the space inside the tent proved to be "reserved." No places were individually reserved, but all the seats except some dizzy bleachers around the sides and back fell within the designation "reserved section." But the price still seemed modest, considering what the movie theaters in Galesburg had to offer that evening, and I took my seat contentedly with the upper crust.

The big tent, capable of enclosing more than a thousand spectators, was decorated with reasonable gayety—khaki and blue, with a flashy blue and orange proscenium carrying advertising of local merchants and announcements of forthcoming plays. To the left of the stage, built out in the auditorium itself, was a raised platform with a piano, percussion instruments and music stands—but as yet no human beings. In a corresponding position on the right, on a similar raised platform, was a collection of what I took to be curios—black sofa cushions with gaudy flowers of pink and blue; lamps unlike any I had ever seen or ever expected to see; ship models; Indian blankets in the best Albuquerque tradition; dolls; china; glassware, and knick-knacks.

We reserved seat patrons occupied long benches with canvas seats and a strip of wood across the back. When I first sank into the sagging canvas I thought it quite comfortable, but I discovered later that canvas is like sand: it refuses to accommodate itself to the body's natural desire for a variety of postures.

While we waited for the curtain, energetic urchins sold bags of popcorn with utterly fantastic success. Most of the customers were frequent repeaters. Up in front near the curios and knick-knacks a young man kept busy popping fresh popcorn, and his gift for his profession was something to be admired. And neither he nor his diminutive salesmen felt effete scruples about insuring that their product was untouched by human hands.

Suddenly there came a lull in the sale of popcorn. Older men, with tried and true high pressure methods, offered a new bargain—a box of candy, contents unspecified, with a bingo ticket entitling the holder to a chance on the contents of the curio department. The candy boxes, in themselves obviously a poor risk for a dime, went like hot cakes, and before we knew it we were in the midst of the promised bingo game. Three objects went as prizes, including one of the sofa cushions that earlier had smitten my jaundiced eye.

Preliminaries of this sort being over, the orchestra appeared and struck up a lively piece without bothering to tune its instruments. The music was rather awe-inspiring, for I could discover no common factors of rhythm, harmony or melody among the players, and yet they seemed to keep together—or at least to end together. Later on I forgave all, however, when I discovered that the musicians doubled in acting.

Seemingly it is the ordinary custom to give a series of vaudeville specialties between acts of the play. On this night, however, Mr. Roberson, the boss of the troupe, explained to the audience that the vaudeville would precede the play, in order not to disturb dramatic continuity. Several bits of song and dance were presented forthwith, and I must say that I have seen much more uninteresting vaudeville right in the heart of the loop.

Finally the curtain rose on the play, entitled "Out of the Dark." Originally, I learned later, it was called "Hard Boiled," clearly an undesirable title for an attraction aimed at the family trade. An unabashed melodrama with a villain who came close to sending his own sweet daughter to jail, "Out of the Dark" held the attention of the audience in altogether gripping fashion, and even elicited occasional outcries.

The real surprise of it all lay in the fact that the play was quite well acted. Mrs. Roberson, as an ingenue, played with a poise and resourcefulness that could probably win her work on Broadway if she were to tire of the nomadic tent show life. Some of the others seemed better to me [tho perhaps I was feeling mellow that night] than some of the cast we saw in "Margin for Error" last spring. The whole performance had pace and projection—despite the ugliest and most garish interior setting I have ever run across anywhere.

The touring season of the Gifford players [who also call themselves the Roberson players in many of their stands] is about over for the year. Next May they will begin to retrace their route of several years' standing, thru Wisconsin and Illinois, while another company under the same management works over the Iowa territory.

There are, I understand, something like 160 of these tent show outfits, keeping the spoken drama alive in small cities and rural communities of the country. They flourish especially in the south and southwest, and Texas is said to be the best territory of all. Their work is significant in communities where the movies have killed off every other form of flesh and blood theater. And the life, evidently, is irresistible to those who are drawn to it. The best source of information upon tent shows is Bill Bruno's Bulletin, published in Kansas City, with routes and spicy gossip upon all the latest developments.

After being announced and canceled, "Ladies in Retirement" is now back on Chicago's playbills. As originally scheduled, this successful melodrama will open at the Harris theater on Sept. 30 as the first offering of the Theater Guild and the American Theater society. The explanation for all this is quite simple. Gilbert Miller, producer of the play, was finding the tour unprofitable and he decided to close it at the end of its San Francisco engagement, namely, last night. Since the Theater Guild had promised "Ladies in Retirement" to most of its subscription cities, it decided last Monday to take over the management. So the play continues its tour as first planned. The original cast, starring Flora Robson and featuring Estelle Winwood and Isobel Elsom, is still intact.

The second subscription play of the American Theater society will be William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," with Eddie Dowling. It is booked for the Erlanger theater starting Oct. 28.

The cast of "Too Many Girls," at the Grand Opera house, has its own Cinderella in Mildred Law, who dances with Hal LeRoy. Miss Law was originally hired as a member of the chorus. After the New Haven tryout, before the New York opening, Robert Alton, the dance director, decided that LeRoy needed a partner in his fast first act specialty. Miss Law had what it took, and she was elevated from the chorus to the list of principals just in time to knock 'em dead when "Too Many Girls" opened in her native city of Boston. Her real name is Mildred MacMurray. She chose her stage surname because her father is a lawyer.

After a four week engagement "Too Many Girls" will close its Chicago run on Saturday night, Sept. 28. This seems all too short a stay for such a fresh and intelligent musical comedy, but there is one compensation: A revue of considerable note, "Meet the People," will follow it immediately into the Grand Opera house, opening Sunday, the 29th. Chicago will get the original cast of this show, which has stood Los Angeles on its ears for a full year. More about this one next Sunday.

As Ellen Turner, the emotional young college professor's wife in the frolic at the Selwyn theater called "The Male Animal," Elizabeth Love plays her first part in Chicago. She is no newcomer to the stage, however, for she made her Broadway debut six years ago. in the sole feminine rôle of "Strictly Dishonorable." Arriving in New York from her home at Lakeland, Fla., in search of an opportunity on the stage, she was lucky enough to offer her services to Brock Pemberton just when that producer needed a girl with a southern accent. More recently her Gulf coast speech has been valuable to her as Cindy Lou in "Kiss the Boys Godbye" [not the Chicago company]. Another of Miss Love's important engagements was in "She Loves Me Not," first in London, and later as the successor to Florence Rice in the New York company, opposite Burgess Meredith. She has also been seen in "Three Wise Fools," "By Your Leave," "Off to Buffalo," and "The Fireman's Flame" [the last an American Music hall revival].

N. U. Outlines Principles of Student Loans

By the Rev. John Evans.

There are some very fine theories behind the student loan funds that nearly all college and university administrators have to wrestle with. One of these contends that a million dollars of investment in a loan fund could be made actually of more value to the university from the income standpoint than a million dollars of endowment with average interest return.

Moreover, such funds, theoretical studies have shown, could be set up without actually withdrawing money from industry—which ultimately pays America's education bills, anyway. The university, under such a plan, would give some form of trust agreement to a donor for a certain sum of loan fund money. The donor could count this agreement among his assets. It is merely a loan to the university backed by the university's credit. The studies show that if the loans are properly made and insured, the fund would actually appreciate.

But!

And here enters the student's conscience after he has derived educational benefits from a student loan. Administrators say—like doctors of many of their patients and hospitals of many patrons—that the conscience of the beneficiary of a loan fund is a pretty limpid affair, and collections are hard. It must also be remembered that these collegiate borrowers mostly are minors.

Northwestern university looks at its student loan setup with experienced eyes, and that experience has made it necessary for the publication of principles of the conduct of the fund for the benefit of less experienced institutions. Northwestern's first principle is the denial of justification of its loan fund on a commercial basis.

The loans, this statement asserts can only be justified by educational ends. Such a position affects administration procedures all down the line from its making until each loan is liquidated. Insistence on repayment—despite an allergic conscience—is of course basic, but differing from methods of collectors of commercial accounts.

"Student loans so administered as to lessen the borrower's sense of responsibility for meeting his financial obligations defeat any legitimate educational purpose," Northwestern's statement declares. "It is our belief that want of appreciation of this important fact results in such lax and generous administration that some student loan funds do much more harm than good."

The statement then recites three approaches to collection problems:

1. The borrower who can must pay. Indeed, whatever the terms of his legal contract, he must recognize a moral obligation to repay as soon as he can do so that the money may be available for others who need it.

2. The borrower who, despite his best efforts, cannot make payment at a given time, must be spared the sting of unjust criticism and inconsiderate treatment.

3. Those who cannot pay must be made to realize that the burden of proof is upon them, that failure to pay imposes upon them a double obligation to make frank and frequent reports; that, as Northwestern tells them, "A man's credit rating is determined, not so much by how promptly he pays, as to how he acts when he cannot pay."

At the beginning of 1939, Northwestern reported $437,159.43 in its loan fund. The average number of loans outstanding is about 4,000 and the average amount loaned to any one student is $200. Most notes provide repayment in six annual payments with interest beginning at date of graduation. Because of this fact, together with sound collection methods, the average loan is repaid in two years instead of six.

CHEZ PAREE'S SINGING STAR

Kitty Carlisle, the lovely dark haired singing star of movies, stage, and radio, is the current headline attraction at Chez Paree. Her musical accompaniment is played by Emil Coleman's orchestra.

One Handed Pianist.

Drama Notes

The theater committee of tthe Society of Allied Arts of Milwaukee, organized last spring to establish a resident, professional theater, will not tackle its project this season. Margaret Rice, manager of the Pabst theater and guiding spirit of the committee, said she found "no lack of readiness to coöperate" in the venture, but preoccupation with world conditions left no time for the work involved. She justifiably concluded that "the project must have the right start or it doesn't go"; so the plans to make Milwaukee a producing center were postponed.

In the meantime, the committee is pursuing the best course it could to build and organize a theatergoing public. It will offer a subscription series of five plays at the Pabst. Four of these are Theater Guild productions: Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," with Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt; the Helen Hayes revival of "Twelfth Night"; Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story," with Katharine Hepburn, and William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," with Eddie Dowling. The fifth production will be announced later.

Here is an example of extreme versatility: Arnold Moss, who played the ruthless Mexican bandit in the Al Jolson show, "Hold On to Your Hats," when it was here, leaves the cast in New York tomorrow to begin rehearsals in Maxwell Anderson's religious play, "Journey to Jerusalem." Joe Vitale takes over his rôle in "Hold On To Your Hats."

Three cast changes have been made in the Clifton Webb company of "The Man Who Came To Dinner," which is now playing in Detroit. Diana Dalton has shifted from the rôle of the secretary to that of the glamorous actress. Sally McMorrow plays the secretary. James McColl replaces Gerald Savory as Beverly Carlton, the burlesque Noel Coward. Helen Flint, the actress in last year's cast, is out of the cast altogether, along with Mr. Savory.

Chicago Opera Company Will Open Season November 2

Imposing List of Artists to Be Presented

By Cecil Smith.

The first season of the Chicago Opera company begins seven weeks from last night, on Saturday, Nov. 2. I say "first season" both accurately and deliberately. This is a new company, with new policies and new aims. The Chicago City Opera company has not been reorganized; it is dead as a functioning institution, tho I suppose legally its charter still exists. Many of its most valuable people will be working for the new Chicago Opera company, to be sure, and nobody would wish it otherwise. But the important fact to notice is that local operatic production has gotten off to a fresh and infinitely promising start.

Before proceeding to a detailed forecast of the season, let us first look into the guiding personnel of the Chicago Opera company. Walter R. Kirk, its president, is a man of extensive executive experience and of high standing in the community. Henry Weber, the artistic director, is a musician of unimpeachable personal integrity, a Chicagoan with great aspirations for the city, and an administrator who has already shown his talent for organization and discipline under difficult circumstances at the opera house last season.

For the first time since the demise of the Civic Opera company, the stage direction will be centered in the control of a single, completely competent régisseur for the duration of the season. William Wymetal, the distinguished son of a distinguished father, brings to his task the wisdom of one whose own talents are rooted in long and excellent tradition. Nobody ever heard of an operatic stage director in Chicago in July, yet Mr. Wymetal spent a considerable time here last July mapping out plans for autumn production and getting scenic construction and changes under way.

From all appearances, Chicago will have the most brilliant opera ballet in its entire history. The Ballet Theatre, whose first season in New York last winter proved even to skeptics that an American-managed ballet company could succeed on terms comparable to those of the Russians, will be here for the whole season. In addition to operatic appearances, the Ballet Theatre will give two all-ballet programs each week, with stars of the first magnitude in new and standard ballets.

For some years the conducting staff at our opera house has been weak. Good performances require good conductors, and there simply cannot be a good performance without a good conductor. On the 1940 roster can be discovered such impressive names as Artur Rodzinski and Italo Montemezzi [composer of "The Love of Three Kings"]. In addition to Mr. Weber, the list of conductors also includes Maurice Abravanel, who has already introduced himself to Chicago successfully at W-G-N and at Grant park, and Paul Breisach, a conductor who comes with the highest recommendations from central Europe.

Many new singers will appear at the opera company for the first time during the six weeks beginning Nov. 2. Zinka Milanov, Czech dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera association, sings in the opening night "Aida." Jarmila Novotna, likewise a Czech but a lyric rather than a dramatic soprano, will present to Chicago her Violetta in "La Traviata," a performance widely heralded as one of the most moving dramatic impersonations since the days of Mary Garden and Claudia Muzio. Margit Bokor, a comely and versatile soprano from middle Europe, will come here directly from the San Francisco season, where she introduces herself to this country.

New to the list of the contraltos are Suzanne Sten, who sang at Ravinia in 1939, as Octavian in concert excerpts from Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," and Risë Stevens, the young American mezzo-soprano who has won extremely favorable critical attention at the Metropolitan. Richard Crooks and Jan Peerce join the tenor roster for the first time, and José Mojica, a great favorite and an admirable artist in the Civic Opera days, returns after a long absence. Important newcomers to the baritone section are Alexander Sved and Mack Harrell.

Next Sunday I will tell you in more detail of some of the operas and casts which are promised for the season. Meanwhile, examine this list, still partial, of the artistic personnel:

Sopranos: Rose Bampton, Margit Bokor [new], Janet Fairbank, Kirsten Flagstad, Dusolina Giannini, Enya Gonzales [new], Virginia Haskins, Helen Jepson, Florence Kirk [new], Dorothy Kirsten [new], Marjorie Lawrence, Zinka Milanov [new], Grace Moore, Jarmila Novotna [new], Lily Pons, Kathryn Witwer.

Mezzo-sopranos and contraltos: Karin Branzell, Sonia Sharnova, Suzanne Sten [new], Risë Stevens [new], Lydia Summers [new], Enid Szantho, Elsa Zebranska [new].

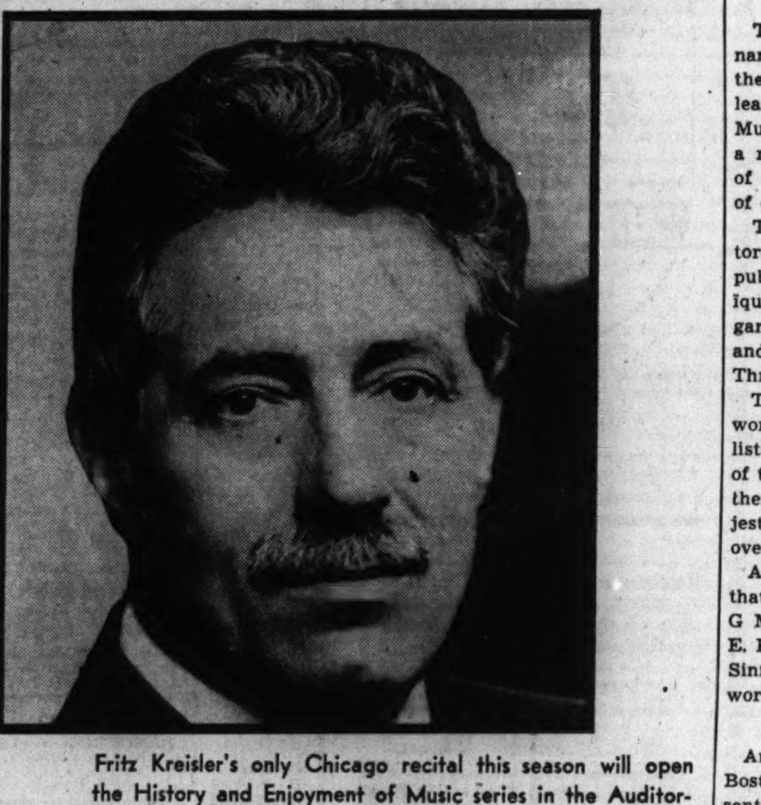
Tenors: Kurt Baum, Jussi Bjoerling, Richard Crooks [new], Frederick Jagel, Charles Kullman, René Maison, Giovanni Martinelli, Lauritz Melchior, James Melton, José Mojica, Jan Peerce [new], Tito Schipa.

Baritones and basses: Douglas Beattie, George Czaplicki, Fred Destal [new], Mack Harrell [new], Virgilio Lazzari, Carlo Morelli, Ezio Pinza, Alexander Sved [new], Lawrence Tibbett, John Charles Thomas.

Conductors and assistant conductors: Maurice Abravanel [new], Kurt Herbert Adler, Carl Alwin, Paul Breisach [new], Angelo Canarutto, Leo Kopp, William P. Martin [new], Edwin McArthur, Italo Montemezzi, Artur Rodzinski [new], Henry Weber.

[This is the first of two articles on the opera season.]

TO OPEN MUSIC SERIES



Fritz Kreisler's only Chicago recital this season will open the History and Enjoyment of Music series in the Auditorium theater on Oct. 20. Later, on Dec. 12 and 13, he will appear as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra in Orchestra hall.

Recordings

To record collectors to whom the name César Franck means simply the D minor symphony, Victor's release of an album entitled Organ Music of César Franck will serve as a reminder that the organ was one of the composer's favorite mediums of expression.

The new volume contains the Pastorale [from the Six Pieces for Organ published in 1862], the Pièce Héroïque [from the Three Pieces for Organ published in 1878], and the third and a movement of the first of the Three Chorales published in 1890.

They are mystical, deeply felt works of music worthy of careful listening. Charles M. Courboin, one of the finest of living organists, plays them in a dignified and often majestic manner, but guards against oversolemnity of style.

Another good organ recording is that of Handel's Concerto No. 11, in G Minor. On a single 10 inch disk E. Power Biggs and Arthur Fiedler's Sinfonietta give the courtly little work a pleasing performance.

Arthur Fiedler, this time with his Boston "Pops" orchestra, is represented on another 10 incher by a dynamic presentation of the overture to Smetana's "The Bartered Bride."

The Russian Dance from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka," arranged for two pianos by Pierre Luboshutz, is played by Mr. Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. The arrangement is apt but the performance is somewhat lacking in verve. On the reverse side of this disk the two pianists play Mischa Levitzki's "Valse Tzigane."

"When I Am Laid in Earth," from Henry Purcell's 250 year old opera, "Dido and Aeneas," is recorded on a new 12 inch disk by Marian Anderson. The sad overtones of her voice find rich employment here. On the reverse side Miss Anderson presents another beautiful old time song, Alessandro Scarlatti's "Se Florindo E Fidele."

The dances and march from Borodin's "Prince Igor," played by Eugene Goossens and the London Philharmonic orchestra, turn out brilliantly in their re-recording in Victor's low priced black label series. Filling out the final side of this six part album is the Polonaise from Tschaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin," played by the British Broadcasting company orchestra under Sir Adrian Boult's direction.

Other new black label releases are an orchestral arrangement of the Brahms waltzes played by a group of musicians under Walter Goehr's direction, and songs from "The New Moon" and "Bittersweet" by Anne Ziegler and Webster Booth.

Notes of Music and Musicians

The Chicago Bach chorus, directed by Theodore Lams, has resumed its weekly rehearsals in anticipation of its first winter concert in Orchestra hall. The group meets on Thursdays in Kimball hall at 8 o'clock. Applicants for membership will be given auditions prior to rehearsals during this month but not thereafter. Most of Bach's Christmas Oratorio will be presented at the first concert, scheduled for Dec. 7.

Recently returned from a tour of South America, where it won much acclaim, the Massine-directed Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo brought back plans for additions to its répertoire. One will be a work called "Concert of Europe," consisting of several nationalistic items stemming from the European capitals, with a score adapted from the works of Weber. Balanchine's version of Stravinsky's "Card Party," first done by the American ballet, will enter the répertoire of the Russian company, and Massine has promised to create a ballet to George Gershwin's music. Tschaikowsky's Nutcracker suite is destined for resurrection in its ballet form. Down in South America, meanwhile, the company lost one of its principal dancers, Nini Theilade, who married a Hollander she met during the tour.

The Singing Strings trio returns this week from a summer tour of Michigan and Wisconsin and from a session of radio broadcasting in Sheboygan. Mary Katz, first violinist and director; Anne Rubocha, second violinist and vocalist, and Bernice Tobin, cellist and pianist, constitute the trio.

At 8 o'clock tonight Arthur C. Becker, dean of the music school of De Paul university, will dedicate the rebuilt organ of St. Vincent's church, 1010 Webster avenue, with a recital. The church choir will also participate in the program.

On Sunday, Sept. 29, the Woman's Symphony orchestra and its conductor, Izler Solomon, will open a series of radio concerts, featuring guest soloists, under the title "Design for Happiness." The programs will be played from 4 to 4:30 central standard time, and details will be available in the radio section.

The Chicago Club of Women Organists will hold its first reception and musical of the new season on Monday at 8 o'clock at the Woman's University club, 410 South Michigan avenue. Music will be supplied by Florence Boydston, contralto, and Emma Marzullo and Edith Heller Karnes, pianists.

Tomorrow morning the box office at Orchestra hall will open for the sale of season tickets to the Chicago Symphony orchestra's golden jubilee year. On Tuesday the woman's committee of the orchestra will hold its first meeting. Opening dates for the Symphony's several series have been announced. The Thursday evening-Friday afternoon pair will start, of course, on Oct. 10 and 11. Popular concerts will begin on Saturday, Oct. 19, and continue every other Saturday night thruout the season. The first of the Tuesday concerts will be given on Oct. 22, while the remainder will fall on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month of the season except in November. Due to the orchestra's eastern tour there will be one Tuesday concert in that month, on the 12th, but there will be three in December, on the 3d, 17th, and 31st. The regular series of six young people's programs will begin Wednesday, Nov. 20, and continue on the third Wednesday afternoon of successive months. The new set of similar concerts for public school children will start on Wednesday, Nov. 6, and continue on the first Wednesday afternoon of each month.

Station WAAF's opera festival, presented by the Chicago Opera company, will offer a "quiz" program from 5 to 7 o'clock tonight. Awards, in the shape of season tickets and individual performance tickets for the 1940 opera season, will be given to successful members of the radio audience who participate in the contest. Judges will be Edith Mason, Claudia Cassidy, Sonia Sharnova, Leo Kopp, and Alexander Aster. Winners will be announced next Sunday.

To celebrate its 25th anniversary the Swedish Choral club will give three concerts this season instead of the usual two. There will be the annual "Messiah" presentation during the Christmas season. In the late spring the anniversary will be specifically noted with a performance of Haydn's "The Creation," sung by the society at its initial concert. In between these presentations is scheduled a concert of miscellaneous but distinguished works: Mozart's "Coronation" Mass, Kodály's "Te Deum," Beethoven's "Choral" Fantasia, and Bruckner's setting of the 150th Psalm. Harry T. Carlson continues as the club's excellent director.

Harry T. Carlson.

William Hughes and his Central church chorus are back on the job with the resumption of services in Orchestra hall this morning at 11 o'clock. Mr. Hughes will direct his choir in Andrews' "Build Thee More Stately Mansions," Bach's "In Faith I Quiet Wait," and Rachmaninoff's "Glorious Forever." Archer Lambuth, organist for the church, will play selections by Jenkins, Stebbins, and West. This is the beginning, by the way, of the Central church's 65th year in the loop.

Group to Aid Distribution of U. S. Music

The Council for the Advancement and Diffusion of American Music has established an American Music center at 17 East 42d street, New York City, as a central depot for the distribution of American music with as much facility as possible. The enterprise is strictly noncommercial and is wholly in the interest of native musicians. At the center all types of compositions—vocal, symphonic, instrumental, chamber, choral—have been collected, whether printed or recorded.

It is a place where conductors may come and examine the scores to find material he would deem suitable for his orchestra's répertoire. He can find there works he knows and likes, as well as new compositions, all at hand for comparison with each other. The center will also act as a reference bureau, furnishing small but useful data for inquirers: playing time, prices, publishers, new developments of interest.

In the near future it hopes to add a manuscript rental library of orchestral music, an invaluable service to both conductor and composer. A governing board for the center exists, composed of Otto Luening, chairman; Quincy Porter, Howard Hanson, Marion Bauer and Aaron Copland. The executive secretary is Harrison Kerr, and all communications concerning the center should be addressed to him there.

The American Composers Alliance, Inc., located at the same address and recently mentioned on these pages, has no nominal connection with the center but exists for similar purposes, "to encourage the performance of serious American music and to provide a means of securing just compensation to the composer for such perforances."

TRAIN NOW FOR THE New OPPORTUNITIES in ACCOUNTING
Accounting, for 20 years past, has offered outstanding opportunity for ambitious men and women. Growing fast, paying well for ability, leading often to executive positions, this profession is also unusual in that the beginner can (shortly after he begins training) get a job as bookkeeper, statistical clerk or junior and earn while he prepares for the higher jobs.
Today those opportunities are greater than ever. The lessons of the depression, the keener competition, increased government regulations—all demand more and better accounting, more bookkeepers and accountants in business offices and in government departments.
INVESTIGATE—Without Obligation
We shall be glad to tell you frankly about the requirements and possibilities in accounting—whether you are fitted for it, how much preparation you will need, what it will cost you.
For 25 years this school has been teaching accountancy. Everything is geared to practical training—to make you capable and successful quickly and at low cost. From this and its parent school have come over 10% of all Certified Public Accountants in the United States.
Naturally, we hope that our facilities and our record will lead to your enrollment, if you are one who should enter accounting. But at least, investigate accounting and its opportunities. Write, phone or drop in—without obligation. Open evenings and Saturday.

REEL (AND REAL) MR., MRS.

Mama and papa, "reel-y" and really! It's like this, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell are co-starring in "I Want a Divorce." And Joan and Dick are Mr. and Mrs. in private life. (Chicago.)

Osa Johnson's Adventure Film a Real Thriller

"I MARRIED ADVENTURE."
Presented by Columbia.
Produced by Osa Johnson (Mrs. Martin Johnson).
Narrator—Jim Bannon.
Presented at the Studio.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

I'd forgotten how fascinating animal pictures could be!

I was charmed by the Studio's offering, "Adventures of Chico," and found myself thoroly enjoying the little theater's present feature, "I Married Adventure," starring the exploring Martin Johnsons in the screen adaptation of Mrs. Johnson's book, written after the death of her husband.

This film consists of a galaxy of movies filmed in Africa over a period of many years and adroitly joined together to make a feature length movie. It takes up the Johnsons shortly after their marriage, 27 years ago, when they started their explorations, following Jack London's route thru the South Sea Islands, then pressing on to Borneo.

They returned crestfallen from the latter point, having been foiled by torrential rains and jungle fever which laid Martin Johnson low. . . . But in New York awaited the great explorer, Carl Akely, to remind them of work to be done in Africa, to inspire them and fill them with zeal to continue the work of photographing wild life, human and animal, on hitherto unseen frontiers. . . .

So to Africa they went—and from here on the film is thrilling seeing.

Impressive sights are the flocks of flamingos, reminding you in their formations and flights of Busby Berkeley ensembles. You will watch a leopard and a wart hog battle to the death—of the leopard; a baboon mother teaching her baby how to climb a tree; a lion, killing—and killed; Mrs. Johnson facing and putting to death a hate and pain crazed rhino; the capture alive of a great orangutan after a fight in which a native is killed, and, most memorable episode of all—to me—was one photographed from an airplane showing a thundering herd of all sorts of animals migrating in a desperate quest for water—all enmity forgotten in their common need. . . .

Many other sights thrilling and fearsome meet your eyes. But talk about your savagery in the "uncivilized" wastes of Africa—it has nothing that can compare with the unbridled brutalities of today—in England!

This is a silent picture enhanced by splendid narration. Mr. Bannon has a voice that is very pleasing, and sense enough to keep still once in a while.

See you tomorrow.

Current Music News

The Anshe Emet synagogue, Pine Grove avenue and Grace street, has acquired a new musical director, Max Sinzheimer. A native of Frankfort-am-Main, Germany, Mr. Sinzheimer received his musical education at the Universities of Heidelberg and Munich and as a private student of Hans Schilling and Walter Braunsfels. He has conducted symphony concerts and operas at the court theaters of Darmstadt and Mannheim and was the founder of a chamber group whose performances of contemporary music won wide recognition. Over the radio he has given organ and harpsichord recitals. He was conductor and organist of the Mannheim Jewish congregation and until recently served the Temple Adath Israel in New York as choir master and organist.

paid Faildyke for my purchases yet. I was to send my check to your father, Ames," Perry lied glibly. "And the amount's considerably more than Faildyke's debt to you. So . . . here's my check for . . . what's the exact sum, Cathie?"

She gave it mechanically. It had burned itself into her usually uncertain memory.

Peregrine took his check book out of his pocket, bent over the desk and in an instant handed to Dick the green thin slip.

Dick received it. He was at a loss. He pocketed it with a mutter of thanks. Then he turned and walked over to the door. There, holding fast for steadiness, he shot his last bolt.

"Your lover," he said, "has paid off part of what you owe me, but not the whole of it. Not by a long shot. Some afternoon or evening, indoors or out, I'll be coming to collect the remainder, Miss Keithan. Till then, I'll bid you good night."

He smiled in triumph, seeing her startled pallor, and went out. The door closed fumblingly.

Peregrine cried, "Shall I go outside and lick the tar out of him?"

"No, Perry. No. Please. He's not himself. He's been drinking."

"Obviously. But I don't like him. I don't like his ways at all. You should never let him into the house again. Will he get out now, off the place?"

"I think so." It was on her tongue to tell him the worst of her news, Dick's terrible suspicion of his father, when Perry began urgently, "Look here, Cathryn, you've got to carry a gun. You've got to have one near your bed at night. It's not safe, living alone the way you do now in this big house. Matthew's deaf and feeble.

"The servants sleep too damn far away. And you go walking about the place in the woods. God knows how far, with that toothless old hound of Jed's. Here, there's a small revolver—there used to be one always in the table drawers One of Rufe's. The big room. Come with me. If it's still there I'll show you how to handle it . . . if you don't know already."

Cathryn decided to keep the story of Jim Ames' getaway to herself. It would need confirmation. She was a tale told by a drunken tongue. She followed Perry silently to the big table, where he found the small deadly weapon he remembered.

"Look," he said, "no old hand ever carries more than five bullets. I'll fix it for you. Pull back the hammer before you shoot. That will throw a cartridge into the chamber. Until you do that the gun is safe. Do you get all that? You ought. . . ." His voice faltered, his eyes lost themselves in hers; unguarded eyes, beseeching eyes, the eyes of a beggar. The blood crowded into his thin face.

He put the gun . . . and he had forgotten to tell or to remind her of its double action . . . into her small cold and tremulous hand, bent her fingers about it. Lowering his head, he kissed her hand again and again, tenderly, wildly, tragically. And so, without another word he stood up and forced himself about and left her, left the room, left the house. She heard the sound of his motor humming, rising, going far away. He would send a groom, he said, from Jepson's stables for the two horses.

Perry Leaves Cathryn Alone with Pistol

Perry had gone, leaving her with a pistol in her hand. She stared at it and at the hand he had so ardently, mysteriously, mutely kissed, then vaguely, as tho for warmth and shelter, put both into her pocket.

. . . .

Martin Sylvester soon left Cicily and Jed together at the table in the Greenwich Village restaurant. He had a theater engagement. Until then all the talk had been his. Jed maintained the absent look he had worn during his dance with Cathryn Keithan, while Cicily kept glancing at Jed and away with the candid curiosity which gave her, in Martin's phrase, her "greedy" look. No sooner had he left than her reticence, never her strongest quality, broke down. She leaned toward Jed who was playing with his coffee spoon, his eyes lowered, put her index finger lightly on his wrist and said, "Tell me please, why did you dance with her?"

Jed rarely colored, rarely gave himself away by showing resentment or astonishment. Now all three weaknesses were his. He pushed back his chair a trifle, met her eyes with an iron look. "If you mean 'her,' Cathryn Keithan, why shouldn't I dance with her?"

Cicily drew back, looked hurt. "I'm sorry. I didn't know you'd mind my asking. You've talked to me so often about . . . about your affairs—"

"Have I? I rather thought it was you who talked to me about my affairs. . . . I beg you pardon, Ciss. That was rotten of me. Don't walk out on me, that's an angel child. My temper gets worse every day. You've a right to ask me anything you please. I danced with Cathryn. . . . Now, why did I dance with Cathryn?" He frowned and ran his hand back over his head. "Because I wasn't expecting to see her. And I was thinking of Faildyke. I'd been thinking of Faildyke all day. I saw a notice in the paper. They're selling off the hunt, all the hunters, the hounds . . . and I was feeling badly about it. Like a deserter. Faildyke prosperous, believe it or not, wasn't so hard to give up. But Faildyke going down hill, Faildyke under the hammer . . ." he gave Cicily then the confidence of a haunted and despairing look, the look of an exile heartsick for his home.

"But Cathryn is not Faildyke."

"In a way, she is. She can't help it. She's part of the whole thing, the whole story. She was a child there with Rufe and me. And Perry. Yes, Ciss, Cathryn is Faildyke and she too is under the hammer, going down hill. She has that look."

"I thought she'd never looked prettier or gayer, Jed."

"Pretty she is. And gay. And sad to break . . . well, any heart that ever cared for her."

"Did you . . . ever . . . care, Jed?"

"I'm surprised that you should ask me that. In the words of Shakespeare, 'What, would'st thou have a serpent sting thee twice?' The little Keithan serpent has stung me almost to death. No, I never cared for Cathryn in the usual sense of the word but, in another sense. I've cared. She's seen to that. She doesn't let any Galt forget her, Cicily. She's been a care to me. She's been a weight, a millstone round my neck, she's darn near drowned me. Day and night, my dear confidante," he gave her one of his slow warming smiles, "I've felt the burden of her."

"Like a chicken killing dog that has a dead bird hung round his neck," suggested Cicily, who was seriously proud of this rare excursion into simile.

Jed smote the table and laughed, long and loud, as people laugh in moments of relaxed tension. "Oh Cissie, my darling, what a joy you are to me!" at which she blushed and smiled dubiously but with the enchanting sweetness of a good-natured child in sympathy with grown-up's incomprehensible mirth.

"I don't suppose, of course," she asked him when his noisy and her vague amusement had left them serious again, and now she looked less candid than usual, "you'll ever forgive her . . . she being what she is."

"Oh," said Jed, "it's not what she is I can't forgive. You don't hate a woman for what she is, not even for what she thinks. It's for what she does. My count against her is sufficiently formidable. She's stolen, cheated, threatened, lied, insulted, humiliated me. Oh, let's forget her, Cicily—the bad dog's punishment!"

They sat, then, smoking, thoughtful and listening to the music. But Cissie could not quite relinquish her theme.

After a while she began tentatively again. "As a matter of fact, Jed, I should think you'd be glad to hear of financial trouble at Faildyke. You've been prophesying it for ages. You always said that Rufe and Mr. Galt and Cathryn were improvident. And . . . I don't know, of course you've never said it in so many words, but I had an idea that it was your plan for Cathryn to be so hard up, so unable to keep Faildyke going, that she'd sell it to you . . ."

Jed set his narrow head between his hands, the cigaret sending up a slim blue feather above it. He groaned. "Oh, wise young Cicily. How shrewd you are. It was my plan. But look at me, look at the city, look at the state, the country. Haven't we just gone thru a bank holiday? My salary's been cut, my fees are zero. My income, so-called, has shrunk like that six inch plank one inch for six years. You see before you, my friend, a pauper. I'm going to move out of my apartment and live in a 'room,'—instead of in 'rooms' like a dignified barrister. And out of nothing how can I save the price even of a ruined Faildyke? No, somebody else will have to buy Cathryn out."

Cissie had an immediate, and she felt a simultaneous vision, of a possible buyer up and out and in of Cathryn Keithan. But this name she did not utter. Thoughtful and anxious, she went home. The fruit of that incursion of hers into Jed's privacy ripened a fortnight later.

Cicily Tells Jed She's Become an Heiress

She called Jed in his office to the telephone.

"Jed, where have you been?"

"Nowhere, Cicily, or rather, right here."

"Have you given up your apartment?"

"Can't. My lease runs until next October. I've been trying to sublease. Do you know of some one?"

"Jed, did you read about my uncle's death?" Cicily sounded breathless.

"Your uncle?"

"Mr. Harold Sydney."

"Oh Cicily, I am sorry. I saw the notice, of course. I've been unpardonably negligent, I should have written, come to see you. . . ."

"No, Jed. He was an old man and had been hopelessly ill lately. Did you know that I'm his heiress?"

"No Cicily!" Jed could not keep the rather awed astonishment of a trained worldling out of his voice. Harold Sydney has an estate, colossal, active, philanthropic, profitable, to the tune of many millions. This pink checked, pink lipped girl, just twenty-one years old, with her great candid eyes of a good boy! "I suppose you are to be congratulated. But it must be fairly overwhelming."

"It is. I've been dazed. Jed, there's something I must talk to you about at once. Can you get off now . . . or at lunch time?"

"Now, if you like. I'm rather painfully unoccupied."

What Cicily had to talk about was a proposition so staggering, so devasting to his planned career, so filled with fantastic promise that the interview, involving half a dozen of her advisers, lasted Jed all the afternoon and most of the next day. And at the close of that dizzy, yet sobering interval, Jed found himself alone in his monastic quarters, face to face with a changed destiny.

The final decision was his and as yet he had not made it. He knew, better than any one else, what it would involve.

Cicily—with her advisers about her, men who had in the meantime looked up Jed's record, investigated his every act, studied every possible report as to his conduct, character, opinions—had gravely offered him, with her new quaint air of authority, the position of manager of the Harold Sydney estate, at a salary to take the breath and with opportunities for investment and for profit that if he were not a very simpleton must make him eventually one of the richest of New York's wealthy citizens.

But . . . but . . . there had been another interview, in Cicily's studio, alone.

Jed had taken her there at the end of the business meeting which had been held in a magnificent private dining room, most New York business being conducted over a lunch table . . . in a Long Island moving picture studio. In this company Sydney had owned a preponderant interest and of it Cicily was a director.

Now she advanced toward her own fireplace, throwing back her fur collared tweed coat from her athletic shoulders. Her face was flushed, her eyes were sparkling.

Jed, moving more slowly, as tho drawn without volition, in her wake, stood silent for a few minutes, then lifted his head and essayed one of his gradual smiles.

"What can I say, Cicily?"

"What do you need to say, old darling?" She stretched out the hand unoccupied by the now kindled cigaret. "Between you and me . . . well, we don't have to explain ourselves."

He took the hand, pressed it warmly, came to her side and held the hand at the length of both their arms, standing together like a man and wife, before their hearth.

"Are you happier, Jed?" she asked him softly.

"Not happy yet, Cissie. Enormously flattered, terribly moved. I'm scared."

"O, silly, Jed! Now, I'd never have guessed it. I thought you weren't capable of being scared."

"I'm not half the man I pretend to be, not one quarter of the man you think me, Ciss. I never was the man that . . . Rufus was." He gave a sigh as of profound exhaustion.

"Here! Poor Jed! I'll get you a drink." She rang, Katie received the order quietly and filled it.

"Have you thought," she demanded presently, both seated now, relaxed and at their ease, "what you can do—if you accept my proposition?" The last phrase was obviously said in a jest. She had not for an instant foreseen a declination.

"I've not had time to think. I'm stunned."

"You asked for a few days to think it over."

"It will take me a week to come back to consciousness."

"Then you haven't realized that you'll be able to buy back Faildyke?"

The color sprang from Jed's starved heart to his face of an exile. He stared up at her. "By God, Cissie. I hadn't thought."

"If you're my manager, Jed, you can draw on the estate for any amount necessary. And yesterday I heard a rumor. It came from Jack Humbolt, who was in town and came to see me. He was at the Faildyke sale. They're saying at the lake that Jimmie Ames has absconded with all available Faildyke funds and all the proceeds of the auction."

Jed was on his feet. "By God," he ejaculated, fiercely triumphant. "I said so." He smote palm with fist, began to prowl the floor. His face was brilliant, white, with a vindictive, agonized victory.

"If father had been told. If he had been allowed to listen to me! Cicily, I can't help but hope it's true . . ." and then he added in another key: "Even at that, she's well rid of him."

"Cathryn?"

"Yes. He wasn't a safe henchman. I never yet told any one. I thought I never would . . ." Ash-gray, he came and stood before her and, as tho forced beyond the strength of his own will, he told her in halting voice and stammering words the story of his suspicion as to Rufus' death.

Jed Tries to Comfort Weeping Cicily

Cicily shrank down into her chair. "O, Jed, how horrible! I'm glad your father didn't know. It would have been you or him."

Jed, who had flung himself to the far end of the room, spoke in a strained voice to himself. "She told me that day I was a murderer." Then he returned. Cicily mercifully had not heard. She was weeping.

Jed knelt beside the chair to comfort her.

She turned impulsively and flung her arms around him. Her hair fell fierily across his shoulder, was warm beneath his cheek.

"O, Jed, Jed. Don't I mean Faildyke, too?" She began to cry, clinging to him with all her strength. "I was one of those children. Look, Jed . . ." she drew herself away a little, dried her eyes, spoke in the voice of a sobber, "you and I, we're both exiles. And we're both homesick. Faildyke has broken both our hearts. Listen to me, Jed darling. I loved Rufus. You know how much I loved him. I don't think I'll ever love again like that. When he left me for Cathryn, something died, went all cold and stiff and heavy in me. And I don't know whom you've loved or when . . . ?"

Jed was reminded. "Rufus told me once when he was angry enough to be brutally honest, that I hadn't a feeling in me, that I'd never loved a woman in my life, would never love one. He said . . . I never seem able to forget . . . 'you'll marry some girl who'll help you get ahead . . .'"

Cicily had drawn her head up and back a little on its long, strong throat and she was tremulously smiling. "And I'll marry," she said, "a man I trust, and an ambitious man, a brilliant man with a career. Jed, think it over during your week and let me think it over. It seems to me . . . we're each other's best bet . . . a . . . sort of necessity. We mustn't freeze up, dry up for want of courage and human affection.

"Maybe we're not romantic or . . . passionate. But we do need each other and . . . we need Faildyke. It might be . . . sort of . . . fun," said Cicily as Jed rose to his feet and stood, pale, smiling down at her, "to build up Faildyke together—how about it, Jed?"

FOREWORD—A story of espionage in modern Germany, and how the love and daring of two persons carried them thru danger to success and happiness.

NOBODY would have dreamed that Herr Herman Herring was deeply concerned. But nobody would have dreamed that the quiet, Bavarian craftsman, who painted on leather as nobody else could paint, was the son of a Kentish squire and had won the saddle at Sandhurst in 1912.

His papers were all in order; his papers had been in order for 15 years, and since he was very careful, only three men in the world knew that the language he spoke was not his mother tongue. And none of these three was German.

In these three men's mouths his name was a household word. Not his name, perhaps, his number. Maj. G. F. Herring was known as "72."

That Herring loved the craft he practiced there can be no doubt. It gave him infinite pleasure to reproduce some great picture and turn his reproduction into some useful thing. His screens fetched high prices in London. Americans visiting Munich sought out his tiny shop. Goering had commissioned a cigar case. Irony went all lengths when the chief of the local Gestapo requested the British agent to make him a miniature badge.

All his leather was dressed by an old fashioned country tanner who knew his whims. Once a month, more or less, Herring would visit the tanner and choose his skins. This meant staying a night at a village inn, 12 crow's miles from the frontier. But what if it did? The man was above suspicion. Time and an infinite patience had done the trick.

And now, this August morning, Herr Herring was deeply concerned.

He had left Munich, as usual, the day before, had chosen a score of skins and had slept at the little inn which knew him so well. As usual, he had risen at daybreak, to make the most of the mountains before he drove to the station to catch his train. And, as usual, he had visited his "letterbox," which was so faithfully cleared by "Carrier Pigeon 6." [The "letterbox" was an oak, which no one on earth would have known for a hollow tree; but hollow it was, and a canister lay within.] And then he had found that his "letterbox" had not been cleared . . . that the last dispatch he had "posted" was lying where he had laid it three weeks before.

Herring emptied the canister and put it back into the oak. Then he strolled out of the thicket and on down the mountainside. The man was worried to death. If his old dispatch was important, the one he had brought to post contained matter of life and death. That it should be carried was vital. Somehow Great Britain must know the news it contained.

Such heavy movements of troops can mean only one thing. . . . Two days after that date the attack will be launched.

Half an hour later he struck the mountain road which would bring him back to the village in 20 minutes time.

Here he rounded a bend, to see a "sports saloon," by the side of the way. Its bonnet was raised, and either a boy or a girl was peering inside. Oh, a girl—he could see her bare arm. An English girl. The car had a "G. B." platex.

The man caught his breath.

The car was bound for the frontier—at least, it was facing that way. If the girl could be trusted and he could speak to the girl . . . if she had a head on her shoulders and knew how to hold her tongue. . . . It was madness, of course. He knew it. Setting at naught the very first rule of the game. And yet—the fuse was burning; and here was the ghost of a chance of putting Great Britain wise.

A head came out of the bonnet when he was 10 paces away, and Herring was quietly surveyed by a pair of grave, gray eyes in the face of a beautiful child.

He clicked his heels together and raised his hat in the air. Then he spoke with a definite accent.

"Can I be of help, if you please?"

A charming smile leapt into the lovely face.

"O, good! You speak English. I can't speak a word of German. The carburetor's stuck up. I could clean it myself here and now. But I can't get it down. It needs a bigger spanner than any I've got."

"Natural and downright," thought Herring, "but terribly young." Aloud he said, "I'm afraid you have need of a garage, from what you say, and the nearest garage is seven miles off. But there is a village quite close. If you will lock your car, I will escort you there and assist you to telephone. And then they will send or bring you the tool you require."

"That's an idea." She closed the bonnet and took a key from the switch. "And while I'm waiting I'll have a wash and some food." She slammed and locked the car door. "You must wonder what I'm doing and why I'm alone."

Stranger Explains She's Running Away

Herring bowed from the hips. "I never question my good fortune."

"You're very polite. As a matter of fact, I'm running away. You see, I came abroad with a man. I've known him six months or so, and I thought he was quite all right. And he wanted to come so much, and he hadn't a car. We got on all right for a bit, and then last night he tried to get into my room. Well, that showed me where I was, so I thought I'd better clear out. And I did at 4 this morning. I am on my way to Lucerne to be with my uncle and aunt."

By the time they had reached the village the two were the best of friends. This was inevitable. Altho she was 21, Ariel Choate had the way of a little maid. As puppies do, she took good will for granted and knew no wrong. Yet the girl was no fool; and instinct or innate wisdom sat in her grave, gray eyes. Add to all this a rare beauty of figure and face, a beauty of which she seemed to be unaware, and it will be seen that she had been born out of time. She was not even pre-war. Ariel Choate threw back to the golden age.

Regarding his charming companion, Herring hovered between excitement and shame. Here was the channel idea. Yet, to put such a being in peril was nothing less than a crime. The way of the service is hard. Even while the man was recoiling, the spy decided that the lady must serve his turn.

Fate played into his hands.

As they came up to the inn, the hostess ran out of the door.

"O, sir, Hans has come from rail head, and there is no morning train. Nobody knows the reason. But it has been stopped. The afternoon service is running. The train for Munich will leave at half past four."

"In that case," said Herring, smiling, "I shall spend another six hours in the country I love. And now please attend to this lady. Her car has broken down, but I shall arrange all that. She would like a nice bath and some breakfast. It is up to us both to show her that the reich can honor its guests."

The spanner arrived at 11, and shortly before mid-day, Miss Choate slipped into her seat and started her engine up.

"You are an angel," said Ariel.

"Are you sure all is well?" said Herring, spanner in hand.

"Better than ever," said Ariel, "thanks entirely to you. I'm only so sorry I never knew you before. You've been simply sweet to me from the beginning to end."

Without turning his head, the man glanced up and then down the deserted road.

"Will you stop your engine?" he said. "I've something to say."

The gray eyes widened a trifle, but Ariel did as he asked.

"For five minutes only," said Herring. "I'm going to pretend that I am at work on your car. Please watch the road behind you as well as ahead, and if you see any one coming, say so at once. Is that quite clear, Miss Choate?"

Ariel Offers to Repay Service

With her eyes on the driving mirror—

"Yes," said Ariel, quietly. And then, "There's no one in sight."

"Then listen to me." Herring stooped to the bonnet again. "I've been of some service to you. Will you be of some service to me?"

"You know I'd love to"—eagerly.

"You can be of the greatest service, if you will do as I say. But, first, you must get hold of this—that I'm not what you think I am. I am as English as you are; only my work lies here."

The grave gray eyes were like saucers. When Ariel spoke there was more than awe in her tone.

"D'you mean . . . you're secret service?"

"That's just what I mean," said Herring. "Eyes on the road, my dear. I'm putting my life in your hands."

"It's safe," said the child, quickly.

"You don't have to tell me that. And now listen very hard. In my coat on the seat by your side are two dispatches which England simply must have. They are most frightfully important, and I cannot get them thru. If you will take them to Zurich——"

"You know I will."

"I know you will do your best; but I want you to understand that you will be risking your life. If these papers were found upon you, you'd—never see England again."

"And what about you?"

"That's beside the point. This sort of thing is my job, but it isn't yours."

"You can put it that way, but I—"

"Please don't argue—we've only three minutes more. The moment you get to Zurich, drive to a good hotel and ring up Mr. Henty of Belvoir Platz. He is an English surgeon. Give your name and address and say you were advised to consult him by a Mrs. Arthur Malone. Now will you repeat that, please?"

The girl repeated his instructions, and Herring went on.

"He will then make arrangements to see you without delay; and the moment you two are alone, give him the two dispatches and tell him that you have brought them for 'No. 72.' Add that they're simply vital and that 'Carrier Pigeon 6' has broken down. Will you repeat that, please?"

Again the girl repeated what he had said.

"Very good," said Herring. "And now take the papers out. There's a wad in each breast pocket, inside the coat. . . . Got them? Right. You'll have to carry them on you. How about that?"

"Inside my shirt?"

"That sounds all right, but they mustn't fall down."

"Inside my trunks?"

"That's better. Will you put them in now?"

After a very short struggle—

"O. K." said Miss Choate. "I'm afraid they'll be a bit crushed, but I'll bet they don't move."

"Bless your heart," said Herring. He closed the bonnet and opened the near side door. As he put on his coat, "And now you must go. Will you give me a lift to the village? That's natural enough."

As Ariel started the engine—the car began to move forward.

"What's your name?" said the girl. "You know I'm Ariel Choate."

"George Herring—Ariel."

"That's right. And I'll call you George. I can't bear leaving you George. It is so awful to think of your being alone. Alone in your shop in Munich. Supposing there's war?"

"My pretty Ariel, I shall be quite all right. I may have some trouble in getting my hearsay thru but—"

"I know, I know. But I want to see you again. I wouldn't mind parting at all, if you were coming to England—before very long."

"I'll come one day. And call at your Sussex home. And you shall give me lunch . . . and show me the formal garden and the little winding staircase, cut out of yew. But I don't know how you'll explain me for no one must ever know that we met as we did."

"You need no explanation," said Ariel Choate.

She put out a little hand, and George caught it in both of his.

"God bless you, sweetheart," he breathed. "Remember me in your dreams. I'll never forget you—never. Or how you pulled my chestnuts out of the fire." He bent his head and pressed the hand to his lips. "And here's the village coming. Stand by for a formal parting. I know you'll play up."

Stops Her Car for a Farewell Kiss

Her eyes on the driving mirror Aerial threw out the clutch and set a small foot on the brake. Then she took the man's head in her hands and looked into his eyes.

"Please take what care you can. You've come to mean—a great deal and I'll never be really happy until I see you again."

"One day," said George, smiling, and he kissed the bow of her mouth . . . And then he was out of the car and the door was shut.

"Auf wiedersehn, Miss Choate." He raised his hat in the air.

. . . .

Henty heard Ariel out, with a hand to his mouth. Then he picked up the two dispatches and slipped them into a drawer.

"Never thought I'd see those," he said.

"He said they were urgent," said Ariel.

The other nodded.

"They'll be in Whitehall tomorrow before mid-day." He hesitated, biting his lip. "You say he was leaving for Munich this afternoon?"

"That's right."

"Did any one else know that?"

"O, yes. The inn people knew it. He was to drive to the station and take the afternoon train."

The surgeon left his chair and began to pace up and down.

"And he met you quite openly?"

"Good heavens, yes. We walked to the village and back on the crown of the road."

There was a little silence. Then—

"I can hardly believe it," said the surgeon, "but it seems that for once the Bosch has been late off the mark."

"What on earth d'you mean?" said the girl.

"This. That 'Carrier Pigeon 6' was taken a month ago. Great pressure was put upon him to open his mouth—to reveal where the 'letterbox' was that he was accustomed to clear. Once the Bosch knew that, he was bound to get '72' either by waiting at the box or else by making inquiries for 10 miles round."

Ariel felt rather faint.

"But he didn't," she said. "He didn't open his mouth."

"I'm afraid he did," said the surgeon, "some 24 hours ago. If the Bosch had acted at once, you and '72' would never have met. As it is . . ." He broke off and shrugged his shoulders. "Thanks to you, we have these precious reports. But '72' was the—"

The sentence was never finished, for Ariel stood up and swayed, and the surgeon leaped to catch her, before she fell.

Two minutes went by . . .

"Better now?" said the man. "You're a girl in a million, but women weren't made for these things."

"I'm quite all right," said Ariel. "Listen to me. Somehow or other we've got to get him out."

"Get who out?" said the other, staring.

"George Herring—'72.' The Bosch mayn't have acted yet. He hadn't acted this morning at 12 o'clock."

"My dear, be reasonable. We don't know where to find him. Until you said it, I never knew his name."

"He has a leather shop at Munich. He's certain to be on the phone."

"Yes, but even so—"

"I'm going to fetch him," said Ariel, and got to her feet. "I've got my customs pass and there's room in my car. I won't believe it's too late, till I've seen for myself. For God's sake help me to try."

. . .

Four frantic hours had gone by, and Henty was speaking to the chemist with whom he dealt.

"Is that you, Strub? Have those things from Munich arrived?"

"I am very sorry, sir; but I have no further news. My furnishers wire me that the railway—"

"Listen to me. I've an English lady here on whom I must operate within 48 hours. Her son is now in Munich, and since he has no idea that his mother is ill, her daughter is leaving to fetch him, going by car."

"Could she possibly—"

"She can and will. I've asked her. But you must send somebody with her to pick up and pay for the stuff."

"I will send my son with pleasure. He can, perhaps, be of service. His English is very good. At what hour does she leave, if you please?"

"Tomorrow at 7 o'clock."

"Very good, Mr. Henty. Rudolph will be at your house at a quarter before that hour. Would you like some more artery forceps? I mean, as things are—"

"I'll take two boxes. At a quarter to seven, then."

"That is understood, sir, and I am deeply obliged."

Henty Offers to Lend Some English Clothes

Henty replaced the receiver and looked at Miss Choate.

"Well, we're over that stile," he said. "Rudolph Strub is a very efficient young man. And he speaks very decent English. He'll see you in—and out, if he's half a chance. And now is there anything else?"

"Only some clothes," said Ariel. "If he is to be my brother, he must have some English clothes."

"That's not too hard. I'll give you some country clothes. All made in England, of course. Shove them into your suitcase; and if the customs get curious, your brother was hiking to Zurich with only a pack, so you've picked some stuff out of his luggage, in case he's run short."

"Good for you," said the girl. "And you think his passport—"

"Miss Choate, I hope. If my little friend can do it, I know he will. He has done more difficult things."

Munich was very hot, and the fans in Herr Herring's workroom were running steadily.

A pair of book ends, half finished, lay on his bench. He wiped the sweat from his face and as he picked up one of his book ends the bell of the shop was rung. He lifted aside the curtain which hung at the foot of the stair. But there he caught his breath, and a hand went up to his throat.

Ariel was standing before him, suitcase in hand. Her grave, gray eyes were enormous. Her lips were framing some question he could not hear.

"O, my God," he said feebly. And then, "I made sure you were thru."

"That shows you're alone," said the child. "And that's what I wanted to know."

She set the suitcase down and began to unbutton her shirt.

"But—"

"I've been, my dear. The papers left Zurich by plane. They were in London this morning at 7 o'clock."

Herring laid hold of the curtain, breathing most hard. The tremendous wave of relief had left him weak at the knees. But the girl's next words put him on the tips of his toes.

"Listen, George. We've not an instant to lose. 'Carrier Pigeon 6' has opened his mouth."

Herring's brain cleared for action.

"I want," he said quietly, "I want to know why you're here."

"To fetch you, of course. I've fixed it all with Henty. I've got your passport here—you're my brother, Hilary Choate. You've only got to sign it; somebody worked all night."

"And the photograph," said Herring. "My dear—"

"I took you yesterday, when you thought I was taking the inn. I got your head and shoulders, and they have enlarged the head. And now, dear, please be quick. Here's the passport and here are some English clothes. For God's sake go and change. We've got to pick somebody up—I'll tell you all as we go."

The man shook his head.

"Henty must be out of his mind. If the 'Pigeon' has split, I'm done. And if I cut and run, you'll only go down with me."

"I shall, if you argue; if not, I've got a sporting chance."

"Please clear out at once. I mean what I say."

Ariel sighed.

"I wish you'd believe I do." She whipped to where he was standing, set her hands on his shoulders, and looked him full in the eyes. "George, my darling, get this—I'm sinking or swimming with you. You can put me out of your shop; but I swear I won't leave your doorstep, until you get into the car."

Herring's strong hands were on hers.

"My sweet, I beg you——"

"What d'you think I'm here for?" The question, so quietly put, was more weighty than any prayer. "Because I knew last night that, unless you could see it with me, I never wanted to see the formal garden again."

His arms about her, Herring stood still as death, looking over his darling's head.

So, for perhaps 10 seconds . . .

Then——

"God forgive me," he breathed. "Give me the passport, sweetheart. I'll be as quick as I can."

. . .

The Lowland slid up a long rise, flicked thru a white-walled village and fell down a sudden hill with the rush of a lift.

His precious parcels beside him, Rudolph Strub slept wedged in the back of the car.

Ariel sat like an image—a very lovely waxwork, her eyes on the tapering road. She showed no sign of strain, but her color was not so high as it had been the day before, and her face was that of a girl, not that of a child. She drove as hard as she could for more than 200 miles.

Seated beside her, Herring stared into the distance with narrowed eyes, striving to put himself in his enemies' place. What action would they have taken, when "Carrier Pigeon 6" had opened his mouth? Send to the "box" at once, post a man to watch it and rip the truth from the peasants for 10 miles round. They had done that, of course—put 40 men on the job, and eight or 10 cars. Each car to scour one segment of the circle drawn round the "box." And there his luck had come in, for the very car that mattered had overturned. Another car, of course, had taken its place; but, somehow or other, a lot of time had been lost.

Eventual Discovery Just Matter of Hours

Inexcusable, that; a man may fall by the way, but the game should go on. Never mind—it had thrown them out. One segment—the segment that mattered—had not been scoured till today. After that, it was a question of hours; for the most inefficient agent would go to a village inn, and, when he had got so far, the most inefficient agent would see that Herr Herring of Munich might be the man he sought. Very well. He would speak to Munich—and two men would leave at once for the little leather shop in the cul-de-sac. . . And when they found it empty the hunt would be informed.

Herman Herring of Munich, a bullet wound scar on either side of his throat, thick fair hair turning gray, clean-shaven, blue eyes, broad forehead, prominent chin. This man is a British agent and must at all costs be taken, alive or dead. Hold any one resembling, reporting to WX.

Herring glanced at his watch. Ten minutes past eight. At this rate they'd make the frontier just about 9 o'clock. They'd beat the Gestapo to it, but where was the car that could beat a telephone call? The Gestapo would not be there, but their orders [illegible]

One thing, at least, was clear. If the hunt was up, they would know—without being told. The Bosch makes a meal of things. The frontier post would be humming—men out in the road with revolvers, and innocent tourists delayed and despitefully used.

His passport declared that he was Hilary Choate. And it had been very well done. The trouble was that Choate was the spit of Herring—throat wound, blue eyes, and the rest. Hold any one resembling. If those instructions were out, he would never get thru. And they would be out—they must be. The Gestapo had missed them twice—first at the village and then at his leather shop. This was incredibly true. But only a fool would suggest that they might miss him again.

Frontier Guardroom Hums with Activity

Dusk was coming in as they entered the frontier village.

Rudolph closed his eyes and let out an agonized groan. Worse than the worst had happened. Four cars were waiting at the frontier, head to tail, and guards were standing stolidly, backs to the lowered pole. And the guardroom was busy. Its lights streamed into the road, and a man with a trunk on his shoulder was mounting its shallow steps.

"O, my God," wailed Ariel, and set a foot on the brake.

Herring laid a hand on her arm.

"It's quite all right," he said quietly. "Pull up behind the last cars, but don't get too close." He turned to the luckless Rudolph, who was regarding the passports with glazing eyes. "Give me the passports and pass."

"But, George——"

"Hush. I know what I'm doing." The documents passed. "And now listen, please. I'm speaking to both of you. Obey every order they give you, on no account leave the car, and answer no questions at all."

With that, he opened his door.

"O, George, I can't bear it. Let's——"

"Steady, sweetheart. I shall come back very soon. But if they tell you to move, you must do as they say. Don't hesitate. Just do it. And please remember this—that everything depends upon your holding your tongue."

He stepped down into the road and slammed the door. Then he strode straight to the guardroom, and Ariel's frantic eyes saw him mounting the shallow steps.

As he came to their head, a guard stopped him.

"It is forbidden——"

And there he saw the look upon Herring's face. This was the glare of the Prussian, having authority.

"Forbidden?" roared Herring in German, raising a threatening fist. "Get out of my way this instant, you insolent swine."

The other started aside.

"Pardon, sir. I did not——"

Herring passed in, lowering . . .

His eyes swept the whitewashed place. No secret police were there; and a door behind the barriers gave to a second room. Customs and guards were staring, and four or five harassed tourists had turned about. At a desk two officials were looking up from the glare which a shaded light was casting onto a printed sheet.

"Who's in charge here?" blared Herring.

Nobody answered him, but one of the two officials stepped to the barrier.

Herring pushed a woman aside and made for the hatch. He motioned to the official to do the same. As the latter obeyed, frowning, Herring flipped open his jacket for half a moment of time. Then——

"Let me thru," he spat. "I've got to get thru at once to WX."

Apologizing profusely, the other did as he said—and followed Herring into the inner room.

Herring went straight to the telephone, hung on the wall.

Receiver in hand——

"Priority WX," was all he said.

Perhaps 20 seconds went by.

Then——

"WX," said some one.

"Exension 20," said Herring.

After a moment or two——

"Hullo," said another voice.

"Axel speaking," said Herring. "Is that you, Hans? Well, here I am on the edge. Have you any more news?"

A receiver was violently replaced, but Herring went affably on.

"No, I didn't think you would . . . Yes, we came very fast. That kid . . . But, my dear Hans, what a peach! Too thin, of course, but if I could have her a while she'd soon fill out . . ." Herring burst out laughing. "Of course, if you—what?" His chin went up, and he stood at attention smartly, clicking his heels. "Good evening, sir." He bowed. "Yes, I'm all right so far." He sniggered. "That's quite understood . . . I've every confidence, sir . . . Yes, I honestly think I could. My, er, very attractive driver has no idea . . . Yes, that's quite clear . . ."

A drumming in Herring's ear suggested that some one was ringing the frontier post. "Yes, I know. But I think that I shall be able . . . Well, if all goes well, I think—— May I put it this way? I propose to deal with him first, and then to pick up his rôle and recover the stuff . . . If I may say so, sir, I entirely agree . . . Quite so. It gives me a free hand . . . O, I ought to be there in a little over an hour . . . I beg your pardon . . . No, not the slightest idea . . . The guards here thought I was English, when I walked into the place . . . No, not for long, sir. Your badge is a talisman."

Herring Talks on Despite Drumming

The drumming was growing violent, but Herring went steadily on. "You're terribly kind, sir . . . O, I'll deliver the goods . . . How soon? O, in two minutes' time. Half a moment, sir." He thrust the documents into the other's hand.

"Stamp these in here. I don't want them seen outside. Quick as you can. I've got to be off in two minutes—you heard what I said." The official ran for the door. "Excuse me, sir, I was telling one of these boobies . . ."

As the door closed, Herring whipped a knife from his pocket and carefully severed the wires, where these ran off the plaster and under the wood. The drumming stopped dead. Before the official was back, Herring was speaking again.

"Yes, sir, that's quite understood . . . They're stamping them now . . . Very good, sir . . . You're very kind. Auf wiedersehn, sir."

He put the receiver back and turned to the sweating official, busy with rubber stamps.

"My God, aren't they ready yet?"

"Almost, my lord. I told my men to bring the car up to the door." He pressed a stamp on to the pass and snatched at a pen. "There. It is all in order." He blotted his signature and folded the pass; then he gave this and the passports into the outstretched hand. "I hope very much that your lordship will overlook—I mean, in the ordinary way, no cars are held up; but doubtless your lordship knows that one Herman Herring of Munich——"

"Fool!" The official quailed before the blast of contempt. Herring thrust out his jaw and spoke thru his teeth. "Herring's over the border. One of your breed let him thru—with a lorry of fruit. I've got to repair the damage. I've got to go to Zurich and do your work."

With that, he flung open the door and lunged for the hatch. The other followed, stammering, not knowing what he said. He was preoccupied—trying his best to remember when last his men had cleared a lorry of fruit.

The Lowland had been advanced to the foot of the steps. As Herring rounded her bonnet, a soldier opened the door . . .

As the man took his seat——

"All clear, my beauty," he breathed. "Go on. They're lifting the pole."

Forty-six hours had gone by, and a formal garden in Sussex was looking its stately best. The sun, which was low, was shedding a golden light, and the print of the topiary work lay sharp on the velvet lawns.

George Shows Ariel the Mark of the Brute

Her slim, bare arm in George Herring's, Ariel stared at the badge which lay in her palm—a miniature badge of leather, beautifully finished, alight with crimson and gold.

"And directly he saw this, you say . . ."

"—he could see nothing else. It's the mark of the brute, my darling; and that is why brutality never pays. The man he was looking for was under his hand. He was face to face with him, and his orders were clear. But when he saw the mark of the brute, he could think of nothing at all but of saving his skin. His common sense stopped working. The brute had to be placated—and that was all."

"I don't care," said Ariel, lightly. "The mark of the brute can't talk. You were in there a quarter of an hour and you must have put up the very hell of a bluff."

"Did you time me?" said Herring, smiling.

"I couldn't. My watch had stopped. But——"

"Mine hadn't, and so, I know. I was there just over four minutes, from first to last."

"I simply don't believe you—but let that go. And now will you tell me, please, what they said in Whitehall?"

"They were mostly concerned with whether you'd hold your tongue."

"What did you say?"

"I said I considered that and I thought the safest plan was to make you my wife."

Ariel's laugh rang out.

"I'll bet you did. And what did they say to that?"

Herring swung her round and looked into the grave, gray eyes.

"D'you really want to know?"

Ariel nodded her head.

"They said, 'You're a damned lucky man. Often enough you've taken your life in your hand; but she left hers in pawn when she drove into that country to get you out.'"

"They don't understand—that's all. If they'd heard the past tense used of some one they knew was alive—some one that they were in love with . . ."

With half a sob, her arms went about the man's neck.

"O, my God!" he said feebly. "I made sure you were thru."

NO SURRENDER

BY KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

(Copyright: 1940: By Katharine Newlin Burt)

He snatched at her hand, crouched over it—his breath was insufferable.

INSTALMENT XI.

"WHY doesn't your young man come and take you off with him?" Jim suggested after he'd given Cathryn his figures, surprisingly and most encouragingly large.

"You mean Peregrine Collen? I expect he will tomorrow, Jim." She lifted the weight of her heart in a big sigh. "I've been sort of counting on him."

And not the least of her pain during these three bitter days was given to her by Perry's failure to appear . . . to carry her off from her post of torture and humiliation.

She waited with confidence, then in sore pride, and at last she did not wait at all. Jimmie was busy cleaning up, he told her. A week after the sale he went away to collect some tardy payments. Alone, her hound padding soberly at heel, she walked in riding clothes all the old riding trails and lanes, the wood paths, and climbed the freshly leaved, bird tempting hills. Returning from such a walk to the house whose silence and anxious servants' faces she had learned to dread, she was met at the side door by Mary.

"Mr. Perry is here." Mary had adopted the "Mr." as a tribute to Perry's self-confident maturity, the rumor of his social importance and his wealth.

Cathryn let in Badger and closed the door behind him before she spoke.

"O, is he? Tell him I've just come in, very tired. I can't see him."

Mary's face fell. "But, Miss Cathie . . ."

"Please tell him just that, Mary."

But, before Mary could mournfully submit to the command, Perry appeared. From the hall he had heard their voices. He came very quickly into Emily Galt's small study where they stood. He startled Cathryn by his resemblance to his old self. That was because he, too, was dressed in riding clothes, very slim and light and young he looked, his face as eager as a hunter's, his eyes blazing blue. Not noticing, or not choosing to notice her mood, he took her hand and pulled her toward the hall and down it. She could not, for very dignity, resist, so came along as rapidly as possible, but with a grave and unresponsive face. Out of the door, inside the columned porch, there, with Matthew grinning at their heads, stood Cigaret and Brandy, "dressed," too, for riding, and all glittering in the afternoon sun.

Then Cathryn forgot anger, hurt feelings, and reproach. She sprang to Brandy, hugged him, kissed him, then to Cigaret. Her rare tears falling on their muzzling heads.

"I bid 'em in for you," Perry boasted happily. "I bid in as much of your best stuff as I could. Rufe's three hunters and Mr. Galt's Troth and six of the hounds, Cherry and Chips and Chick, Balsam and Baltic, and Belgian. They can live with me until you're ready for them. O, Cath mavourneen, don't you cry. Come here, my pet, my darling." Laughing on the edge of tears, he drew her to him, used his handkerchief to wipe her eyes, patted her, kissed the top of her head. She lifted her face and kissed him on the mouth. His face broke into painful tenderness. "My poor little Cath. Did you think I'd forgotten you? But, darling, I was sure you'd not want me hanging round reminding you of the grand old Faildyke days when I was your servant, madam. I thought I'd serve you best these days by attending the auction. Why didn't you come out to watch the show? I kept an eye open for you."

Cathryn glanced at Matthew, drew away, composed herself, tho still she looked quite white and glittering and wild.

"Jimmie said I'd better not be seen. He was afraid they'd boo me or . . . or make a row. I'd scare away the buyers. They . . . they all hate and despise me so."

Perry's mobile face changed, as tho he'd clapped on an iron mask. "So that's what Jim Ames told you, the dirty liar." He swore so that Cathryn said, "Perry, Perry! You've still a stable tongue."

"As if any one would dare to be rude to you on your own grounds with your friends about you. So he wanted to keep you out of the way, did he? The Faildyke foreman? And that suggests the need of a bit of considering."

Off went the iron mask, the face beneath it came forth ruddy with a big smile. "Come on now, Cath. Up with you. I'm riding Cigaret. I've put your gear on Brandy. Was I right?"

What Has Gone Before

Seventeen-year-old Cathryn Keithan overhears Jed and Rufus Galt discussing the wish of their father, John Peter Galt, and her mother, that Cathryn marry one of them. Tho she had adored both boys, particularly Jed, all her life, she is so humiliated when she hears Jed say he refuses to be baited by her mother's hook that she goes to Perry Collen, stable boy on the Galt estate, Faildyke, and begs him to elope with her. Jed stops the elopement, kisses Cathryn, and tells her she is more in love with him than with Perry. Further humiliated, she slaps him and swears revenge. Several years later, after her mother has died, Cathryn goes to New York and gets a job as social secretary to Mrs. Ranger, whose daughter, Cicily, is engaged to marry Rufus. Cathryn has turned from a weedy adolescent into a flaming beauty, and Rufus realizes it is her he loves instead of Cicily. He asks her to marry him, and she, not knowing of his engagement to Cicily, says yes. Jed, who is now a lawyer in New York, accuses Cathryn of disloyalty and greediness and in vain tries to break up the new romance. A year later, when members of the family gather at Faildyke for the wedding, Jed kisses Cathryn passionately, and when she responds he accuses her of unfaithfulness to Rufus. On her wedding eve Rufus is thrown from a horse and killed. Cathryn stays on at Faildyke with John Peter, and Jed returns to New York. Tho Jed says he hates Cathryn, when he sees a portrait of her by Martin Sylvester, a friend of Cicily's, Jed buys it. Later Cathryn goes to Martin's studio, sees a portrait of Jed, and buys that. Neither knows of the other's purchase. John Peter dies and wills Faildyke to Jed only on condition he ask Cathryn to marry him. Otherwise it all goes to Cathryn. Jed, still angry with Cathryn, tells her he will never ask her to be his wife. Jim Ames, Faildyke superintendent, cheats the estate of so much money the whole stable of horses is auctioned off to pay debts. His son, Dick, tries to force his lovemaking on Cathryn, but is interrupted by Perry Collen, who has returned, a much-traveled and rich young man.

"You were right, darling," cried Cathryn and was in her saddle, a girl to match the happy-go-lucky lad on Cigaret.

And so they rode, stirrup by stirrup, eyes shining into eyes, thru April woods, sweet as a ballroom and under the delicate promise of an April sky. Because they were happy and pleased with each other, seven years had vanished and they were in another, blither spring. Cathryn had forgotten that she had . . . an enemy.

Matthew came out to the step, as they returned to it. He spoke in a low voice to Cathryn, who came down beside him as she left her horse.

"Miss Cathryn, Dick Ames is in there, in the little room waiting to see you. He's been there about a quarter hour. He wants to talk to you alone."

"All right." She turned to Perry. "I must see some one on business. I'll be right with you for tea or sherry . . . anything you like. Ask Matthew. In the big room, Perry. And, Matthew, just a tiny wood fire, please. Now the sun's down it's a bit chilly. We'll feel it when we begin to cool off."

In spite of some uneasiness, she went to meet Dick cheerfully enough, humming "The Spanish Lady" to herself.

Dick Ames made the little room with its dainty feminine furniture look very small indeed. Cathryn herself had a sensation of swift physical diminishment. To overcome it, she came up close, held her head high, looked him in the face and put out her right hand.

"I'm glad you came to see me, Dick." He had changed unbelievably in the few weeks since their last interview.

"I've not come to see you," he said. As he opened his mouth to speak, the fumes of whisky almost made her choke. His tongue was thick. "I've come to collect my money from you. Either you pay me what you owe me in full or I'll take steps to . . ."

"But, Dick, please listen to reason. The sale's been a great success. As soon as your father gets back, I promise you full payment."

"As soon as he gets back!" Dick gave a great hollow laugh. He flung her hand aside and she moved as slowly and quietly as she could, seated herself at the desk. It gave her a feeling of greater security, dignity, and control.

"And when," said Dick leaning his whole weight on his hands opposite her, "do you think he'll be back? And where's he gone? Did he give you either of those pieces of information?"

Cathryn thought. "He said it was up the state."

"You can't go very far up state from here without running into Canada. It's my opinion, Miss Keithan, that you won't see your foreman very soon again. The money came to him, the checks were made out to him. And the sale paid enough to free him from his stock gambling debts with a good margin over. He's got money laid by, he's been . . . well, collecting for Faildyke for years. And very likely he can make it look on paper as if Faildyke owed him his gains and his losses and every cent he's taken with him. And, for all I know, that's a fact. But I guess he thought it quicker and easier not to wait for explanations of settlements.

"He's got the cash and he's off. There's a lady been waiting for him quite a while up over the border. She's been getting restive lately. And you may whistle for him. He's left the books to prove his case. And he's feeling mighty cheerful and mighty safe wherever he is this evening, you can bet on that. But it's not the way I feel," said Dick, "and I put my fix up to you for settlement; square up to you, Miss Cathryn Keithan, where it belongs."

She saw his great red face thru a mist. The wall of the room went moving past her. Nothing was steady or familiar. Nothing would be steady and familiar in all her world again. Jim Ames was a thief. Jim Ames had lied to her, to John Peter, to Rufus, had cheated them, had stolen from them . . . for years. He had made his getaway and left her to save herself and Faildyke as best she could. She thought of the great mound of unpaid bills, many of them duplicates and many times duplicates. Dunning bills. Their senders patient only because of the hope of eventual settlement.

"Do you . . . do you really mean that . . . do you really think it's true?" she asked in a voice she could not hear herself, "do you really think your father is a thief?"

"Would I be apt to say it about my father if it wasn't true? Perhaps I wouldn't be saying it now, but leaving you to find it out for yourself, if he hadn't left me holding the bag, too. I guess he had his own ideas for me and you. Are you listening to me?"

"Yes. But I feel a little faint. We all trusted your father for so many years. He was like one of the family. John Peter loved him."

"There's one of you who didn't."

"Jed Galt. Yes. He warned us."

"Perhaps it's clear now why he was willing to let you take over Faildyke. . . ."

"Don't. Don't talk about that, Dick. You see how I feel. I've got to have time to think, to look about me. Won't you please come back tomorrow?"

"I'll come back tomorrow and the next day and the next, unless you pay me now. Come, you've got a friend to borrow from, haven't you?"

She realized that he had watched her growing intimacy with Collen, was dangerous with jealousy as much as with drink. She looked him in the bleared blue eyes, once as bright as mice. Pity for him and remorse obliterated all the other crowding emotions. Here was a boy she had known all her life. Her own eyes filled and she held up and out her hand.

"Dick, dear. Poor Dick. Nothing I've ever done has hurt me like what I seem to have done to you."

He snatched at her hand, crouched over it, his eyes were close, his breath was insufferable. But still she suffered it and him, as an act of penitence, hoping desperately to restore him to himself.

"All right," he said, his thick tongue trying to keep pace with the rapid beating of his heart, "Why keep on hurting me then? And yourself, too. I'll forget the money quick enough. I'll not bother you. I'll help you like nobody else can. I'll work myself to bones for you. It's what old Faildyke needs, a hard working, steady, thrifty man. And it's what you need yourself."

"O, Dick, Dick, please."

He crowded her back in her chair, one hand on either side of her, his bloated face came close. "You've had some kissing from me. You'll get to like it . . . ."

She thrust him back with all her strength. "Don't make me call for help, Dick. Don't."

"If you call for help," cried Dick, "I'll beat the life out of any one that comes and then you'll pay me for the trouble . . ."

Peregrine touched his shoulder. Dick's body had kept Cathryn from seeing his swift, quiet entrance. "Excuse me, Ames. Perhaps I can straighten things out for you. What's wrong, Cathryn?" He laughed. "What's the joke, Ames? Beating the life out of some one?"

"I owe him more than two thousand dollars," said Cathryn breathlessly, still drawn back and up in her chair, altho the oppression of Dick's nearness was lifted. He had got back his balance with a staggering effort, had turned to face Perry with a brooding, hooded, dangerous glare.

"And she can't pay you? That the trouble, Ames?"

"That's some of the trouble, Collen, if it's any of your business."

"But nothing's simpler. I haven't

Two New Rooms Ready to Greet Chicago Cafe-Goers

Yar to Reopen; Drake Prepares Camellia House

By Will Davidson

Two new and intriguing answers to that night out problem: "Where'll we go tonight?" will be presented proudly during the coming two weeks. And in addition to that, there will be a pleasant sprinkling of new names on the announcement lists of those cafés and clubs already making the evenings gay. The bistro business is booming.

Col. W. W. Yashenko, with all his courtly dignity, is hopping about the Lake Shore Drive hotel these days putting the last touches on his new Yar restaurant. He will greet his public Thursday night. To the right of the Lake Shore entrance will be the burgundy and alabaster Bovar dining room, a resplendent place in which George Scherban, the old Petrushka club's gypsy violinist of such pleasant memory, will be on hand with his ensemble. Over on the other side will be the merry new cocktail lounge, to be called the Fairy Tales bar. Amusing figures from the famous Pushkin stories, and a hewn log motif give this room a gay spirit.

A week later, on Sept. 27, the Drake will finally open its long discussed supper room. Dorothy Draper has converted part of the lobby and part of the Gold Coast room into a stunning suite to be known as the Camellia house. White marble steps lead up to a massive doorway framed by camellia trees. The walls of the main room are lined with camellia pink satin, and the carpet repeats the camellia motif, on a jet background. Ramon Ramos and his orchestra will play.

Among the imminent debuts in the local café world is that of Ernie Holst, for years a popular figure in the white tie taverns in New York, Saratoga, and Palm Beach. The effete Mr. Holst will bow in suitable surroundings, at the Pump room of the Ambassador Hotel East. The date is Sept. 28. Nan Wynn, recently with Raymond Scott's orchestra, will be the featured vocalist.

The companion room, the Buttery, already has introduced Gertrude Niesen's Note-Ables—a deft and engaging crew of musicians with a lovely young singer, June Storm—whose collective talents are far superior and more imaginative than their trade-mark.

The Balinese room of the Blackstone hotel will bring in the Adrian Rollini trio on Sept. 27.

The Edgewater Beach hotel, which is now featuring the music of Ted Weems and the dancing of Frances Wood, deaf mute, and her partner, Billy Bray, reports that Wayne King will probably open the formal season about the middle of October.

With Eddie Oliver a scheduled arrival for this week-end in the Stevens hotel's Continental room, the futures market there is dominated by Griff Williams, who is due back Oct. 19.

Ray Noble will present five new original compositions in the Palmer House's Empire room Sept. 26 in the feature show of the evening at 10 o'clock. "Isola Bella," a love song; "Far Away," "A Red Roofed Cottage," "Oakland to Burbank," the musical story of a recent siege of aerial commuting, and a fifth movement for the famous Cherokee suite. For the dinner and supper shows Miss Meriel Abbott has designed a "Hunt Ball revue," featuring her dancing girls, the Six Dancing Debonaires, Chick and Lee, comedians, and Trixie Lee, girl juggler.

The Duke of Ellington, whose crest is a keyboard bend on a field of mood indigo, with a sophisticated lady rampant, has succeeded to the governor generalship of the Panther room, and the chancellor of the Hotel Sherman exchequer is very happy about the whole thing.

Duke has been committing music for many years, much of it of his own composition, and his nightly demonstrations in the Panther room are practical evidence of the wide range of his orchestral experience. For instance, as a dinner show he offers music of a digestible sort. It ranges, true enough, from the silken "Sophisticated Lady" to the tub thumping tempo of "Jack the Bear," but it is all muted to a pleasant number of decibels, as if the Duke and the chef had conferred on just what would go well with those flaming sword dinners.

For early evening dancing, Ellington manages a similarly restrained output of danceable swing. The beat is there, and the occasional wild improvisation, but the boys give the score the once over lightly. It is not until the midnight show that Duke cuts loose, to the unalloyed joy of the jivers. There aren't many bands that can surpass unhampered Ellington swing.

Cootie Williams, the nonchalant trumpeter who stars in a number named for him, "Concerto for Cootie," hits the comedy high of the night in his amazing trick of making his trumpet answer Ivie Anderson's singing queries in understandable words.

Miss Anderson, Bill Bailey, the tap dancer; Herbie Jeffrey, the carbon cowboy and glamor lad of Negro films; Marie Bryant, a double jointed dancer, and Jimmy Blanton, the bass slapper, use individual talents of high caliber to fill out the show.

Compact and ingratiating, the Debonairs, a musical foursome with a pretty little singer, Shirley Jeane, are on the bandstand of the Hotel La Salle's Blue Fountain room. Don Bari, a Detroit boy with a nautical background built up during several seasons of tunemaking aboard luxury cruise liners, is the singing leader. He has developed a versatile group that can play and sing a Russian ballad or "Stout Hearted Men," with admirable vigor, and then turn to the frolicsome mood of "What Shall We do with a Drunken Sailor?" and come out equally well.

Boswelling the Bistros:

A letter from Buddy Moreno, in Dallas with Griff Williams, says hello to Chicago. . . . Gloria Gilbert, popular young vocalist with Dick Shelton's band in the Blackhawk, was Dick Jurgens' only girl vocalist. He discovered her at the Aragon, but band policy forbade taking her on the road trip. . . . Incidentally, Mac Adams, the red head personality singer with Shelton, plans to finish college at Illinois by mail so he can stay with the band. . . . Bob and Grace Conrad, recently of the Colony club, have taken their La Playa dancers into Victor Hugo's, Hollywood. . . . Raymond Scott probably will be back in the loop late in October for a long run. . . . Continued ill health may prevent Benny Goodman from making a Chicago appearance this fall. . . . Art Kassel is due back at the Bismarck hotel early next month.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1940: By Ely Culbertson.]

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: In the first place, I am not an expert—as may presently appear—and neither is my wife, tho maybe I had better leave that for you to say. Anyway, here we are playing a little bridge at a modest tenth of a cent a point with a couple of friends when I deal and pick up this hand:

♠ A K Q J 10 6 4 2 ♥ J 6 ♦ J ♣ A Q

"Mind you, I was playing with my wife. I reasoned something like this: One spade is grossly insufficient, two spades is a darn lie, three spades won't force an answer, four spades might stop an answer, five spades is out because I certainly don't lack honors in trump. What then? Well, come what may, I am going to name the trump—yea, up to seven doubled and redoubled, if necessary; and a slam, big or little, depends on partner's aces. Why not ask for them? Why not, indeed, four notrump? I know there isn't any such bid in the book, but if it means anything at all it is a call for aces. My secretary of war took a long drink, made some unkind remarks, and finally [the opponents never having anything official to say] responded with five diamonds. Whereat I took the contract at five spades. Dummy [and I do mean dummy] put down

♠ 7 5 ♥ 5 ♦ A 6 ♣ J 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

I should like to report that I made it, but I didn't. Down one trick from fumbling the clubs. But it was the right contract and within the rules of ordinary reason there was no way of escaping it. Or does this prove anything?

"All right, I'll beat you to it—I was wrong about that one. Now double dummy me out of this one, too.

"Same cast of characters. My commissar of labor across the table smiles and bids two clubs. I'll tell you what she had, but I didn't know at that time. All I knew was what I held:

♠ K 8 6 4 ♥ J 10 9 8 7 6 ♦ J ♣ 10 7

"I haven't got a trick and a half, but to my way of thinking, two hearts is [and was] less of a swindle than the strictly conventional two notrump would have been. From two hearts the lady jumped to four notrump; I denied aces with five clubs; she persisted with five notrumps—tho what on earth I was supposed to do then neither she nor I nor any one else has yet been able to agree. Anyway, I bid six hearts—the contract.

The opener's hand:

♠ A Q 7 ♥ A K 2 ♦ A Q ♣ A K J 4 3

"A very pretty three notrump opening bid, misrepresented at two clubs, yet fumbled thru to six hearts, chiefly because of my partly phoney response to the opening and partly because of my blind inability, heaven helping me, to do other than I did. Yet the bill of indictment runs like this—if my two heart response had been genuine, with a trick and a half, the commissar, she says, ought to have bid seven [but she didn't]. As the cards lay there is six in the two hands, no more, no less; the finesse doesn't work.

"Won't you please advise us both to stop playing contract—or are we?

"H. T. M."

The letter just quoted is patently from a nonconformist who is determined to find balm in self-expression, if in nothing else. But, tho I am arch enemy of regimentation in most things, I must gently call my correspondent's attention to the fact that bridge is a partnership game and that, consequently, a definite partnership language was invented to enable two partners to converse and thus let their minds meet.

Referring to the first deal, Mr. H. T. M.'s opening bid of four notrump reminds me of nothing so much as of Humpty Dumpty's imperious use of the word "impenetrability." When Alice wanted to know what that luscious word meant, Humpty Dumpty explained that it meant he was sick and tired of their argument and besides that he wanted his dinner. [Or something like that —I seem to have mislaid my copy of Alice in Wonderland]. The analogy is that both Humpty Dumpty and my correspondent wanted to express certain ideas—but that they used a strange method of doing so.

Four notrump might possibly have been interpreted as the bidder intended it to be—except for one vital consideration. That was that an opening four notrump bid has quite a different and an entirely definite meaning. It announces a hand just like an opening three notrump bid, except that it is about one honor trick stronger. It is specifically described in the Gold Book that way. Thus, tho my correspondent's idea about using the bid as a conventional four notrump asking for aces might be a very good idea, indeed, I beat him to it by reserving the opening four notrump bid for an entirely different purpose, namely, to show 4-3-3-3 distribution, a huge honor trick content, and the ability to take 10 tricks, come what may. My reason for this was that occasionally one does pick up a hand that conforms to these requirements, but that it is never necessary to find out about partner's aces on the very first round. That can wait!

Again, getting specific, I must admit that the first hand mentioned in the above letter was not easy to bid. Yet, I feel that H. T. M. was unduly pessimistic when he discarded a simple one spade bid as "grossly insufficient." Good as this hand was, there were almost five honor tricks outstanding in the other three hands, hence it was a comparatively safe bet that one spade would be overcalled by the opponents or held open by partner. Then would be the time to "ask" about aces and other values.

As to the second hand—with which H. T. M. "fibbed" a bit in giving a positive answer to the opening two club bid—my comment is that with a six card suit, a king, a singleton diamond and two of partner's clubs, this was not a heinous sin.

An article by Mr. Culbertson appears in the feature section of The Tribune each weekday.

Bridge Problem.

NORTH.
♠ Q 8 6

♣ A 8 2

WEST.
♥ Q 6 5
♦ 8
♣ K Q 7

EAST.
♠ K J 10 7

♦ Q 6 3
♣ 10

SOUTH.
♠ A 5 2
♦ 10 7 5

There are no trumps and South leads. North and South are to win five tricks against any defense.

Solution—South leads the diamond 10. North discards spade 8. If East wins and returns the diamond, South makes two diamonds, North discarding two spades. South leads a club. West and North duck. East leads spade king, which South ducks. West must keep two clubs and shed a heart. So does North. The next spade South wins. What will West discard?

If East ducks the first diamond lead, South leads a club.

If East returns a club instead of the diamond at trick 2, West must cover or North will duck. North wins with club ace and leads spade six, which East cannot duck. South wins and leads diamond seven, following with a club, which gives North tricks in hearts and clubs.

The false opening is the club. West plays the queen, North wins with the ace and leads a spade. When South leads the diamond, East makes the queen and spade king, and gives South two diamond tricks. If North ducks club queen, West leads the king.

Vaudeville

"Hollywood Stars on Parade," the new stage show at the Oriental theater, is one revue that does not belie its name.

Steffi Duna.

Headed and directed by George Jessel, the cast includes Rochelle Hudson, Jean Parker, Isabel Jewell, Steffi Duna, Lya Lys, Betty Jane Copper, Jean Manners, and Mario Sylva. All of them participate in a sequence of songs, dances, and blackouts, exhibiting their several talents. "Cross-Country Romance" is the motion picture.

The all-time box office champions of the Chicago theater have returned there after an absence of 11 years. They are none other than Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians. Thruout the onslaught of "swing" and "hot" jazz, the Lombardo "sweet" style has remained as popular as ever. The group now boasts four Lombardo brothers: Guy, leader and first violinist; Carmen, composer, guitarist, and vocalist; Victor, saxophonist, and Lebert. In the accompanying revue are such performers as Bob Du Pont, juggler; Lyda Sue, specialty dancer, and the Three Pitchmen, novelty trio. On the screen is "I Want a Divorce," with Joan Blondell and Dick Powell.

The Three Stooges are raising the roof of the State-Lake theater this week with their rough and tumbling brand of comedy. They are to be found in and out of the other acts, too: Mariya, gypsy violinist; Joe and Jane McKenna, comedians; Cortello's Canine Mimics, dog circus; the Three Harrison Sisters, radio harmonists, and the Four Sidneys, European bicycle performers. "Golden Gloves," starring Jean Cagney and Robert Cummings, is the current film, a romantic tribute to The Tribune's famous sport spectacle.

"Pinky" Lee, eccentric comedian, heads what he calls his "Laffaganza" show at the Rialto theater. His assistants in the comedy department are Charles Country and "Tanglefoot." On the roster of feminine stars are Edna Thompson, Diane Shaw, Toni Mitchell, and Mae Brown. "Slightly Tempted" features Hugh Herbert and Peggy Moran on the screen.

George M. Cohan Play.

Some phases of George M. Cohan's life and career will be "recognizable" in the show which he will write, product, stage, and act in this fall. It will not be completely autobiographical, however. The score will include many of the old familiar songs composed by or associated with the comedian.

Moderation in Music Program Building Urged

By Edward Barry

Because there has been wide and just criticism of the stereotyped programs offered at many concerts and recitals, some performers are tempted to go to extremes in the search for new material and to compile occasional whole programs innocent of a single bar of familiar music. This is a kind of treatment which is far worse than the disease it is supposed to cure.

Let it be understood that we are talking not about concerts and recitals presented in schools and conservatories or for small groups of specialists, but about concerts and recitals designed for the general public. In dealing with this latter classification one is justified in assuming that the primary purpose is to provide genuine musical experience for persons who have no professional knowledge of nor professional interest in music. Other purposes are admissible — the widening of audiences' musical horizons, the education of the critics, the amassing of new prestige for the performers—but only to a point where they do not interfere seriously with the primary purpose.

It is very much easier to undergo a genuine musical experience with a familiar than with an unfamiliar work. The listener is not called upon to concentrate unduly on the idiom and the tonal pattern of the work. His consciousness has been sufficiently grooved by past hearings so that the actual meaning of the music—as distinguished from the devices by which this meaning is conveyed—can command almost the whole of his attention.

The old analogy with literature is helpful here again. In reading Chaucer one finds that the close concentration which the language demands makes it very difficult to come to grips with the poetic content. This is an extreme example, of course, but the same thing holds true in lesser degree with any unfamiliar work of art.

Even when the unfamiliar piece of music is in a familiar idiom there still remain some difficulties. On first or second hearing one is usually busy trying to grasp the specific form of the music. This undoubtedly produces the pale sort of pleasure we call interest, but it can hardly be compared with a full blown musical experience. The truth seems to be that no one, not even a trained and experienced musician, can fully appreciate a strange work on first hearing.

Another reason for the greater musical satisfaction which a person usually derives from a familiar work is so obvious that it is apt to elude all writers on the psychology of music. It is simply the fact that familiar works are, in general, good works. They have survived anywhere from a decade to a couple of centuries and they are usually able to reveal, to our ears and minds, the qualities which have recommended them to other ears and minds. With unfamiliar music, one is dealing with an unknown quantity. Altho it would be foolish to say that familiar works are always better than unfamiliar [since this would evade the fact that even the standard symphonies were once new and strange], it is possible to maintain with some show of reason that the proportion of good to bad is greater among familiar than among unfamiliar works.

Of course, this argument is overly facile in that it does not go into the difficult matter of what constitutes good music. At least one psychologist has categorically stated, in effect, that for all practical purposes good music is music which a large number of persons of knowledge and experience consider good. In so brief a piece as this, we cannot do better than accept this highly pragmatic definition.

Nothing that has been said here is to be construed as a plea for the continuous presentation of hackneyed works nor for the total exclusion of novelties. However, great misunderstandings have arisen because of the looseness of the meaning of the word "hackneyed." Is a work which musicians and critics call hackneyed really hackneyed in the public mind? The answer in 9 cases out of 10 is no. Indeed, it would be very hard to find 10 symphonic works which the majority of the audience at any given concert has heard more than 20 times. And 20 hearings do not make a work hackneyed unless it is very poor musically to begin with.

As to the total exclusion of novelties, no policy could exert a more hurtful and deadening influence on our musical life. There should certainly be one or two unfamiliar works on every program. But if a conductor or performer does not wish to antagonize a large majority of his audience he must carefully consider the quantity, and, of course, the quality, of the new music he offers. He should see to it that no one is asked to concentrate heavily thru an entire evening. Also—as regards the quality of the new music—he must always be on guard lest some idiosyncrasy of his own or some irrelevant or almost irrelevant quality of the music betray him into offering his public something definitely second rate.

No, this column is not a defense of stodgy and unimaginative program building. It is merely an attempt to point out the fact that here as elsewhere moderation is one of the greatest of the virtues.

Nijinsky Play

Clifford Odets will make his first adaptation when he attempts to wrest a play from the material in Romola Nijinska's biography of her husband, "Nijinsky." He is doing it for Oscar Serlin, producer of "Life with Father," and it should reach the theatrical boards in the season of 1941-'42. Some confusion has arisen regarding this subject since John Garfield purchased another play about the famous Russian dancer, written by Charles Milholland, in which Garfield wanted to act. Latest reports, however, have it that he will definitely appear as Nijinsky for Mr. Serlin in the Odets version.

Meanwhile Odets continues work on two original plays, one based on the present war situation and its relationship to America, the other just a plain love story. One or both should be ready for porduction in the fall, presumably by the Group theater. The dramatist has shelved two items to which he has devoted considerable time, "The Silent Partner" and "The City Called Avalon." The month of August will also see him preparing the screen version of his "Night Music."

Accomplished! Suiting Every Fashion Taste

By Rea Seeger.

Suiting all fall wardrobes, the shoppers, and the critics of both sexes, is an accomplished fashion fact! Add the grand news that price ranges offer everything for the limited budgeteer, as well as a lady Croesus, and you practically have a fashion millenium of some sort. Fall and early winter suits are here in some of the most flattering and snappy showings ever launched. Slim, simple looking [at the first glance], daytime and street suits are made of the softest woolens, cozy but thin in texture, thereby draping with exquisite fluidity, making the super dressmaker models which every one wants.

Precisely tailored models are just as abundant, but the jackets are longer, caressively cling to the figurelines, and the details are flawless. The American silhouette is glorified. Skirts are short, snappy, with all sorts of clever plaits. These plaits are pressed flat as a thin dime, but swing into rhythm with the least action. Pockets decorate as well as serve for practical purposes, and the collars are as varied as the color combines and textures of the fabrics.

Two-tone combinations are as smart as they sound, subtle or high shades usually used for the form-fitted jackets, while the skirts are, for the most part, dark foils. Fur collars, lapels, deftly tied bows, even huge buttons of fur, sometimes patch pocket effects of fur, accent the soft nap of the wools and make these suits distinctive, each different.

Plaid and plain combines are unusual duets for casual tweeds and wool outfits, that is, a dress of gay plaid teamed with a jacket or swagger length coat of contrasting colored but solid toned wool. These are separable duets, practical finds that allow for imaginative mix-or-match schemes with other dresses, skirts, or coats in the same wardrobe.

New this season are the dress parade suits, combines designed expressly for cocktail parties, afternoon suits in a definite dress parade manner, and costumes of long coats with companion dresses. Each is a masterpiece of an inspired genius, smooth sophisticated costumes for the gala occasions and all the fall and winter afternoon dress parade events, such as symphony concerts, Sunday night suppers, theater, and dinner in town costumes. Velvet trimmed with braid, wool trimmed with velvet, metallic tissue blouses worn with velvet, skirts and jackets or blouses of the new tissue-thin woolens in fascinating new high colors are just some of the finds. When a wool dress is teamed with a wool coat, the finished results are stunning. Usually the dress has fine dressmaker details that are repeated in the flattering long coat. Front fullness, flawlessly trained to stay flat, is carefully managed in the matching coat. Yoke and bloused backs are especially new in coats as well as dresses.

Sketched, five outstanding new finds from a Chicago collection newly unpacked. For specific information, call Superior 0200.

Canned Flour.

Vacuum dried and sterilized canned flour has been kept successfully for 22 years without loss of baking quality, manufacturers say.

ENSEMBLES FOR FALL AND THE EARLY WINTER

A...Coat and dress duet, dress parade yet practical combine in dull black or deep brown woolen. Soft silhouette with shirred front fulness, deep curved beltline, flattering collar of spicy brown mink. Dress is simple in same fine wool. ● B...Beautiful costume in pale gold wool, Spartan in line in both Russian-effect coat and companion dress. Leopard is the coat trim. ● C...Leopard is used also on this short jacket and dress outfit in forest green wool. Tucks achieve fitted waistline for cleverly cut jacket. Large flat muff and huge brimmed hat repeat the leopard theme. ● D...New arrival in coal black velvet, a cocktail or theater costume with braid trim on bolero jacket. This is a separable duet. ● E...Bright enough to please an extrovert, the surprise combine of the year, gay plaid in green and yellow in a thin wool dress with flat pressed plaits. Coat is of vermillion wool with unusual pockets.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped self-addressed envelope for reply.

The seventh and final group of stamps in the series honoring famous Americans will show five inventors. It must have been a task for postal officials to decide which five men to honor when there were so many deserving a place in the list. Fortunately Thomas A. Edison, inventor of the electric light, had been commemorated only a few years ago. John Ericsson, who built the turreted Monitor of civil war days, also had been remembered. The Wright brothers, altho not directly honored by a stamp issue, were taken care of by the Civil Aeronautics issue of 1928.

Two of the inventors shown on the coming stamp issue always will be remembered by farmers. These are Eli Whitney, who put the south on its feet for the first time by inventing a machine to remove the seeds from cotton, and Cyrus H. McCormick, who is credited with the invention of the reaping and binding machine which did away with one of the drudgeries of farming. One of the inventors, Elias Howe, lightened the housewife's lot with his sewing machine. This invention is now so thoroly intrenched in industry that it scarcely is necessary any longer for a housewife to own a needle and thread if her husband can sew on his own buttons. The fourth and fifth inventors—Samuel F. B. Morse, with the telegraph, and Alexander Graham Bell, with the telephone—have annihilated time and space and knit the nation into a compact unity, and have speeded up business to a degree that would have been impossible were it necessary to rely upon postal communication. These are the men who made it necessary to divide the world into standard time belts. Prior to their inventions local time was all that mattered, but with the coming of the telegraph it was necessary to know the instant of time at any point on the surface of the earth.

The 1 cent and 2 cent values of the inventors group will honor Whitney and Morse, respectively, and will be placed on first day sale on Oct. 7. The Whitney stamp will be released at Savannah, Ga., the Morse stamp at New York.

Collectors who wish to obtain first day covers bearing either of these stamps may send not to exceed 10 addressed envelopes to either or both of the postmasters at the cities designated together with a cash or postal money order remittance covering the exact cost of the stamps to be affixed. Each prepared cover should bear a notation in the upper right hand corner stating how many stamps are to be affixed to the envelope.

The prepared covers and remittance should be enclosed in an envelope addressed to the postmaster in the first day city and this outer wrapper should be indorsed, "For first day cover service, Famous Americans series." The shipment should be timed to reach the postmaster about one week before the event.

Collectors should remember that first day covers must bear postage at first class rates in order to receive the dated cancellation. Except for letters addressed for local delivery in the first day city, it will be necessary to order the three 1 cent stamps for each cover or two 2 cent stamps when ordering that value.

Orders for unused stamps must not be included with requests for first day service, but should be directed to the Philatelic agency, Postoffice department, Washington, D. C., where the stamps will be on sale on the following day.

Sale of all Canal Zone commemorative stamps will be discontinued on Feb. 28, 1941, according to C. H. Calhoun, director of posts, Balboa Heights, C. Z. The stamps referred to include the airmail set of six values which was placed on sale July 15, 1939, and the regular postage set of 16 values showing "before and after" views of the canal which was placed on sale Aug. 15, 1939.

All stamps remaining on hand at the close of business Feb. 28, 1941, will be inventoried and burned during the following month.

The Canal Zone Philatelic agency which is addressed in care of the postmaster at Balboa Heights, can supply complete sets of all 22 denominations in reasonable quantities for a limited time. Wholesale orders for 1 cent stamps will not be accepted, and 3 cent regular and 15 cent airmail stamps are nearing exhaustion. Orders for stamps should be accompanied by money order covering the cost of stamps and return postage. Registration is optional, but stamps sent by ordinary mail are at the purchaser's risk. No stamps are sent on approval and no refunds will be made except for stamps damaged in the mail. Plate number blocks will not be supplied except where blocks of 24 or more stamps are ordered.

The latest inventory of stamps on hand at the Canal Zone Philatelic agency is dated Aug. 1. This shows that only 9,000 1 cent stamps and 25,000 15 cent airmail stamps are available. There are 55,000 copies of the 50 cent regular, 41,250 copies of the 25 cent regular, and 70,200 copies of the $1 airmail. All other denominations are available in quantities above 125,000 copies.

Complete figures are revealed on the number of covers carried on the first flight of the United States-New Zealand air route, FAM 19, which started from San Francisco on July 12, and left Auckland, N. Z., on the return leg on July 20. No service was given between San Francisco and Los Angeles, as these points are on domestic service, and no service was given between San Francisco and Honolulu, as this trip was previously covered by the China Clipper. The quantities for other points follow:

San Francisco to Canton Island, 5,741; to Noumea, 5,803; and to Auckland, 16,275.

Los Angeles to Honolulu, 3,634; to Canton Island, 3,478; to Noumea, 2,841, and to Auckland, 3,751.

Honolulu to Canton Island, 6,008; to Noumea, 6,734; to Auckland, 7,928, and to Los Angeles, 4,668.

Canton Island to Noumea, 4,626; to Auckland, 4,720; to Honolulu, 5,326; to Los Angeles, 2,438, and to San Francisco, 5,636.

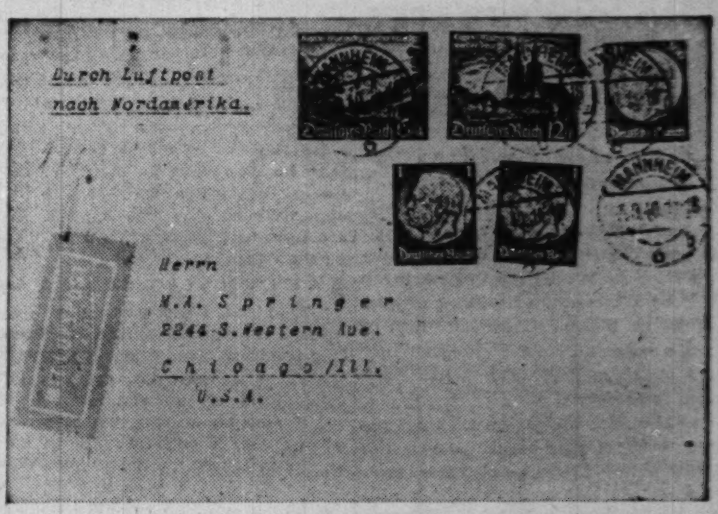
Noumea to Auckland, 6,332; to Canton Island, 5,605; to Honolulu, 4,777; to Los Angeles, 2,248, and to San Francisco, 11,446.

Auckland to Noumea, 6,590; to Canton Island, 4,520; to Honolulu, 5,736; to Los Angeles, 2,450, and to San Francisco, 14,687. In addition to these figures from Auckland, 3,540 covers from Australia were carried to various points.

There were 77,871 serviced first flight covers on the outbound trip and 76,127 similar covers on the return trip. Covers originating at points where philatelic treatment was not given are not counted in the totals.

It appears that the Los Angeles point was not fully taken care of by collectors, and that there will be only 2,248 complete point to point sets, that being the number of covers carried between Noumea and Los Angeles.

Austin Philatelic club will open the fall season with a good will friendship rally at which Col. John A. Hooper, commander-in-chief of the Pioneer Philatelic Phalanx, and Lucy Charlotte Hooper, his wife, will be the principal speakers. The meeting will be at Austin Town Hall, Central avenue at Lake street, Sept. 18, at 8 p. m. Members and guests who care to meet the guests of honor are arranging to have supper at 6 p. m. at the Central Plaza hotel, 321 North Central avenue. All collectors are invited to participate in this meeting and members of the Phalanx are specially urged to attend. While membership in the Phalanx is open free to all collectors, age and period of collecting will determine the section in which the collector is located.



This recent German cover has been provided by M. A. Springer of Chicago. It shows a set of two recent stamps issued to commemorate the return of Eupen and Malmedy to the German reich. The inscription reads "Eupen-Malmedy wieder Deutsch."

Steven Milis of the state division of highways, Springfield, Ill., who has been a constant contributor of Hungarian covers for illustrations in The Stamp Collector of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, came very nearly stealing the show at the recent philatelic exposition in connection with the Illinois State fair. His awards included first prizes in airmail covers of the world, first flights around the world, and view postal cards of the world. He also received second prizes for a centenary of stamps exhibit and for the National Parks issue of United States stamps.

Casual Knitted Cardigan

812

By Jean Macdonald.

The casual, buttonless knitted cardigan is a favorite, not only with the collegians, but with all girls interested in active or spectator sports. It is longer than the usual cardigan, and has ribbing along the sleeves and down the front, giving a new touch to an otherwise simple pattern. The buttonless feature adds to the casual manner. It is knitted of lightweight sweater wool, and is available in 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inch bust measurements.

For instructions in knitting the casual buttonless cardigan, No. 812, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

New Drapery Material.

Coquette, a new washable drapery material, is made of mohair, rayon, and cotton, has a novelty weave, and is shown in nine different pastel colors.

Numerology

By Evelyn Holmes

Sept. 15, 1940.

Universal day—A jittery day. Keep calm and in the background.

Lucky numbers—When it comes to occupations, those born on the 6th, 15th, or 24th, will find that they have better conditions for such work on the days which add up to six, or in places numbered six, etc. This is an especially good house number for those who are domestically inclined, and it is a good number [or the combinations which add to five] for institutions and all educational projetcs. If you are a mother or housewife then use the number six as your "lucky" number.

Year ahead — This couldn't have been a very satisfactory year unless you were resigned to be patient. Now you can look forward to more gaiety and fun.

Pompon Hat, Flower Lei

825

By Ellen Bruce.

Crocheted accessories for fall will be most important this season because of their color content. They are in decided contrast to the outfit with which they are worn. The crocheted hat with clever pompons on the front matches the good looking flower lei which is worn in lieu of costume jewelry. These are quick and inexpensive changes which add to one's wardrobe chic and also make ideal gifts. The hat is created in knitting worsted and the lei is a combination of knitting worsted and three-ply saxony.

For instructions in crocheting the pompon hat and flower lei, No. 825, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Lowest Infant Mortality in U. S. in Minnesota

Minnesota has the lowest infant mortality rate in the United States, with only 35.4 babies of every 1,000 dying during their first year.

PATTERNS by Clotilde | RECIPES by Mary Meade | BEAUTY NOTES by Eleanor Nangle

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

All kinds of patterns today for all types of persons and occasions. Each bears the stamp of autumn, 1940, and we know you'll like every one.

No. 3071, an afternoon dress with draped, graceful lines, ideal in crêpe, satin, silk jersey and sheer woolen, in plain colors, with black preferred. A contrasting, crushed sash enhances the waistline, while the neckline is plain as a concession to costume jewelry. There's a companion bolero.

No. 3354, a jumper frock for the college girl, and the one in high school as well. The bodice is pinafore style, the waistline is slim and fitted, and the skirt is flared, with those clever new pockets which are part of the skirt itself. The short sleeved blouse contrasts, and has a Peter Pan collar. Silks and woolen, silks and cottons, cottons and woolens unite effectively.

No. 2702, an afternoon dress for the mature figure. There's no collar on the heart shaped neckline, and the bodice is deftly shirred. Buttons are used all the way down the front, and only a very narrow belt is used at the waistline. Puffed shoulders give way to long, semifitted sleeves. Use any crêpe or sheer woolen.

No. 3374, a jumper costume for the subdeb, grand for school days and even for parties. All types of fabrics make up well, and there's a huge pocket for "things and stuff." It's so much like big sister's outfit that little sister will love it.

Style No. 3071 is designed for sizes 12, 14 and 16, and 36, 38 and 40 inch bust measurements. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material for dress, 1½ yards for bolero.

Your Stars ★ Today ★

By WYNN

Sunday, Sept. 15.

Seeds of possible discord may be drifting about today, but we don't have to plant them in our garden of life. Relax. Avoid contests. Week ahead tends toward the impractically emotional. Remain calm; look far into all possibilities.

The Real Thing.

The man or woman who really wants to see the world better off is doing something about it. It isn't enough that we merely agree in principle to a certain high standard. We believe in coöperation only when we can see ourselves sharing with those less strong, less wise, than ourselves—not when we see the matter as calling only for those above us to share their strength and wisdom with us.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead from birthday today grows gradually more opportune; push for results March-April and on; look into new plans, changes, now to March. Love life can be improved. Danger: Now-Sept. 29; Jan. 30-Feb. 7; June 5-20, 1941.

Tomorrow.

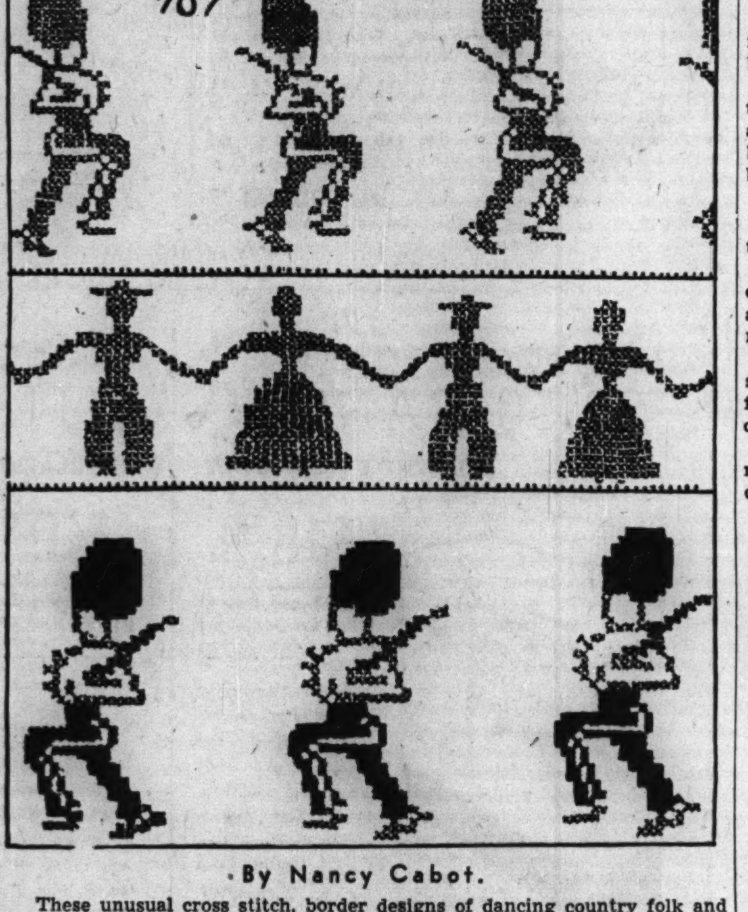
Better early than late; see other's side as well as your own.

Do you want an individual interpretation for your own personal date? Send 10c for your 1941 horoscope (or 5c for balance of 1940 horoscope—15c for both) to WYNN, Tribune Astrologer, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, date of birth, and address.

Breakfast Surprise.

Apple butter spread on buttered toast and then reheated is a grand treat to surprise the youngsters at breakfast.

Cheerful Cross-Stitch Figures



By Nancy Cabot.

These unusual cross stitch, border designs of dancing country folk and marching soldiers are easy and colorful embroidery patterns to work. They are suitable for children's garments, pockets, aprons, luncheon cloths, mats, towels, curtains, etc. The peasant motifs are 3 inches tall and the soldiers measure 5 inches. The hot iron transfer pattern includes 10 of each, together with detailed instructions for working.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the peasant dancers and marching soldiers, No. 707, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Week's Menus Aid Task of Meals for Two

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1940: By The Chicago Tribune.]

In some ways cooking for two persons is an easy job. In other ways it isn't, but stack the advantage of having only two palates to please against the disadvantage of having a "leftover" problem to deal with, and you come out about even.

Fortunately, most recipes may be divided without ill results, and small sized saucepans, cake pans, and other kitchen equipment are available wherever housewares are sold. The cook for two who is living on a food budget will find that she can afford rather expensive chops and steaks now and then, while her friend who cooks for four or six cannot. Two portions of high priced meat rarely strain the purse strings, while more than that amount almost always does.

This set of a week's menus for two at moderate cost shows how the leftover problem may be taken care of appetizingly.

A WEEK'S MENUS FOR TWO AT MODERATE COST.

SUNDAY.

Breakfast—Orange juice, soft cooked eggs, baked bacon, toast, coffee.

Dinner—Broiled halves of young chicken, mashed potatoes, glazed carrots, fresh plum, grape and melon salad with French dressing, refrigerator rolls, cottage pudding, milk or coffee.

Supper—Tomato rabbit, mixed pickles, Waldorf salad, cookies, and tea or hot chocolate.

MONDAY.

Breakfast—Chilled melon, cooked wheat cereal with top milk, leftover refrigerator rolls heated in the oven, jam, coffee.

Lunch—Cream of celery soup with crackers, fresh fruit plate [fruits served on Sunday, plus any others available], tea.

Dinner—Club steaks, French fries, broiled tomatoes or fried green tomatoes, jellied carrots, celery, pineapple and pickle salad, hot cinnamon rolls [made from more of the refrigerator dough], frosted cupcakes [made at time Sunday's cottage pudding was made, from half of the batter], coffee.

TUESDAY.

Breakfast—Grapefruit halves, whole wheat and cornmeal pancakes with sirup, bacon, coffee.

Lunch—Canned baked beans baked with green pepper, onion and sliced fresh tomato, lettuce and cucumber sandwiches, grapes, milk.

Dinner—Ham slice [allow for some leftover] with sweet potatoes and applesauce, buttered peas, pear salad, hard rolls, baked cup custard, coffee, or tea.

WEDNESDAY.

Breakfast—Cooked spiced prunes, cornflakes [use individual packages of breakfast cereals], scrambled eggs, cinnamon toast, coffee.

Lunch—Avocados stuffed with crabmeat-celery salad, toasted rolls with jam, chocolate frosted cookies, milk.

Dinner—Minute steaks, mashed potatoes, sautéed summer squash, tomato-cucumber salad, baking powder biscuits, butterscotch sundaes, coffee or tea.

THURSDAY.

Breakfast—Tomato juice, toasted split, leftover, baking powder biscuits with marmalade, poached eggs, coffee.

Lunch—Ham salad sandwiches [use leftover ham], canned cream of onion soup, more of the frosted cookies, tea.

Dinner—Roast veal, browned potatoes, chopped spinach or other greens with bacon dressing and hard cooked egg, sliced orange salad on watercress, French dressing, applesauce, bread pudding, coffee.

FRIDAY.

Breakfast—Fresh fruit cup, pecan waffles with sirup, coffee.

Lunch—Veal and vegetable salad, rye wafers or hot buttered toast, banana layer cake, milk or tea.

Dinner—Broiled trout steaks, potato puffs, young beets with butter and caraway seeds, pineapple-cucumber salad, French dressing, cheese bread, Bavarian cream, coffee.

SATURDAY.

Breakfast—Orange juice, French toast with jelly, bacon, coffee.

Lunch—Creamed asparagus and eggs in timbale cases, cheese bread and strawberry jam sandwiches, date-nut and fruit salad, tea.

Dinner—Hamburgers with tomato slices, onion and mustard, frozen fruit salad, remainder of banana cake, coffee.

It shouldn't be necessary to go to market for groceries more than twice during the week.

How Sad a Day

By Eleanor Jewett.

How sad is a gray day
At the end of summer
When the rain falls quietly
And the sky like a pillow
Pressed by a threatening hand
Blots out the sun.
How sad is a gray day
When summer is dying;
The soul of a gray day
Is in a loon's crying.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

[TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

To complement not only the gold in her hair, but the autumn colors in her costume, her makeup is keyed to a new red that takes its tints from the maple leaf turned scarlet. It's flattering and different, but not exotic.

One of the things we like best about a new arrival in the way of makeups is that it is much, much more red than brown. We've backtracked before after emphatic claims that no queer color would go [purplish lipsticks, for instance, which at first we thought were awful and then thought were elegant]. But we have yet to see a really brown lipstick that we'd wear to a morgue.

The new makeup is the lovely, exciting red of the maple leaf set ablaze in early autumn. It sets off virtually any costume color, but is particularly effective with the browns and the greens and those rich, dense blacks that so many women never forsake.

There is a trace of a golden tint to it, but basically it's a rollicking red. There is a lipstick, one of those smooth, creamy textured ones, a cream, a dry rouge, and a nail enamel in the ensemble.

As we've said before, this is a year when women who never before gave up their choice of black as a basic wardrobe color will make a switch. Color, you'll see, is one of the most exciting aspects of the new fall clothes. Not even the change in silhouette is so impressive. Women of all ages are finding color a flattering, interesting weapon in their battle for chic, so there is no avoiding the necessity of owning makeups keyed for various costume colors. You'll find that color on the lips must be chosen for its harmony with costume color as well as for the dash it gives your face.

This new maple leaf red isn't at all exotic, but it is different and it's keyed to the fashion right colors. And it isn't expensive.

The Lady of the House

These "up until ers" get me down. You, too? We used to do all right with "until," or even just "till," but for a long time now it has been "up until" such and such a time or event, no matter which way they were going. Down with all up-untillers!

I just got that rave off my chest when I ran spang into an "aren't I?"—in a slick magazine, too. I hoped they had all been exterminated, but there must have been a lone survivor. If only it had been a blue eyed, golden haired baby doll that said it, instead of that "big strong man," I could have borne it without weeping.

A real horse and buggy came down our street the other day. The cloppity-clop reminded me of the old two wheeled cabs on Michigan avenue long ago. The cabby with the tall hat way up on a little seat at the back, long whip and reins in hand. Remember?

Europe—A Glorious Adventure for You. An old world to explore . . . fascinating sights . . . healthful, joyous recreation . . . Oberammergau . . . Shakespeare's land . . . high Warwickshire hedges escort you to Kenilworth. The Earl of Leicester spent more than $5,000 a day entertaining Queen Elizabeth there in 1575. Spend a lazy afternoon in Stratford . . . in the house on Henley street where Shakespeare was born . . . perfectly preserved . . . even the gardens contain trees, shrubs, and flowers mentioned in the plays . . . loveliest of churches his hallowed resting place . . . the font in which he was baptized. A pleasant woodland path takes you to Shottery where Shakespeare paid court to gentle Anne Hathaway. . . .

[From travel literature of 10 years ago].

Rain In the Woods.

Like great gray owls a-wing, softly,
the rain comes thru the woods.
Snuffs out the bright sunbeams;
makes old trees don gray hoods.

Darker gleam the mosses of the path where the wandering rain went by;
and out of the dripping hedgerow
tumbles a crumpled butterfly.

If you haven't made all your apple jelly, try dropping a few leaves of old fashioned rose geranium into a batch for the last few moments of boiling. They add interesting flavor and a delightful fragrance. Did you ever try boiling the juice just to the sirupy stage and using it as a sauce for pancakes or waffles? Tastes very fresh and good.

This morning the honey man came, his basket of honey combs on his arm. The blustering wind had an ominous chill, but his slow, gentle voice reminded me of the hum of drowsy bees in sunny clover fields. For a little while we talked of old country roads, of old glass, of this and that. Then he went on his way, leaving a little something besides the honey I had bought and, I hope, taking away a little something besides the money I paid him. Anyhow, I had a restful half hour and my family does like comb honey.

My neighbor over the back fence is pounding rugs again. She is just the "beatinest" woman, when it comes to pounding rugs. Doesn't call it a day unless she airs and beats at least one or two. It must be part of her design for living—expressing her true inwardness chasing dirt. Me, I am not one of those "perfect housekeepers."

I hear the scissors grinder come trundling down the block, the slow cling clang of his little brass bell heralding his approach. His swarthy skin and dark eyes tell of some distant sunny land where he played as a child. A few youngsters follow him about and stand now to watch while he mends an umbrella for a thrifty householder. Two rowdy little fellows coming home from school on their bicycles swoop into the yard to snatch apples. Not liking what they find, they throw them against the trunk of the old tree with resounding thwacks and are off again, whistling and shouting. The wistful eyes of the scissors grinder follow them and I fancy he sees other little boys in other lands, terror stricken, hungry, hurt, and alone.

Reporter Sees Adrian, Hears Style Theories

By Bettina Bedwell.

One of the most potent names in Hollywood is that of Adrian, and I'm not excepting names such as Gable and Tyrone Power, either. His power over women, the movie big shots who count up the profits of the box office, tell me is "simply colossal." "Gowns by Adrian" is a subtitle that packs the women in. He has a long record of dressing the greatest of the Hollywood women stars so they look "simply divine," and who can blame any girl if she dreams of what she'd be if only Adrian fixed her up with the kind of dream clothes he designs for Hedy LaMarr, or for Garbo?

I had to come to Hollywood to see Gilbert Adrian on home ground, altho I heard of him plenty in Paris, London and New York. And it's my opinion that some of the grandest of Adrian's designing talent never has been seen on the screen. What he can do with simple but creative elegance for private life rates high. Apart from that he's one of the few of the world famous designers I've met who is a character and personality aside from his work, as Paul Poiret and Jean Patou were vital and interesting, as Gabrielle Chanel, Valentina and Elsa Schiaparelli are personalities. In looks he's tall, easy-built and has eyes that don't miss a trick. He is a witty and fascinating talker. When I interviewed him, in his big cream and beige atelier on the Metro lot, he was wearing a casual costume in which blues and grays mixed in perfect accord, a compromise between the careless Bohemian dress of Poiret and the worldly swank of Jean Patou.

He's quick to tell you that the clothes he makes for the stars are designed for the special atmosphere of the screen. It's his opinion that the movies not only dramatize women, they also dramatize fashion. Screen clothes can be audacious, extreme, and later develop good fashions for private life, he feels. Women generally, and producers and directors, too, he opines, are conservative about clothes, but by seeing audacious things worn by the stars they get accustomed to them so they can become styles. But he'd love to design some clothes for women in social life, he says. He could get outside of the particular rules that must control clothes for a movie.

What he tries to find out, when he is designing for a woman, is the "essence" of her. By this he means her mental and emotional makeup, as well as the way she's built and her eyes, coloring, and hair.

Greta Garbo, says Adrian, has an intangible beauty that's sometimes invisible, sometimes breath-taking, so she has to be dressed subtly, nothing obvious. At the same time she can give something to her clothes that is daring, that isn't fashion, but she will make it so.

Hedy La Marr is a constant beauty whose looks are always striking, almost flamboyant, so he never designs her clothes to be illusive and subtle like Garbo's. She sets off more dramatic dresses best.

Norma Shearer is more conventional, but he designs her clothes to be not too correct in this sense, but what he calls "courageous conventional." He thinks, apropos of this, that the average woman should be courageous in her dress, and he thinks we're getting more and more so. We look more and more like actresses the way we dress, so much so that many women now go to the theater or the movies to check up and see if the actresses are keeping up with them!

One trouble with most women is, Adrian thinks, that the actress usually knows her type and sticks to it, while a woman in private life one day thinks she's Garbo, and the next that she's maybe LaMarr or Crawford, when she may be Lana Turner all the time.

Scott CustomBuilt Radio

One of the finest receivers in the world today is the standard Scott Philharmonic. It incorporates 30 tubes including tuning eyes and rectifiers, and provides a degree of perfection undreamed of a short time ago. Many of the world's leading musicians own this instrument; it is widely used by universities, scientific laboratories, broadcasting studios, governments, and for various kinds of experimental or research work where an unlimited receiving range, exceptional selectivity, and extremely quiet operation are imperative.

A very few of these world famous instruments are now available at a price that is actually lower than what you would pay for a mass production radio. Each set, beautifully chromium plated, has been thoroughly reconditioned in our laboratories and is guaranteed for one year. A complete set of new laboratory matched tubes is furnished. Price only $197.50 complete. Cabinets extra from $15.

Demonstrations daily [except Sunday] from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Would you like to live in unusual places? Some with 2 story ceilings, some with huge living rooms, some like a little 2 story house which we heat and service, some so quiet you can sleep undisturbed all day, some right on the corner of the boulevard. All on or near N. Michigan avenue, just a few blocks north of the river, so you can keep yourself fit walking to and from your office, see and hear all the theaters and concerts you wish, and still have a full night's sleep. Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

It's Crabapple Time.

September 14, 1940.

THE families on the Du Page county farm do not have to worry about the 1940 prospects for crabapple jelly. Judging by the crop now ripening on the trees there will be no shortage of this delicacy, which the farm women make each season. Wherever we walked on the farm this week we invariably passed wild crabtrees loaded with fruit. We noticed an especially large number of these apples on trees which line one of the shorter farm roads. On both sides of this lane there are clumps of cherry, thornapple and crabtrees which make it a notable source of wild fruits for the farm families.

The small green crabapple is not yet ready to be picked. Therefore the pungent aroma of cooking fruit is not emanating from the farm kitchens right now. Several seasons ago one of the farm women discovered that the apples had a more delicious flavor if they were left on the trees until late in the season when frost nipped everything and then caused the apples to fall to the ground. This frost treatment apparently has a beneficial effect on the hard little apples. So nobody is in a hurry to pick the wild crabs at this time of the year. In fact, they may be utilized for cooking even after snow has come.

Autumn Colors Appear.

Slowly the autumn colors are increasing in the hedgerows and the woodlots. One of the more decorative touches in the woods is provided by the haw trees with their bright red apples which nearly every outdoor fan calls thornapples. We noticed many of these fruit-laden trees in a woodlot north of the big pond. And the wild cherry trees are just as black as the haw trees are red because of an abundance of fruit.

It's been several years since there was such a heavy crop of the sweet black cherries which grow wild on the farm. They are now prime for eating or for making wine and jelly. One big tree that we visit each year about this time didn't have a robin in it, so we were able to eat all the fruit we wanted without these birds making a fuss about our intrusion.

Just a few feet from the big black cherry tree the fall flower combinations are putting on quite a show. The land is low at this point [it's near the edge of the big pond], so the tall purple ironweed, the yellow goldenrod and the deep blue fall asters make a striking display against the green of the willow trees.

Mallards on Wing.

Altho the fall migration of mallard ducks won't reach northern Illinois for some weeks, local birds raised on the farm ponds are beginning to fly around the country looking for food. We heard some mallards quacking on the pond, so we sneaked up on them. Swimming around the farm ducks [mallards raised on the farm this summer] were four wild mallards which went into the air with startled quacks as soon as they saw us. One of the drakes in this quartet of visitors was so close to us when he took wing that we could see he didn't have his full plumage. Instead of his neck being a deep shiny green it was a pale green mixed with brownish gray—the mark of a mallard drake which hasn't developed his autumn plumage.

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH WHITNEY (THE FORMER MRS. JOHN HAY WHITNEY)

BEAUTY CREED:

"I'd rather have a beautifully-cared-for skin than Beauty."

So you asserted pridefully—and rightfully.

And, contrariwise, this beautifully-cared-for skin of yours proclaims you a Beauty!

For no girl who exercises such care of her skin—joyously and meticulously—ever fails to exercise similar care of two other aspects of her person which, indeed, set off her skin's beauty. Namely, the shining sculptured glory of her well-kept hair, the chic simplicity of her dress.

All three are matters of Taste. And Games of Skill!

Play your part in the exciting game of skin care with enthusiasm and with a wise head—and you will have exciting rewards.

Play it, as do many members of our foremost families, according to the authoritative rules laid down by Pond's:

There are five moves in this stimulating Game. Each has its definite intention, its ample rewards.

QUICK RELEASE—Bury your face under lush, luxurious Pond's Cold Cream, and spank it forthrightly for 3 full minutes—yes, even 5 minutes—with cream-wreathed fingers. Pond's mixes with the dried, dead cells, make-up and foreign accumulations on the surface of your skin, softens and sets them free.

REMOVAL—Clean off the softened debris with the white tenderness of Pond's Tissues. Wiped off also are the softened tops of some of the blackheads, making it easier for the little plugs of hardened sebum to push their way to the surface.

REPEAT—A second time spank your face with cream-softened fingers. This spanking increases both the actions of Pond's Cold Cream—cleansing and softening. Again wipe off with Pond's Tissues. Notice that superficial lines seem less noticeable—pores look finer.

COOL ASTRINGENCE—Now splash with cool, fragrant Pond's Skin Freshener, slapped on with cotton dripping wet with it.

SMOOTH FINISH—Last, mask your face with a downy coating of Pond's Vanishing Cream. This cream's specific duty is to disperse remaining harsh particles, aftermath of exposure, leaving your skin silky, smooth, pliant! Wipe off after one full minute for the richest rewards. Then observe with what ease your skin receives its powder, how surprisingly it holds it.

Play this through at least once daily—before retiring or during the day. Repeat it in abbreviated form when your skin and make-up need freshening. Act now to start your new daily rules for a fresh and flower-soft skin, with Pond's authoritative Creams. Nearly one-third of the women in the United States now use Pond's!

WOMAN-SKIN

so different from a man's in its compelling softness . . . its ineffably tender look and feel. Instinct-wise, women since time began have nurtured and protected the priceless heritage of flower-fresh skin, made it a true and natural accent of their essential femininity.

Send for Trial Case. Fill in and forward at once the coupon below. Pond's, Dept. 155-CVJ, Clinton, Conn. Please send me a Pond's kit of the 3 Pond's Creams and 7 Pond's Powder shades. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

What your fall foundation must do

It must give you a raised, separated bustline, a longer waist, and hips that seem to melt away. The entire body line should appear long and tubular. Schiaparelli calls it the Cigarette Silhouette and collaborates with Formfit designers in giving you the figure you'll want this fall. At the better stores.

"SICK!" the day she'd looked forward to for weeks, ruined by "REGULAR" PAIN

The idea of suffering, giving-in to functional pain of menstruation, has become old-fashioned! With Midol, millions of women keep active and comfortable right through their trying days.

Midol is a new formula developed for its special purpose. It contains no opiates. One comforting ingredient is prescribed frequently by thousands of doctors and for further relief another ingredient, used exclusively in Midol, aids in reducing the spasmodic pain peculiar to the menstrual period.

If you have no organic disorder calling for medical or surgical treatment, Midol should help you. Why not try it? Then, if your "regular" pain isn't eased, see your doctor. THE TRUTH ABOUT CORNS

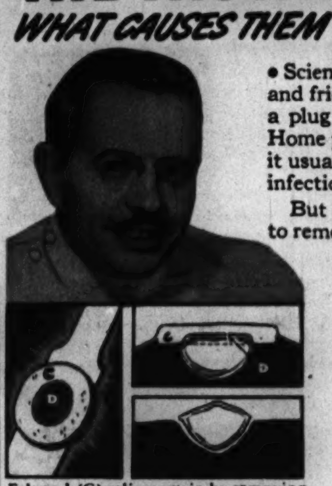
WHAT CAUSES THEM · HOW TO GET RID OF THEM



Felt pad (C) relieves pain by removing pressure. Special formula (D) acts on corn, gently loosens it so it can be lifted right out.

• Science shows that corns are caused by pressure and friction which pack a mass of dead cells into a plug whose base presses on sensitive nerves. Home paring only gives temporary relief because it usually affects only the surface—means risk of infection.

But now this scientific method makes it easy to remove corns. Put a Blue-Jay pad neatly over the corn. It relieves pain quickly by removing pressure. The medicated formula gently loosens the corn so it can be lifted right out. Simply by avoiding the pressure and friction which caused your corns, you can prevent their return.

Don't suffer needlessly. Follow the example of millions and get Blue-Jay Corn Plasters today—only 25c for 6.

War Clouds Over East Indies!

Chicago Sunday Tribune

Graphic Section

Sept. 15, 1940

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

PRESENTED here is a map of the orient, in a number of respects the richest and most desirable part of the world. What will be the future of this portion of the globe depends largely upon the outcome of the war between Great Britain and the Rome-Berlin axis powers and upon what steps, if any, the Japanese empire takes to extend its control or even its influence while the European nations are occupied with war.

Shown on the map in red are lands of the British empire—India and Burma, the first teeming with a mixed and restless population, the second undeveloped but with vast possibilities; British Malaya, overlooking the sea route to the far east; Australia, a great island continent, sparsely populated but wealthy in natural resources; New Zealand, a sprawling insular paradise in the South sea; numerous other islands, large and small, and seaports of consequence in the British imperial system.

Shown also on the map is the eastern fringe of Africa, largely under British control despite the recent inroads made by Italy. Because of the remoteness of East Africa from England, and its associations with things of the east rather than of the west, it well may be considered as belonging to the orient.

While these British-controled lands comprise a large part of the territory of the orient that is under European domination, they do not figure as prominently as possible war prizes as the Netherlands Indies, those verdant equatorial islands that today are in the strange position of belonging to a nation that has been overrun by the armies of another nation.

The Netherlands Indies are a part of the Dutch colonial empire, but the seat of this empire, the Netherlands themselves, has been taken by the Germans. Because Germany, tho strong on land, is woefully weak at sea, it is unable at the present to seize the Netherlands Indies. This curious situation applies also to French territory in the orient. France has been conquered by the Germans, but the conquerors are unable to seize the outlying possessions of the French. The immediate fears of the Netherlands Indies and French Indo-China therefore are not concerned mainly with Germany but with a power that lies much closer to the scene.

It is the shadow of Japan, falling over the Netherlands Indies and Indo-China, that is bringing nightmares not only to the peoples of these lands but to the British in India, Malaya, Australia, and New Zealand as well. Will the Japanese now (Continued on page two.)

NEXT SUNDAY—"Alien Art of Insurrection," the Technique of Street Fighting

move southward on French Indo-China and the Netherlands Indies, or will they wait out the conflict raging in Europe? Only the Japanese know the answer.

Japanese statesmen, bitten by the bug of imperial expansion, today refer to their own islands, Corea, Manchukuo, and their conquests in China under the term East Asia. They have a broader term, however, which is Greater East Asia. Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's foreign minister, asserts that the broader term includes the South sea and that his country's ultimate aim is to establish a stabilized force for self-sufficiency, embracing, in addition to Japan, China, Manchukuo, and other Japanese-controled lands, the territories of French Indo-China and the Netherlands Indies. This may be done possibly by economic pressures brought to bear upon the weaker countries, and it also possibly may be done by force. But force means—war!

Japan of all nations is most favorably situated to make naval threats against the Netherlands Indies and Indo-China. Likewise it is favorably situated to threaten British possessions in the East Indies, Australia, and the commonwealth of the Philippines. Japan's numerous mandated islands, stretching for 2,500 miles east and west, north of the equator, serve as a screen to protect it from attack from across the Pacific. These are the islands that the World war peace settlements handed to Japan as a reward for providing next to nothing in the way of military and naval assistance to the Allies.

Reasons for possible Japanese designs upon the Netherlands Indies and French Indo-China are not difficult to find. These colonial territories are rich in natural resources. They possess raw products that Japan needs, minerals, foodstuffs, and commodities required by industry.

Clouds Over East Indies!

The Netherlands Indies are made up of the Great Sunda Islands of Sumatra, Java, and Celebes, with the greater part of Borneo; all of the Lesser Sunda Islands except a portion of Timor; and the Moluccas and the western half of New Guinea. Java and Madura, the last named a small island close to the northern coast of Java, are the most important islands of the entire group. Their possession of rich volcanic and alluvial soils, combined with excellent facilities for irrigation, confers great natural advantages on them, making it possible for them, with only one-fifteenth of the land comprising the whole archipelago, to support about one-half of the population of the entire East Indies group. Java and Madura together have approximately 20 million acres of crop lands, as compared with 15 million acres of such land in Japan proper. Java and Madura have approximately 42 million people out of a total of about 61 million for all the Netherlands Indies islands combined. Java, with 817 inhabitants to the square mile, is one of the most densely populated agricultural lands in the world.

The most important staple product of Java for many years was coffee, but, as in Ceylon, this branch of cultivation eventually gave way to that of other tropical products, principally sugar, rubber, tea, oil palms, tobacco, and cinchona. The Netherlands Indies have what amounts to a world monopoly in the last-named product and also in kapok and pepper.

There is a considerable output of mineral oil from Java, but less than from Sumatra and Borneo. The Netherlands Indies as a whole are the world's fifth largest producers of mineral oil, pumping approximately 60 million barrels of crude petroleum annually, as compared with Japan's annual production of only about two million barrels. Like Italy, for example, Japan depends almost entirely on outside sources for the oil necessary to fuel its ships, to operate its war machines, and to run its industries.

Japan also depends upon outside sources for its tin. British Malaya is the world's leading producer of tin, the Netherlands Indies are second, Siam fourth, and China fifth. The islands of Banka and Billiton are the Netherlands Indies' chief centers of tin production. With the exception of Bolivia, all principal sources of tin lie within the orient. Even the United States of America obtains most of its tin supply—more than 83 per cent—from British Malaya and the Netherlands Indies, since Bolivian tin is largely a British monopoly.

As once the ancient Phœnicians in their tiny ships were compelled to sail clear up to Cornwall, England, to obtain tin for their weapons and implements, today the western world has to turn to the east for this valuable metal. Tin is imported by the industrial nations mostly in the metallic state or as a concentrate for further refinement. It is used largely to form alloys or to cover sheets of iron and steel with a coating to protect against rust. Thus it is a most important metal in the metal container industry.

The Netherlands Indies stand a close second to British Malaya in rubber production, the two together providing more than three-fourths of all of the world's raw rubber. French Indo-China is third, Ceylon fourth, Siam fifth, and Sarawak (a British dependency in Borneo) sixth. All but about 5 per cent of the world's rubber supply comes from the orient, where the trees from which it is obtained are cultivated on vast plantations. Only a very small part of the supply comes from the wild trees of Brazil, the land in which rubber trees were first found. About one-half of the world's supply of rubber is consumed in the United States, where the largest tire factories are located.

Japan annually has been selling about 50 million dollars' worth of goods to the Netherlands Indies and has been importing from these islands about 25 million dollars' worth of goods—a fat trade balance in its favor, which it would not care to surrender but would much rather increase. An extension of Japanese influence in these Dutch colonies would be one way of getting the native inhabitants to buy more Japanese goods. The natives do not have a great deal of money with which to purchase imported wares, which explains why cheap Japanese products usually find a better market in the native bazars than the superior but more expensive products from Europe and America.

Twenty per cent of all the exports of the Netherlands Indies, measured as to value, went to the Netherlands in the years just preceding the present war. Fifteen per cent went to Singapore, 12 per cent to the United States of America, 7 per cent to the United Kingdom, and only about 4½ per cent to Japan. Of the goods that these Dutch islands bought from the outside world, however, 26 per cent, measured as to value, came from Japan, 14 per cent from the Netherlands, and less than 7 per cent from the United States.

It has been mentioned in this article that French Indo-China is the world's third greatest producer of rubber. This fact alone makes it important in international markets, and it is a large producer of other valuable commodities. Its chief product is rice, millions of acres being planted to this crop alone. Other important products are anthracite, zinc, phospates, cotton goods, and pottery. France, up until its recent collapse, was able to dominate the markets of this colony in the orient, supplying more than 50 per cent of its imports by reason of the fact that French goods entered the colony duty free.

On the sea route from Japan to French Indo-China and the Netherlands Indies lie the Philippine Islands, still under the control of the United States, but only weakly protected against possible seizure or foreign occupation. The islands of this vast group, supporting a population of about 16 million, stand in a favorable position, so far as Japanese designs are concerned, by being attached politically to a powerful nation that is not now at war—the United States.

On the other hand, however, the Philippines would provide a rich prize for Japan, and they are within easy striking distance of that nation. The Philippines are rich in resources. Their chief agricultural products are rice, Manila hemp, copra, sugar cane, corn, tobacco, and manguey. Various fruits grow there in profusion. The forests of the islands provide valuable timber, gums, resins, vegetable oils, rattan, bamboo, barks, and dyewoods, while rubber and cinchona are being cultivated in increasing volume. Silver, gold, lead, zinc, copper, iron, coal, petroleum, asbestos, and manganese are included in the mineral products of the Philippines.

In the world's sugar production the Philippine Islands, which are slated to become independent in 1945, have assumed great importance since they were taken over by the United States. Statistics disclose that these islands produced 1,152,304 tons of sugar in the 1938-'39 crop year, as against only 529,091 tons 15 years earlier. This output places the Philippines ahead of both Hawaii and Puerto Rico. The Philippine sugar production (all cane sugar) is approximately half as great as the total production of cane and beet sugar of the United States proper.

Just as the Philippines are weakly defended, so are the Dutch and French possessions in the orient. But in the case of the Dutch and French possessions there now are no empires to fall back upon for protection. The Netherlands Indies and French Indo-China are not strong enough to protect themselves, even tho they are carrying on as if nothing had happened to their home governments. The Netherlands Indies, now being ruled by remote control from London, have a small army, navy, and air force, and make a pretense of military defense, but a power such as Japan would have little difficulty taking over these islands unless some other nation, such as the United States, came to their assistance.

The United States, as a matter of fact, is left definitely as the only major power in a position to oppose Japanese expansion in the far east. The rôle of soviet Russia in this connection presents a big question mark. Should Japan win control of Indo-China, the Netherlands Indies, or British Malaya, the United States still probably could buy the products it needs from these colonies, yet this country could not view with equanimity a move which would give vast cheap supplies of strategic materials to a power or powers bent on world domination. Nor could it accept Japanese control of the Straits of Malacca, the doorway to the far east, now dominated by the British at Singapore.

In Australia and New Zealand the possible danger from Japan is well understood. While these two commonwealths of the British empire are furnishing troops to Great Britain for the English and the Egyptian fighting fronts, they are not neglecting their home defenses. Australia, for example, has just set in motion a 200-million-dollar defense program which includes the manufacture of rifles, artillery, ammunition, and military planes.

Moreover, Great Britain itself realizes the gravity of the situation in the far east. It knows that it has to keep the Japanese north of the equator if it is to save in the long run its great empire of the southern hemisphere—Australia and New Zealand.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am 12 years old and have been keeping a scrap book of movie stars for eight years. It's my favorite hobby.

DENNIS MORGAN

I would like to know who played the part of Mabel and who played the part of Rita in "Flight Angels." I would also like it very much if you would put Dennis Morgan's picture in The Sunday Tribune and some information about him. I think he is very handsome and a good actor. Thank you! PATRICIA McCOY.

Editor's note: Aren't scrap books the nicest things! Dorothea Kent played the rôle of Mabel in "Flight Angels," and Margot Stevenson played the part of Rita. Dennis Morgan's real name is Stanley Morner. Born in Prentice, Wis. Married Lillian Vedder and has one son. Career started in Chicago when he worked at the State-Lake theater. You're welcome—and come again.

Dear Miss Tinée: Can you please advise thru your Sunday column what company produced "Little Women" and the cast of same, also "Her First Mate"? "Zwei Menschen" was shown here some time ago. Can you tell me what German company made it? Sincerely, G. E. YOUNG.

Editor's note: Here's the space for your letter, and I'm sure Mr. Ameche will be most grateful for your kind words.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have noticed that Miss Vivien Leigh has not received many contributions in your Voice of the Movie Fan, so I have decided to give her a few. I saw "Gone with the Wind" and thoroly enjoyed it. Miss Leigh certainly deserved the Academy award. If (as I read in a movie magazine) there are only 10 women in Hollywood who deserve to be called actresses, Miss Leigh is one of them. I nominate her as "first lady of the screen." I would also be much obliged if you would print the cast of "Gone with the Wind."

Looking at Hollywood with John Chapman

Cecil B. De Mille, Pappy of Bathtub and Mob Scenes, Goes Rollin' Along

Hollywood.

CECIL B. DE MILLE, the pappy of them all, is a clear-eyed, physically superb gent of 59 who loves his Gloucester schooner, goes serenely along making one movie a year for the usual $1,500,000, and keeps on getting rich.

Hollywood is full of old-timers who are down to playing occasional bits, having sob stories written about them, or who can't get any work. But De Mille, the father of the bathtub and the mob scene, jes' goes rollin' along. He gets a small drawing account of $5,000 a week as against half the profits of his annual picture, and he picks up something on the side on the radio. He owns some pretty good oil properties and a lot of real estate. The Brown Derby is one of his best tenants.

Summertime you'll find De Mille aboard his 106-foot, 20-year-old two-master as many days a week as he can make it. To see him you take the plane to St. Catherine's, Catalina Island, and the Seaward will be anchored just off the hotel. The Seaward is almost always the largest yacht in the harbor, and none of the other boats at anchor can lower its flag until the biggest one does so. Recently a bigger boat than De Mille's put in for a few days, and C. B. was reported to have been a little annoyed because he had to wait for it to lower its ensign.

When I flew over to Catalina and sailed back to San Pedro with C. B. and Mrs. De Mille he had just finished "Northwest Mounted Police" and attended a sneak preview at Long Beach. He was working on next year's job—"Reap the Wild Wind," which is a sea story. Just in case the story doesn't develop satisfactorily, he had two or three others in the back of his mind; one, "Queen of Queens," which is a companion piece for his historic "King of Kings."

De Mille works with plenty of time and plenty of detail. First project is to get a story in shape—in shape right down to the last detail of a shooting script. For this he has his authors along—Alan Le May and Jesse Lasky Jr. They will come aboard the Seaward for days at a time—recently accompanied C. B. as far as Chicago on a trip to Washington. De Mille thinks trains are almost the best places to talk. Once a story is ready, physical details of production begin. A shooting schedule is laid out, actors are approached, the $1,500,000 Paramount allows for each picture is budgeted around in the most effective way. Sometimes a movie is completed $100,000 under the budget, which makes everybody very happy.

"Once," sighs De Mille, "I made a good picture—a very good picture—for $9,000. It was 'The Wild Goose Chase,' and it had Ina Claire and Theodore Roberts. We shot it in seven days. Labor and materials account for most of the difference between then and now."

Twenty-seven years ago De Mille made his and Hollywood's first feature-length picture, "The Squaw Man," for $25,450.24—and if it hadn't been raining on a certain day this story might be carrying a Flagstaff, Ariz., date line. De Mille, a New York theater man; Jesse Lasky, and Samuel Goldfish had started a movie company, had bought the rights to Edwin Milton Royle's drama, and had hired Dustin Farnum, a Broadway star, for the title rôle. (Farnum, like Edgar Selwyn and many others, had insisted on cash instead of stock and therefore missed making millions the easy way.) C. B., Farnum, and company headed for location at Flagstaff. When they got there it was raining, so they stayed on the train as far as Los Angeles, rented half a barn in a countryside called Hollywood, and went to work. "The Squaw Man" earned $255,000, even tho De Mille did have to put his feet in a waste basket to keep them dry when the owner of the barn was washing down the stalls in the half of the place he kept for himself.

De Mille was born in Ashfield, Mass., Aug. 12, 1881. An ancestor, Anthony De Mil, had come from Holland in 1658. Cecil's father, Henry Churchill de Mille—he spelled it with a small "d"—was a playwright and ex-Columbia university English teacher; his mother was an Englishwoman who taught at a Brooklyn academy. Henry de Mille was a writing partner of David Belasco, so Cecil's becoming an actor was the obvious thing, and his mother became a playwrights' agent.

C. B. was a pretty good actor, and he married an actress, Constance Adams, with whom he was touring in an E. H. Sothern company. The De Milles now have four grandchildren, one of whom irked his kindly grandpa just before I boarded the Seaward by dropping some gum on the teakwood deck.

"We'll have to have the whole deck scraped this winter," said the extremely seamanlike producer.

C. B. finally switched from acting to running his mother's play agency, then began writing dramas himself. He turned out "The Stampede," was co-author with his brother William of "The Royal Mounted," and wrote "The Return of Peter Grimm," which Belasco bought, doctored, and produced as his own work.

De Mille's producing career is a good history of the movies. After the start with "The Squaw Man" he experimented with artificial lighting as an aid to sunlight and is one of several, including Erich Pommer, who are variously credited with the development of the movable camera. The stars he developed are a cavalcade of the films—Gloria Swanson, Wallace Reid, Thomas Meighan, Jack Holt, Rod La Rocque, Sessue Hayakawa, Leatrice Joy, Richard Dix, H. B. Warner, Bill Boyd.

He went pocketbook-daffy and paid Geraldine Farrar the unheard-of sum of $20,000 to make three films, which made money. A hand-tinted Farrar number called "Joan the Woman" was Hollywood's first color job.

In the luxurious days after the World war C. B. really started spending. Everything was lavish and gigantic and luxurious and he became the bathtub king. He dared present a religious subject by spending $1,400,000 on "The Ten Commandments," which played for three years in New York alone. Four years later—in 1927—he made "The King of Kings," which is still being shown. (It had 2,000 bookings last year). From "The Squaw Man" to "Northwest Mounted" De Mille has produced 64 pictures.

In De Mille's library hangs one of the most remarkable paintings in Hollywood. About four and a half feet high, it was done some years ago by Power O'Malley, the Irish artist, whose work has been exhibited in Chicago. The painting shows C. B. surrounded by glimpses of his film career. There's Theodore Roberts as Moses; up north are all the dead from "The Road to Yesterday"; below them is a recumbent half-nude Gloria Swanson, as of "Feet of Clay"; next is a parade headed by Geraldine (Joan of Arc) Farrar; a few Russians cluster about Bill Boyd, the Volga boatman; Mary Pickford and Dustin Farnum are pictured, as is H. B. Warner as the King of Kings.

Mrs. De Mille doesn't care for this painting and every once in a while has it sneaked out of the library. C. B. notices it is gone sooner or later and has it put back. At the moment the painting is in the attic, Mr. De Mille.

C. B. ends his broadcasts with "This is Cecil B. De Mille saying good night to you . . . from . . . Holly-woo-o-d." Recently a visiting granddaughter, Cecilia, age 4, was being put to bed; was so tired she wouldn't say her prayers. Everybody worked on her, finally C. B. himself, but it was no soap. So finally grandfather said:

"All right, I'll say them for you. 'Our Father which art in heaven . . .'"

The weary Cecilia interrupted:

"Saying good night to you . . . from . . . Holly-woo-o-d."

On the set the De Mille temper is notable, and ineffective, because everybody knows it's an act. (His father's partner, Belasco, used to smash his watch in fits of anguish, then weep that it was his dear mother's watch, and weren't his stupid actors ashamed of themselves. He never ran out of watches.) During shooting of "Northwest Mounted" he addressed a company of 500 over loud-speakers for five minutes, saying he wanted absolute quiet. A couple of minutes after he'd finished he saw an extra girl whisper to a companion, commanded her to come up to the platform.

"I just spent five expensive minutes telling this company I wanted absolute quiet," he bellowed over the p. a. system. "Now I want you to tell the whole company what you said."

The quivering extra, after more urging, said:

"I said I wonder what time the old baboon is going to let us go to lunch."

The howl that went up told De Mille he wouldn't get any more work done for a while.

"Right now!" he said.

Not the least of the De Mille creations is the Hollywood yesman. It wasn't done on purpose. Back in 1914 he had an assistant prop boy named Cullen B. (Hezi) Tate. One day he ordered Hezi to get six white sheets. Hezi misunderstood, combed Hollywood for six white sheep, and when he delivered them C. B. blew up.

"After this," he ordered, "I want you to listen. If you understand me, say, 'Yes, Mr. De Mille.' But if you don't understand, say so. Understand?"

"Yes, Mr. De Mille," said Hezi, and for many a year he was to repeat those words several times a day. People began kidding him, and thus began the yesman legend.

C. B.'s head secretary, Gladys Rosson, has been with him 24 years. Anne Bauchens, film cutter, 20 years. Ed McNary, sailing master of the Seaward, 21 years (a year before C. B. graduated from a little ship to the schooner). Jeanie MacPherson, writer and researcher, 24 years. His No. 6 secretary is about his youngest employé—three years.

Mr. and Mrs. De Mille have three places—the yacht, a Hollywood home, and a ranch called Paradise which can't be photographed for publicity. The Hollywood home is two houses—the original De Mille house and the one next door, in which Charlie Chaplin and Mildred Harris lived in the early days of their marriage. The Chaplins were noisy, so when they moved out De Mille bought the house to insure quiet. He has office and servants' quarters there now. It is connected to the main house by a glass corridor.

At the ranch C. B. practices tree surgery. Off the yacht he often goes in for walking under water with a diving helmet—has hiked all under the Catalina shore line. At Paramount he has a bungalow with a large staff of secretaries and producers. He has a swimming pool at home but has never been in it. He'd rather swim in the creek at his ranch or off the deck of the Seaward.

HERBERT KAY, shy and slender student at Graeme Stewart High school, Chicago, didn't like music. His family went thru the usual struggle to get him to take his piano lessons. It had been that way for some time, and there was little to indicate that a great pianist was in the making.

Then, with the mercurial ease of youth, young Herbie became suddenly interested in the banjo. It wasn't what his family had planned for him, but a sincere interest in music, whatever the instrument, was not to be tinkered with, so they let him go his way.

College days arrived, and young Kay went to Northwestern. His friendliness and his natural interest in studies made him a marked man during rush days, but he'll tell you that it probably was his musical ability that finally won him a bid from the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He accepted and was launched on a college career that was to turn into his life work. In fact, his fraternity song, "Violets," is now his theme song.

HERE ARE THE WORDS TO "THE BOWERY"

1—O, the night that I struck New York,
I went out for a quiet walk;
Folks who are "onto" the city say,
Better by far that I took Broadway;
But I was out to enjoy the sights,
There was the Bow'ry ablaze with lights;
I had one of the devil's own nights!
I'll never go there any more!

2—I went into an auction store,
I never saw any thieves before;
First he sold me a pair of socks,
Then he said, "How much for the box?"
Some one said "two dollars!" I said three!
He emptied the box and gave it to me.
"I sold you the box, not the socks," said he.
I'll never go there any more!

CHORUS—The Bow'ry, the Bow'ry! They say such things and they do strange things
On the Bow'ry, the Bow'ry! I'll never go there any more.

The fraternity wanted a band for its prom one year, and induced Herbie to organize one. It proved such a good band that it found plenty of work on the campus from then on. When he completed his course at Northwestern, Herbie went into a brokerage office, but before long was persuaded by the members of the old college orchestra to take a flyer at professional music. Their debut was at Chicago's Trianon ballroom, where many a band has been introduced to the nation, and it was gratifyingly successful. From the ballroom Kay's band went to the downtown Blackhawk restaurant, another spot famous as a band maker. Since those early days the Herbie Kay itinerary has read like a preferred list of the country's hotels and ballrooms.

With all his own personal fame, Herbie today is perhaps more frequently mentioned as the man who discovered and married Dorothy Lamour. The marriage didn't last, but Dorothy went on to a successful career in the movies and on the air. Herbie's career since then, too, has been O Kay.

Canals—An Early Public Works Flop

By WILLIAM SHINNICK

ABOUT a hundred years ago a traveler could get into a canal boat in Philadelphia and without leaving the craft voyage right over the top of the Alleghenies into Pittsburgh.

If that didn't satisfy his yearning for inland waterway travel at three miles an hour he could drift down to Cincinnati, enter another system of muddy ditches, and meander on them for hundreds of miles thru the sylvan reaches of Ohio and Indiana.

Nearly all the canals were built with state funds. With the exception of the Erie, connecting the Great Lakes and the Hudson river, they were financial flops. Taken together they formed America's first big-scale public works program—a little New Deal tryout so costly that the public appetite for state-financed improvements didn't return for decades.

More than $214,000,000 was expended in the canal-cutting splurge, and most of the diggings had been abandoned by 1850. Several states were forced to the verge of bankruptcy by their expenditures. Some didn't pay off their canal bonds until after the Civil war; others avoided with difficulty the temptation to repudiate obligations for money borrowed to sink in shallow trenches.

Even in colonial days there was agitation for canal building. Benjamin Franklin wrote in 1770 that "rivers are ungovernable, canals quiet and always manageable," and recommended an artificial waterway to join the Susquehanna and the Schuylkill. George Washington was fascinated by the possibility of quiet water transportation from the Potomac to the Ohio. Elkanah Watson, a friend and adviser of both patriots, was one of the early boosters for the Erie canal.

It was characteristic of nearly all the great revolutionary leaders that they schemed constantly to find better means of transportation to the interior. Highways were so bad and road making so little of a science then that it was natural for them to turn to waterways as a solution.

Virginia made a real start on a canal program in 1785 when a ditch seven miles long, from Richmond to Westham, was built. It passed around the falls of the James river. Before 1802 several small canals were constructed in Massachusetts, Virginia, and South Carolina.

In 1791 Watson persuaded the New York legislature to take a preliminary step toward the Erie project, and was made a member of the commission to survey a practicable route. The matter lagged, however, until 1817, when digging was started. The whole canal was ready for use in 1825; in that year a flotilla from the Great Lakes reached New York harbor and was greeted with wild acclaim.

The Erie followed one of the best natural trade routes in the world. It directed the traffic of the whole interior (as it then was) into one line. With its help Boston and Philadelphia were distanced and New York became the leading city of the continent.

It had cost nearly $13,000,000, a vast sum in those days, but it was worth it. Almost from the start it paid all operating expenses and interest on its obligations. By 1838 it had paid off three and a half millions of principal.

People everywhere talked of its success and gave wrong reasons for it. There was a general failure to recognize the special advantages of the route—the fine natural waterways and heavy traffic at each end. The notion grew that any village could become a metropolis if it had its canal.

Pennsylvania became furiously busy. To connect Philadelphia with Pittsburgh, 320 air line miles away, it was necessary to cross an elevation of 2,300 feet. Obviously the canal builder, unaided, couldn't do this. An imaginary story of a traveler of the 1830s will explain how the difficulties were overcome.

"We left Philadelphia," we let him relate, "on horse-drawn railroad cars. They are like the familiar stagecoach except that they have flanged wheels that run on iron-topped wooden rails. Two miles out we came to an acclivity. The brigade (train) of cars went up this on an inclined plane 2,185 feet long and rising 187 feet. A stationary engine at the top of the hill dragged us up by a steel hawser nine inches in circumference.

"Again the horses were attached to the cars and we bowled merrily on to Columbia. Everything was favorable and we reached that point, eighty-one miles from Philadelphia, in about nine hours. We got at once on a packet boat which moved slowly over the central Pennsylvania canal to Hollidaysburg, 172 miles from Columbia. This canal is forty feet wide and four feet deep and has 108 locks.

"Hollidaysburg is 910 feet above sea level. To get to Johnstown, thirty-six miles away, one must top a ridge which towers 1,399 feet above the Hollidaysburg level. It is astonishing what man can do! Our boat was lifted onto a special railroad car and the horses set off with it.

"It is difficult to imagine anything more startling than what happened in the next ten miles. Five times we came to inclined planes. At each the horses were unyoked. Cables were attached to the cars, the stationary engines were put to work, and we ascended. The top of the fifth plane was the summit. We had risen almost 1,400 feet in ten miles.

"Beyond were five more inclined planes, down which we coasted to reach Johnstown. That city is 1,172 feet below the top of the ridge. Here our boat went again into a canal which dropped us, thru sixty-six locks in 104 miles, down to Pittsburgh. We had made the whole journey of 393 to 394 miles in less than six days."

The horse-drawn land transportation was used from the completion of the canal in 1832 until some time in 1834, when steam locomotives were substituted. They cut the time to a little more than four days.

Pennsylvania by 1840 had built and was operating 608 miles of canals and 119 miles of railroads. The investment in waterways exceeded $26,000,000.

When the railroads eventually made the Pennsylvania canals of negligible value the state's financial headache developed. All the revenues were pledged to pay interest. Deficits had to be made up. Securities issued to get construction funds fell to a low level—and still the state was building more waterways.

By 1856 the situation was unbearable. For both canals and railroads the state had paid $41,000,000. It got rid of the burden by selling all its improvements. Some of the rail properties had value and $11,000,000 was realized. Net loss in capital investment, $30,000,000.

The people of the Keystone state were so disgusted with their early New Deal venture that they passed a constitutional amendment that forbade their legislature to put Pennsylvania at any time more than $750,000 in debt.

Only two states west of the mountains, Ohio and Indiana, entered seriously on programs of canal building.

Ohio started its two principal arteries in 1825. One was to connect Cleveland with Portsmouth on the Ohio, the other to link Cincinnati and Toledo. The work was launched with great ceremony. Governor Clinton of New York aided Governor Morrow of Ohio in turning the first spadefuls of earth.

Immediately thousands of pick and shovel men took over. Their wages, by present-day standards, were small. They received subsistence. In addition each man got 30 cents and a jiggerful (vague term) of whisky a day. But they worked with a will, and the first unit of the Ohio system, from Akron to Cleveland, was ready in 1827. A boat navigated it on July 4.

Speed kept up. The entire Cincinnati-Toledo canal was in use in 1829 and the Cleveland-Portsmouth in 1833. Eventually Ohio had 1,000 miles of state-owned canals, which had cost $16,000,000 instead of the originally estimated $6,600,000.

Indiana was attacked by the canal-building itch a few years later than Ohio. Some of her brasher citizens had begun whooping it up for public works when the state revenues were only $40,000 a year. Nothing serious was attempted, however, until after a Wabash-Erie canal was demanded in 1828.

Indiana wanted to build her canal northeast from Lafayette to her own state line, then have Ohio connect it up with her western canal. For a long time Ohio demurred. Then the promise to help was made and Indiana in 1832 started digging at Fort Wayne.

Her work was slower. It was not until 1843 that the junction of the two canal systems was made and it was possible to journey from Lake Erie to the Wabash by canal. But packet lines were in operation on regular, or nearly regular, schedules in 1844 and continued to do a large business until 1854. Figures showed that passengers boarding and leaving the boats in four towns—Lafayette, Covington, Logansport, and Fort Wayne—traveled 1,294,701 canal miles in 1849 alone.

Those who wrote about their travels on the midwestern canals were unhappy. They all seemed to have a leaning toward dyspepsia. From their accounts it was impossible to avoid insomnia on board the canallers.

One of the acid critics was an Englishman, J. Richard Beste. He and his family journeyed over the Indiana and Ohio systems in their good days; then he went back to London and with true British enterprise published a book about his miseries.

Since the packet was pulled on thru the night, passengers had to try to sleep. At nightfall the steward fixed things for them. He "hung some shelves on the wall" and put mattresses and sheets on them. Beste tried to sleep the first night out, but discovered a conspiracy of heat and mosquitoes and took his sleeplessness with resignation and indignation.

His daughter Lucy described the tortures in the ladies' cabin.

"The berths were in tiers three rows high," she related. "I was put in the top one. I lay awake, but still, a long time. At last I heard every one turning and sighing with the heat, so I gave way to my own feelings and did so, too. But the shelves on which we lay were so short that I found my pillow constantly slipping below my head; and if I put it lower down my feet hung out at the other end; so that, altho I was not very tall, I was obliged to curl myself up and be quite still while the mosquitoes devoured and the heat melted me."

Still there were some compensations. Even the mosquito-plagued Miss Beste admitted it:

"We passed thru scores and scores of miles of woodland that had never heard the ax; passed thousands of acres where trees were rotting in the steaming pools collected about them. I never saw more magnificent timber than shaded the valleys. Great sticks of black oak shot up straight from the bottoms without a knot or branch until their heads spread out some scores of feet above like the tufted summits of the Italian pine. At times partial clearings or little prairies offered vistas in the land beyond, and still the same noble timber everywhere arose."

Nearly all the canals were dead or moribund before the Civil war. The states began to suffer much earlier. Indiana had expended $7,725,000 on 453 miles of canals. By 1839 she was unable to pay on her obligations of ten millions and defaulted on the interest—there was never enough money to run the canals.

With their abandonment the state was left without a single tangible asset to represent the ten million.

Ohio's thousand miles of artificial waterways went the same way; they ceased to be of any economic benefit. She, too, had to take a dose of bitter financial medicine. It was found necessary to levy a tax of 75 cents on each $100 of property just to make good on the towering canal debts.

Much more could be told of the canals of a hundred years ago. Virginia and Maryland nearly went broke trying to realize Washington's dream of a Potomac-Ohio waterway; they built a long stretch of it. Illinois and Michigan were saved from similar experiences largely because the railroad arrived before they could get going on comparably huge canal projects.

One simple set of figures tells a lot of the story. State debts rose between 1830 and 1842 from $13,000,000 to $207,000,000. And in those days even $13,000,000 was looked on as real money.

Why Great Salt Lake Shrinks

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

GREAT SALT LAKE, Utah's vast inland sea, is shrinking at an amazing rate and there is every prospect that it will reach a new historical low about Nov. 1. Only unusually heavy late summer and autumn rains can prevent this body of water, one of the world's largest salt lakes, from breaking its known record for low water level, set Nov. 15, 1935.

The "fried egg" pattern of salt crust left by the evaporating waters of Great Salt lake. This picture was taken at an elevation of 14,000 feet. (Acme photo.)

Despite this apparently alarming situation, however, Great Salt lake will not dry up completely, at least not within any length of time as the world has measured time in history.

This assurance that its waters will not entirely evaporate for a long, long time to come is given by Prof. Thomas C. Adams of the department of civil engineering of the University of Utah, outstanding authority on the subject of Great Salt lake. Professor Adams sees the possibility of the vast lake vanishing some time in the far future, geologically speaking, but he also sees the possibility of it again becoming as large as it was 30,000 years ago, when its waters covered almost as great an area as those of the present-day Lake Michigan. What the future of Great Salt lake will be—still geologically speaking—depends largely upon what happens to the climate of Utah.

Fresh water lakes may become salt water lakes and salt water lakes may become fresh water lakes as a result of changes of climate, and these same changes may enlarge or reduce the areas of the lakes and make them deeper or shallower. If aridity increases so that evaporation from a fresh lake exceeds the intake (precipitation and inflow) the lake may become salt. If evaporation from a salt lake becomes less than the intake of fresh water the lake will be freshened and under favorable conditions may become altogether fresh. Great Salt lake and the earlier lake that was located in the same region furnish the best known illustration of these changes. Their geological history is somewhat as follows, according to the late Prof. Rollin D. Salisbury of the geology department of the University of Chicago:

The first lake in this basin seems to have been fresh. Later the climate of what is now Utah appears to have become more arid, so that evaporation from the lake exceeded the intake of fresh water, and the level of the lake was lowered. As the water evaporated the mineral matter in solution was left behind. Salt was one of these substances, and as more and more water evaporated the salinity of that which remained increased and the lake became salt.

Another change of climate, this time in the direction of greater humidity, ensued. The fresh water intake exceeded evaporation, and the lake's saltiness was diminished by dilution. At the same time the level of the lake rose until it spilled out thru Red Rock pass, in what is now Idaho, thence thru the Portneuf, Snake, and Columbia rivers to the Pacific ocean. The continued inflow and the continued outflow of the diluted salt water resulted in the progressive freshening of the lake and finally it became a fresh water lake. At its greatest extent this vast lake covered about 19,000 square miles, or approximately ten times the area of the present Great Salt lake. It was about 345 miles long and 145 miles wide, and its surface was roughly 1,000 feet higher than that of the present lake.

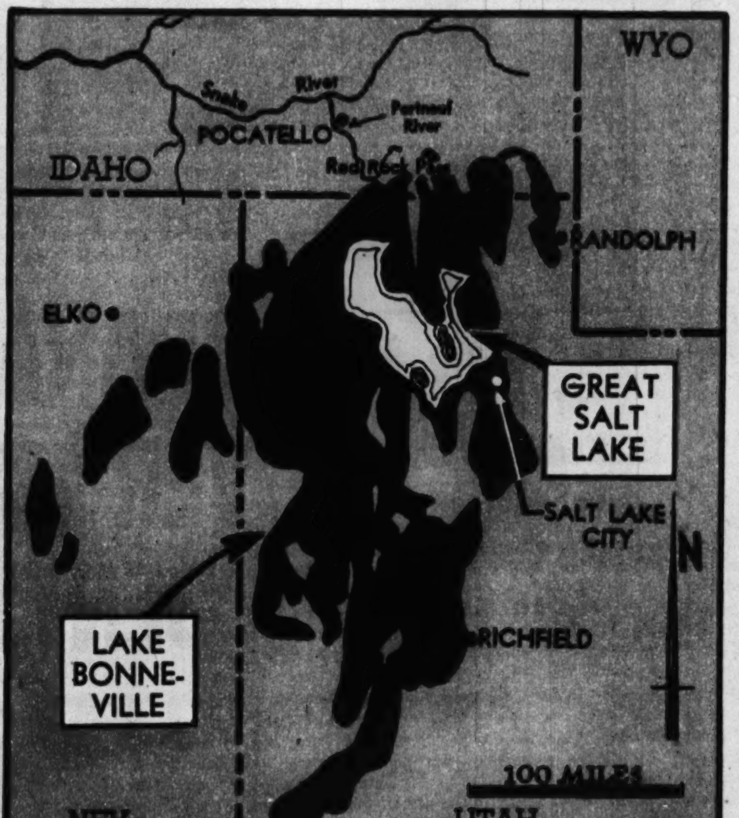
As this great body of water sprawled over a region embracing parts of the present-day states of Utah, Idaho, and Nevada, there came another gradual change of climate, this time in the direction of aridity. The lake's surface sank below its outlet, and after this happened the waters gradually became saline. Evaporation continuing in excess of intake, the big lake in time was reduced to the relatively small Great Salt lake, with an average area of about 2,000 square miles and an average depth of about 15 feet.

The waters of Great Salt lake today are saturated with salt, and much salt has been deposited on its shores and floor. The saline content is made up largely of common salt (sodium chloride), but other substances also are present, including Glauber's salt, epsom salt (magnesium sulphate), gypsum, calcium chloride, magnesium chloride, potassium chloride, potassium sulphate, boric acid, phosphoric acid, lithia, bromine, iron oxide, alumina, and silica. The lowest recorded salinity of the lake was 13.42 per cent and the highest 22.28 per cent, the average being about 20 per cent. Because of the extreme density of the water bathers cannot sink in it, and because of its salinity no fresh water life, such as fish, can exist in it. There are, however, a few forms of life in the salty waters of the lake, including a brine shrimp which is about a third of an inch in length. At the mouths of some of the fresh water streams that empty into the lake are found fish, but these do not venture into the lake proper.

Altho Great Salt lake often is spoken of as the largest of inland salt lakes, it is by no means as large as Lake Aral in western Asia, nor is it comparable in size with the Caspian sea, which appropriately might be called a lake because of its inland location. On the other hand, Great Salt lake is more than five times as large as the Dead sea, the celebrated inland salt lake of Palestine. As compared with Great Salt lake's average salinity of 20 per cent, the Dead sea possesses an average of from 23 to 25 per cent, the Caspian sea an average of about 12 per cent, and Lake Aral an average of about 10 per cent.



Map showing locations and comparative sizes of Great Salt lake and prehistoric Lake Bonneville.

Altho Spanish missionaries long before had heard of Great Salt lake thru stories told to them by the Indians, it is not until 1824 that a white man is believed to have looked upon the lake. This man was Etienne Provost, leader of a trapping expedition. The next year James Bridger, a famous scout and trailmaker, camped on its shores. In 1843 John Charles Frémont, celebrated American explorer and soldier, visited the lake, and wrote in glowing terms of it. In that day Great Salt lake was considerably larger than it is now. The vanguard of the Mormons did not reach Utah and the neighborhood of the lake until the summer of 1847. Capt. Howard Stansbury, an American army engineer, in 1850 surveyed the shores of the lake, which then was at a low water stage, altho not so low as the present stage. In 1891 Grove Karl Gilbert, a famous geologist, discovered that the lake in the dim past once had covered about 19,000 square miles of area, made by the inflow of icy waters from the glaciers near by. To this prehistoric lake Gilbert gave the name of Lake Bonneville, in honor of Capt. Benjamin L. E. Bonneville, an early explorer.

In discussing the subject of Great Salt lake Professor Adams writes: "It reached the lowest point in history on Nov. 15, 1935, when its level stood at 6.82. Since then it has been somewhat higher. During the spring of this year and the preceding winter precipitation was again very low, and there is at present every reason to believe that Great Salt lake will, about Nov. 1 of the present year, again reach a new historical low, which will probably be some two to three tenths of a foot lower than the low of 1935. This can only be offset by unusually heavy late summer and fall rains.

"Great Salt lake will not dry up. It receives the bulk of its waters from direct rainfall and from the flood flows of rivers and streams which cannot economically be put to use and kept from entering the lake. The small part of the inflow which has been reaching it during the last 40 years, and which can in the future be diverted for irrigation or other use and will therefore not reach the lake, will be replaced in part by some water which is brought from other drainage basins thru mountain tunnels to the basin of the Great Salt lake for irrigation and city use. A part of the water brought into the lake basin will be wasted in various ways and find its way into Great Salt lake.

"The present low level of Great Salt lake is caused by exceptionally low rainfall and snowfall occurring from 1924 to the present. But before rainfall and stream flow get so low as to cause Great Salt lake to dry up, the entire surrounding country, depending as it does upon streams for irrigation, city supply, and power use, would suffer a great drouth; much greater and more damaging than the drouth period since 1934. Very likely before Great Salt lake would dry up most of the people of the surrounding region would be forced to abandon their farms and towns and move to other localities. Both are very unlikely within this century or the next, for rainfall, tho it may have its ups and downs from year to year, is steady over many years. We can expect the lake to return to normal before very long.

"The foregoing statements refer to the prospect for reasonable historic time, as is apparent.

"When we come to consider geological time, extending over several thousand or more years, we know very substantial changes in climate do occur; one large enough, perhaps, to cause Great Salt lake to dry up. It is well known that from 25,000 to 100,000 years ago Great Salt lake was a much larger fresh water lake (Lake Bonneville); many times deeper and larger. There is a difference of opinion among scientists as to whether Lake Bonneville dried up before the present Great Salt lake took its place. There is no clear evidence. Also there is no present sure way of predicting what the long-period climatic change may be. We do not know in 50,000 years if the basin of Great Salt lake will be dry or whether Lake Bonneville will be restored. It would not require a very large increase in precipitation in the basin of Great Salt lake to cause it to rise many feet.

"If the basin of Great Salt lake had the climate of Chicago, Lake Bonneville would be restored and Salt Lake City would be submerged in several hundred feet of water."

Mostly About Dogs

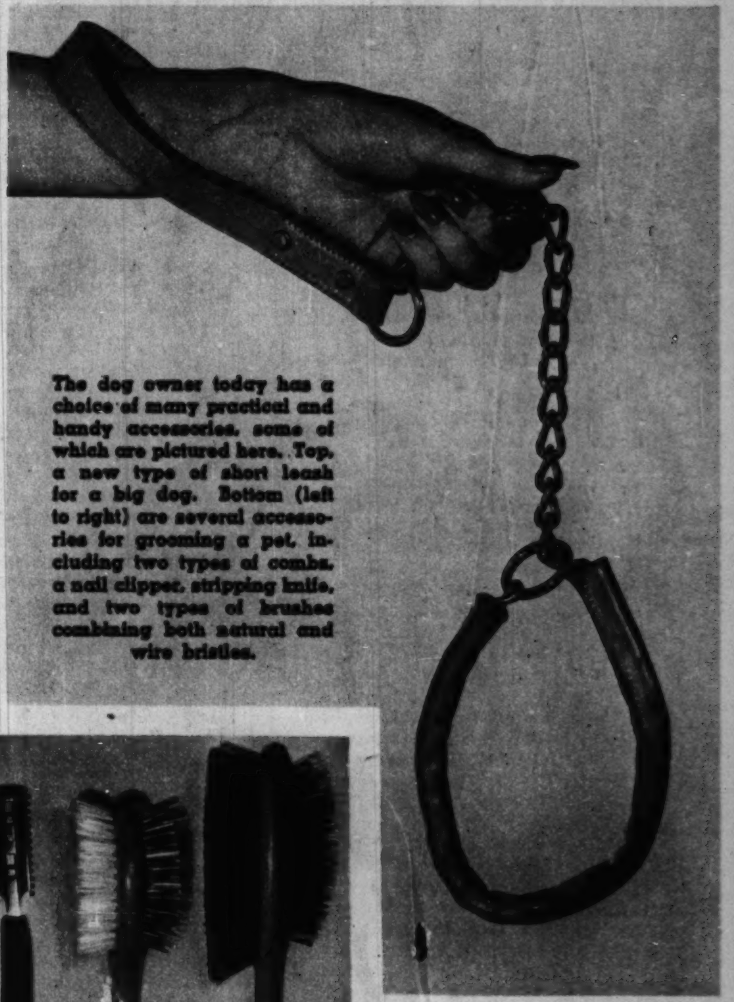
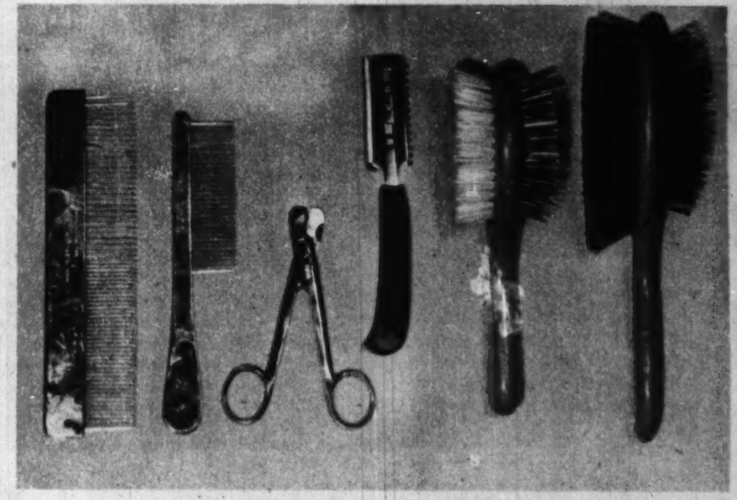
Accessories for Care of Dog

THE dog owner who makes a serious effort to give his pet the care and attention it needs thruout the year eventually assembles a number of accessories which help to keep the animal healthy and also make him look well.



The dog owner today has a choice of many practical and handy accessories, some of which are pictured here. Top, a new type of short leash for a big dog. Bottom (left to right) are several accessories for grooming a pet, including two types of combs, a nail clipper, stripping knife, and two types of brushes combining both natural and wire bristles.



A short chain leash like this enables an owner to keep a big dog close when it's walking in city traffic. (Tribune photos.)

We were checking over the "handy kit" which we have for our dogs a few days ago and were surprised to find how many items there were in it. The list included two types of combs, one wire brush, one brush with stiff bristles, a stripping knife, nail file, a cleaning and deodorant powder, flea powder, two kinds of liquid deodorants and flea and tick killers, several leashes and collars, several kinds of shampoos and soaps, one pair of small scissors, antifly dopes for the dogs' ears, and several other miscellaneous items which at some time or another are needed in the care of our dogs. And we need all of these useful items.

Grooming is necessary the year around, especially for breeds such as the wire-haired terrier, Scotty, cocker, collie, chow, and others with similar coats, so proper selection of combs and brushes is most important to the owner and his pet. If we use a rather fine-toothed comb on a dog with a thick, dense coat it's nothing less than torture for the animal. Moreover, steady use of this comb will ruin the dog's coat, to say nothing of his disposition. The same warning applies to a comb for breeds which have heavy furnishings. For example, if an owner attempts to comb out the whiskers of a Scotty, wire-haired terrier, Sealyham, or other breed with a fine-toothed comb the poor animal has anything but a happy time, and after a couple of treatments with such a comb these bewhiskered breeds will be shy on whiskers.

The popular cocker and springer spaniels are other breeds which shouldn't be groomed with just any type of comb. We have spent many an hour combing and brushing springer spaniels (especially during the hunting seasons), so we have some idea of what a task it is to run too fine a comb, thru the matted hair on a springer's ears or untangle the small burrs and sticktights in the coat of these hunting spaniels. If the owner doesn't use for this work a rather coarse metal comb, with teeth set rather far apart, the springer is going to suffer much discomfort, lose too much hair, and be shy of such rough grooming all his life. Professional handlers, breeders, and shops which handle dog accessories are in a position to advise the amateur owner about the kind of comb and brush needed for a particular breed.

It's also important to get the right kind of a brush for a certain breed of dog. There is no need for a heavy, stiff brush if you want to groom a Boston terrier. On the other hand, you can't get down to the skin of a long-coated dog and really clean and stimulate both its skin and coat unless you use a brush that really digs in. Then, too, different coats call for different lengths of bristles.

Chinaman's Chance, owned by Mrs. Viola DeVoy, recently was judged the best chow in a midwestern dog show.

Most dogs enjoy a brushing and combing—if the owner isn't too rough. Altho correct use of these common accessories appears to be simple, it's surprising how few owners really groom their pets properly. Lack of thoroness is the most common fault with the owner's work. For example, in cocker spaniels correct grooming means getting behind the ears of the dog with the comb and brush to prevent those lumps of matted hair. It takes time to prevent them and (after they have formed) plenty of work and patience to get rid of them without hurting the animal.

Altho combing and brushing rank as number one obligations of the owner who wants his pet to look well, attention to the animal's nails also is important. House pets commonly develop nails that are much too long, so it is necessary to take them down. Small nail clippers may be obtained for this purpose. After the nails are clipped it's a good idea to finish the job with a small file. File downward. If an owner wants a few tips on how to take down a dog's nails we advise a visit to a professional handler or a veterinarian to see how the job is done. Your dog may not like this attention to his nails the first time the job is done, but if patience and gentle handling are used he'll soon overcome this dislike. The same is true when a dog owner learns to use a stripping knife on a wire-haired terrier, Scotty, Irish terrier, Kerry blue, or other breed. Patience, pactice, and gentle handling are important. But even more so are the lessons on handling a stripping knife that the novice owner should get from a professional handler.

Know Your Camera

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.
(Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine.)

Printing on Different Mediums

This mural view of Tribune Tower in the observation car of the Twentieth Century Limited is printed on sensitized burlap, proving that there are real decorative uses for pictures printed on surfaces other than paper.

YOU NEED not go on forever printing your photographs on sensitized paper. You can make your pictures appear on practically any surface, whether it be wood, glass, leather, cloth, or porcelain.

Few amateurs are aware of the interesting possibilities such unorthodox printing methods offer. Yet many have had the desire to decorate some piece of furniture or a personalized souvenir with one of their favorite pictures. Instead of preparing a print on paper and then mounting the paper on whatever object is to be decorated, it is entirely possible to print the picture directly on the surface of the object you want to decorate.

Naturally you will have to forego the convenience of buying your printing material ready made. No photographic store on earth could be expected to carry a stock of photographically sensitized leather, cloth, wood, and other materials. And even if such basic materials should be available, they would not solve the problem of the amateur who wants to print a picture on some object he already owns.

The solution of the problem is for you to sensitize the materials on which you want to print. Doing this is a lot simpler than most amateurs believe. Basically all you need do is to apply a sensitizing solution to the surface of your choice and then print on that surface instead of printing on paper.

If you like to do the whole job unaided you can compound your own sensitizing solutions from fairly common photographic chemicals. You will find instructions on doing this scattered thru the photographic literature. But if you want to simplify matters you can purchase in your camera store a ready-made sensitizing solution which can be applied to almost any surface.

After you have either compounded or purchased the sensitizer, this is how you go about printing: In a darkened room you apply the sensitizer with cotton or with a brush over the surface on which your picture is to appear. Spread it evenly and then let it dry in the dark. As soon as the surface is dry the picture should be printed on it and fixed. Sensitizers of the type you must use are not very stable and it is best to finish the entire printing operation within a short time.

The printing is done by the contact method. The negative and the surface on which you print must be in actual contact; otherwise your picture will be blurred. It is simplest to print on a flat surface, and in the case of flexible materials like cloth or leather you can use an ordinary printing frame. If the printing surface is curved you must devise some method of bending your negative and keeping it in contact with the surface. One of the simplest methods is to use adhesive tape.

After the negative is in position you expose it to sunlight or to strong artificial light. It is impossible to say how long this exposure should be. You can find out by printing first on sensitized test strips. As the sensitizing solutions used are of the "printing out" type, the image appears on the surface in the course of the printing. Therefore it is possible to lift up the negative carefully and to inspect the results during printing. But if you do this there is always a danger of moving the negative out of register with the print and completely spoiling the picture. It's safest to use the test strip method. After the print appears in the desired strength it must be fixed to make it permanent.

As prints of this kind are made by contact, the size of your picture is limited by the size of your negative. If your camera makes small negatives and you want large prints, you must prepare an enlarged negative (which is simple enough to make) and use the large negative for contact printing.

Pictures printed on some of these unusual surfaces often last longer than pictures on paper. For instance, a print on silk or cloth can be laundered and ironed repeatedly without being harmed. In the case of porcelain you can print the picture and then protect it either with a coat of lacquer or by having it baked into the surface. Pictures on wood or leather can also be protected with lacquer but will last indefinitely even without such protection.

A snapshot made with an amateur camera was the original from which this picture of a horse was printed on the plate. After printing a glazed finish was baked on the plate so that it could be used and washed any number of times without harming the picture.

Printing photographs on mugs is more difficult than printing on a flat surface. The negative must be bent to be in contact with the curved printing surface.

NEW EQUIPMENT

For names of manufacturers who produce these items send stamped, self-addressed envelope to "Know Your Camera," Equipment Review Department, care Graphic Section, The Chicago Tribune. Be sure to mention serial number of item.

129 You need not mount your prints at all in the latest photo album. The pages consist of transparent pockets into which you can slip two pictures back to back. The prints are protected and can be easily replaced by others.

130 The latest exposure calculator is a combination of a filter viewer and meter. You look at the subject thru the viewer, which can be rotated until you see the desired effect. You take a reading and compute the exposure from tables attached to the meter.

131 The new midget size flash bulbs have created new accessories. Among these are pocket flash guns, consisting of pen light battery cases and small parabolic reflectors with bulb ejectors. Prices range from $1 to $1.50.

132 A new reflex camera with coupled twin lenses for focusing is announced. It takes pictures 2¼x2¼ and has an f:3.5 taking lens and an f:3.2 finder lens. Shutter speeds range from 1/10 to 1/200 sec. The camera, selling for $42.50, closely resembles in appearance some of the more expensive imported reflex cameras.

CAREER GIRL

FLORENCE SMITH

FLORENCE SMITH'S ambition to be a sculptress was curiously sidetracked but not completely frustrated. As advertising manager of a large corset manufacturer she has been an influence in sculpturing the feminine silhouette for the last ten years. She was born in Denver, Colo., and reared in Covington, Ky., where she was society editor of a local paper. She stepped from advertising writing for department stores into her present position, in which she writes copy, supervises art work, and plans the campaigns and promotions. In her apartment on the near north side she is only casually domestic, but occasionally turns out an Indian curry that is distinctly superior. She has dimples, hazel eyes, and soft brown hair which she arranges in piquant fashion. Green is her favorite color; people are her greatest interest outside her work. Her Christmas present to herself last year was an extravagant phonograph, and her spare funds go into her collection of records, which include the classics, rhumbas, and Cole Porter songs.

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Persons learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the sixty-seventh of the series.

ROBERT CHARLES WINTHROP, famous American orator and political leader, was born in Boston, Mass., May 12, 1809. After having been graduated from Harvard he studied law with Daniel Webster and was admitted to the bar of Massachusetts in 1831. From 1840 to 1850 he was a member of the national house of representatives, except for a brief intermission in 1842, and from 1847 to 1849 he was speaker of the house. In July, 1850, he was appointed to the seat in the senate left vacant by the death of Webster. Winthrop died in Boston, Nov. 16, 1894. Among his notable speeches was the one he delivered in the house of representatives on July 10, 1850, on the announcement of the death of President Zachary Taylor. An excerpt from this address follows:

"The event which has just been officially announced has come upon us so suddenly—has so overwhelmed us with mingled emotions of surprise and sadness—that all ordinary forms of expression seem to lose their significance and one would fain bow his head to the blow in silence until its first shock has in some degree passed away.

"Certainly, sir, no one can fail to realize that a most momentous and mysterious Providence has been manifested in our midst. At a moment when more than almost ever before in our history the destinies of our country seemed to all human sight to be inseparably associated with the character and conduct of its chief executive magistrate, that magistrate has been summoned from his post by the only messenger whose mandates he might not have defied, and has been withdrawn forever from the sphere of human existence.

R. C. Winthrop

"There are those of us, I need not say, sir, who had looked to him with affection and reverence as our chosen leader and guide in the difficulties and perplexities by which we are surrounded. There are those of us who had relied confidently on him as upon no other man to uphold the constitution and maintain the union of the country in that future upon which 'shadows, clouds, and darkness' may well be said to rest. And as we now behold him borne away by the hand of God from our sight in the very hour of peril we can hardly repress the exclamation, which was applied to the departing prophet of old: 'My father, my father! The chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof.'

"Let me not even seem to imply, however, that the death of General Taylor is anything less than a national loss. There may be, and we know there is, in this event a privileged and preëminent grief for his immediate family and relatives, to whom we can only offer the assurance of our heartfelt sympathy. There is, too, a peculiar sorrow for his political friends and supporters, which we would not affect to conceal. But the whole people of the United States will feel and will bear witness when they receive these melancholy tidings that they have all been called to sustain a most afflicting national bereavement.

"I hazard nothing, sir, in saying that the roll of our chief magistrates since 1789, illustrious as it is, presents the name of no man who has enjoyed a higher reputation with his contemporaries, or will enjoy a higher reputation with posterity, than Zachary Taylor, for some of the best and noblest qualities which adorn our nature."

No more dignified expression of honest grief could have been made by an orator than this simple tribute of Robert Charles Winthrop to the deceased President Taylor. The foregoing lines are those of a speaker who knew how to be effective in a plain way. Winthrop, when the occasion demanded, could rise to lofty heights of eloquence, but on this occasion he tempered his words to the solemnity of the subject. It would not have been justifiable, he felt, to play upon emotions already taut.

It's Right Up Your Alley!

1 The stance: Weight is distributed on both feet, body "tall."

2 In first step on right foot, ball is pushed forward, exercising shoulder and arm muscles.

3 Arm and shoulder muscles are stretched vigorously as ball is lowered, chest and back muscles gently.

4 Think the perfect delivery of a bowling ball won't sculpture the figure? You'd be wrong. That arm spread, body twist, and footwork will do wonders for muscle structure. (Tribune Studio photos.)

Bowling Is Fun, and It's Also Grand Exercise

By ELEANOR NANGLE

FIVE MILLION women can't be wrong! And that's the figure on the number of women in this country who have decided that bowling is one of the most efficient, most enjoyable routes to health, beauty, and relaxation.

It's astonishing and impressive, this feminine indorsement of bowling, and it's no passing fad. The sport wins new disciples every day and holds its old enthusiasts for the simple, sound reason that it has something. Something good for the intelligent women who realize the value of keeping their muscles toned, their silhouettes trim, and their vitality supply above par.

Bowling stretches and relaxes all the muscles rhythmically. Inevitably, if you do it regularly, it normalizes the unbalanced figure and stores up general health benefits. Beside that, it's fun. What's more, it's becoming fashionable. Any mossy notions you might have had that a bowling alley was a smoke-filled stronghold of the stronger sex will be erased by some visits to the beautiful alleys we have nowadays, where you'll see attractive girls and women bowling skilfully.

Coördination is the secret of bowling success, of course. And the development of perfect coördination brings with it the correction of posture and figure flaws. The stance in bowling is important. It must be the correct, healthful one, with weight distributed evenly and ribs lifted. From that point on there is even, balanced play of every muscle in the delivery of the ball.

5 Bowling is a stimulating cocktail for the sedentary woman who wants to improve her health and grace, and even her wits!

Please everybody by serving hot and cold tea for Sunday night supper.

By MARY MEADE

WITH TEA, as with pease porridge, some like it hot and some like it cold. It's easy to please everybody at Sunday night supper, for iced tea and hot tea are easily made. Make a pot of double-strength tea to be poured over ice cubes for the iced tea folks, and make tea in the usual way for those who like tea to "warm their innards."

A two-spout teapot like the one in the picture may be used for both hot and cold tea. It contains two compartments, one for tea, the other for hot water. If you make your tea quite strong it may be poured over ice cubes or diluted with hot water, as you prefer.

A chilled fresh fruit salad with cottage cheese dressing is favorite food to accompany either hot or cold tea for luncheon or supper. Use whatever combination of fresh fruits you like—they'll be delicious with this dressing.

HY SCORE
AT THE NATION'S CAPITOL, A GROUP OF MEN CONFER IN THE INNER SANCTUM OF THE SECRET SERVICE—
THEY CABLE INSTRUCTIONS ACROSS THE SEAS TO A FIELD OFFICER IN ARABIA WHO DE-CODES THE MESSAGE
HE THEN PROCEEDS TO A HOSPITAL WHERE HE INQUIRES ABOUT THE HEALTH OF MR. HENRY SCORE. "HE'S COMING AROUND AS WELL AS CAN BE EXPECTED," SAYS THE DOCTOR. "HE HAD SEVERAL MEAN BULLET WOUNDS TO CONTEND WITH."
NEXT, THE GOVERNMENT MAN GOES UP TO THE ROOF GARDEN WHERE HY IS ABSORBING THE MID-DAY SUNSHINE. BUNNY IS HIS COMPANION— THE USUAL GENERALITIES OF CONVERSATION ARE EXCHANGED....
-AS THEY PONDER OVER MAPS, THEY MENTION THE NAMES OF AGENTS HENRY "HY" SCORE AND BUNNY WATERS
"TO GET TO THE POINT, HEADQUARTERS IS INTERESTED IN A CERTAIN SOURCE OF OPIUM TRAFFIC. ALL WE KNOW—AND THIS IS YOUR ONLY LEAD—IS THAT A SHIP IS INVOLVED—THE S-S 'ZANABAR'"
"'ZANABAR', EH? THAT'S A FREIGHTER. IT'S CARGO IS USUALLY COFFEE AND RICE"
"RIGHT," CAME THE RETORT, "BUT INCIDENTALLY, ITS PORTS OF CALL INCLUDE INDIA AND CHINA—TWO OPIUM PRODUCING COUNTRIES."
"THE 'ZANABAR' IS DUE TO DOCK IN ARABIA IN TWO DAYS, BUT SINCE YOU ARE STILL CONVALESCING, I SUGGEST THAT YOU WAIT FOR ITS RETURN TRIP"
"WAIT NOTHING! I'M ALL RIGHT—JUST A LITTLE WEAK—THERE'S JUST ENOUGH TIME TO REACH THE COAST— BUNNY, THIS IS OUR NEW ASSIGNMENT—ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN."
...TO ALL THIS, HY JUST LISTENS —THOUGHTFULLY....
THE NEXT DAY, THE PAPERS CARRIED AN ACCOUNT OF THE STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE OF A HOSPITAL PATIENT AND HIS COMPANION— BUT IT MADE NO MENTION THAT—A CERTAIN YOUNG WOMAN TOURIST AND AN ABLE BODIED SEAMAN WERE AWAITING THE ARRIVAL OF THE S.S. "ZANABAR"
